Manson is still a loner in psychiatric unit

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Murder mastermind Charles Manson, who dreamed of living "like a burro in the desert, free and wild," today is living in a closed psychiatric unit at Vacaville State Prison—wild, mentally, but far from free.

The 39-year-old leader of the now-defunct "Manson Family" was transferred to the high-security mental-prison facility after being diagnosed as "showing some evidence of emotional psychiatric disturbance."

No visitors, except for an occasional curious attorney, come to talk with him, and most—if not all—of his one-time loyal "family" members have abandoned him. It was his "Svengali-like" influence over his followers, it was charged during his trials, that led to a series of individual and mass murders.

His hypnotic powers apparently disappeared when he was sent to prison — first San Quentin and then in 1972 to Folsom, where officials described him as a "loner" who rarely left his cell.

"He doesn't have any hypnotic hold on any of these inmates," Folsom officials said earlier this year when he was just another inmate in the 4-A adjustment center, the toughest lockup at Folsom.

Officials at Vacaville aren't as talkative about their notorious inmate:

"At the present time he is in one of the psychiatric treatment programs and will probably remain in that program for an indeterminate length of time. It's too early to make any prognostication as to the length of time or possible effectiveness of the therapy."

The 5-foot-6 Manson was transferred to Vacaville on recommendation of the Folsom staff, which "indicated he needed this type of treatment," officials say.

Officials are not talkative about their infamous inmate

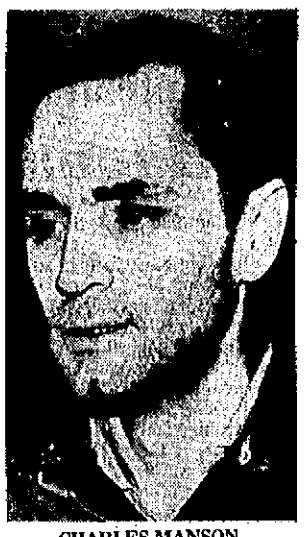

He is confined, they say, in a closed psychiatric unit along with 100 other inmates, similarly disturbed.

Although he doesn't "mix" with inmates at the psychiatric facility, he isn't alone in his confinement—most of his "family" members are in prisons across the state. All of those convicted of murder had been sentenced to die in San Quentin's gas chamber, but the sentences were commuted to life imprisonment because of the Supreme Court decision that the death penalty was unconstitutional.

— Robert Beusoleil was the first "Manson Family" member sentenced to die for the torture-murder of Topanga Canyon musician Gary Hinman. The murder, a week before the slaughter at the homes of actress Sharon Tate and market owner Leno LaBianca, was believed to have triggered the mass murders.

— Charles "Tex" Watson, one-time Texas athletic champion who turned to drugs and became Manson's right-hand man, is to spend the rest of his life in prison for the seven Tate-La Bianca murders and for the decapitation killing of ranch hand Shorty Shea.

Stark drama of shootout in evidence

Patty missed SLA fate 'by chance'

A web of evidence that runs through 138 pages of a Los Angeles Police report indicates that newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst and two of her fugitive Symbionese Liberation Army companions escaped death only by chance in the shootout with police that left six of their revolutionary pals dead.

Although only one witness identified the 20-year-old heiress as being in the house in Los Angeles before the May 17 shootout began, documents recovered by investigators indicate that she and William and Emily Harris were to rendezvous with other members of the revolutionary group.

The rendezvous point: the house in which the six died.

The chain of evidence begins when the SLA first surfaced in Los Angeles on May 16 when Miss Hearst and the Harris couple were involved in a shoplifting incident and shooting at an Inglewood sporting goods store.

The trio, after firing some 50 rounds of automatic weapon fire into the store front, fled in a red and white van. After a series of car thefts and kidnapings, the three disappeared from sight.

Police, however, recovered the van and in it—among other things—a parking citation issued by Los Angeles Police three days earlier in front of 833 W. 84th St. Some 12 hours later police raided the house only to find it had been abandoned by the SLA.

In addition to three suitcases containing gas masks, women's wigs, SLA literature, ammunition, a short-wave radio and medical supplies, FBI agents found several things they considered important:

—A worksheet divided into nine two-hour work periods.

—A grocery list for nine persons.

—Handwritten notations of ways to exit the house.

Doar impresses House panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Special Counsel John Doar Saturday presented to the House Judiciary Committee evidence for President Nixon's impeachment that he called "substantial and persuasive."

One member apparently persuaded by Doar's presentation was Rep. George Danielson, D-Calif., who emerged from the closed-door briefing to say, "I have no choice but to vote for impeachment."

Other members withheld comment on the vote they will cast in about a week, but there was general agreement that Doar and Minority Counsel Albert Jenner had put together an impressive documentary case.

"I think it is a very effective job they have done so far," said Rep. William Cohen, R-Maine, one of a half-dozen committee Republicans who say they have not yet decided how to vote.

Rep. David Dennis, R-Ind., a strong defender of Nixon, called Doar "a very effective advocate."

Nixon "worried out loud" about March 21 tape, House transcript reveals. Story on Page A-12.

At the same time, the President's staff made public a legal brief in which presidential lawyer James D. St. Clair sought to refute in detail a broad range of charges against Nixon.

A major part of it dealt with the questions of payments to Watergate defendant E. Howard Hunt Jr.

It cited an often-quoted remark by Nixon telling John W. Dean III: "Well, for C—— sakes, get it...." St. Clair argued this quote "obviously refers to Dean's suggestion that Hunt should be given some 'signal' and not money.

"Significantly, at no point in his testimony, either before the Senate Select Committee or before the grand jury, did even John Dean accuse the President of having authorized any payments to Hunt. Dean testified: 'The money matter was left very much hanging at that meeting. Nothing was resolved.'"

At the Judiciary hearing, members said Doar picked up where he left off Friday with a recital of events that he said placed Nixon in the center of a White House-directed plan to conceal the involvement of presidential aides in the Watergate cover-up.

"With respect to the plan," a transcript of Doar's opening remarks Friday shows him saying, "I say that decision came directly from the President or was implemented through his two closest associates, H.R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman.

"Following that, I say the President made the decision to Turkey claims Cypriot capital

Fighting rages across island

United Press International

Turkish land, air and sea forces invaded Cyprus Saturday and despite heavy fighting claimed capture of the capital of Nicosia within hours. The fighting across the Mediterranean island, which plunged the western alliance into its worst crisis since the 1956 Suez invasion, was greeted by a massive diplomatic effort to prevent full-scale war between Greece and Turkey.

But Greece told a Security Council meeting in New York that it, too, would send troops to Cyprus if the Turkish invaders continued to occupy Greek Cypriot areas.

All communications with the island—routed through Athens—were cut at about 2 p.m. PDT Saturday. But in Brussels, a NATO spokesman said fighting raged at the Nicosia airport and other areas into early today.

Nicosia Radio, still in the hands of the rebel government, said in an English-language broadcast at 8:45 p.m. PDT Saturday that the Turkish Air Force had attacked civilians and fired on a hospital in Famagusta on the island's east coast.

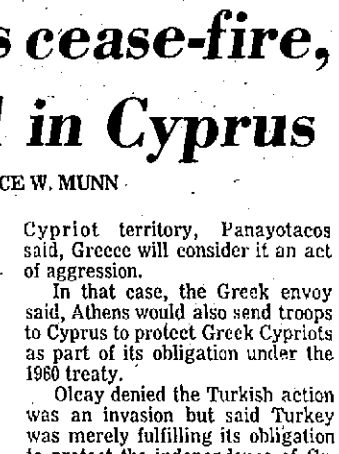

Although the rebel government had promised to protect civilians of all ethnic groups, "If the attacks on civilians continue, the government will not be bound by its promise," the radio said.

The United States ordered warships into the area to stand by for the evacuation of Americans, and U.S. paratroopers stationed in Italy were placed on alert as a precautionary measure. The Soviet Union denied Pentagon reports that Soviet troops had also been placed on alert. (Stories on Page A-6).

As Turkish paratroopers were dropped into Nicosia's Turkish quarters while other soldiers streamed ashore at the port cities of Kyrenia and Limassol, Turkish warplanes bombed installations of the Cypriot National Guard, which staged Monday's coup ousting President Archbishop Makarios. A Greek Cypriot radio station claimed nine Turkish planes shot down.

"Tonight I'll be in Ledra Street (the main street in Nicosia's Greek Cypriot quarter)," said 25-year-old Turkish private Selim Gavus, one of the paratroopers. "I'll have a bottle of whisky and I'll be dancing with two Greek girls. We have waited 11 years for this."

U.N. orders cease-fire, withdrawal in Cyprus

By BRUCE W. MUNN

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United Nations Security Council unanimously ordered a cease-fire in Cyprus Saturday and demanded withdrawal of all foreign troops from the Mediterranean island. Turkey and Greece did not immediately say if they planned to obey.

British Ambassador Ivor Richard, credited by U.S. envoy John Scali for engineering the resolution, approved 15-0, ended a four-hour meeting Saturday by putting two point-blank questions to the Turkish and Greek representatives:

—Did they intend to abide by the cease-fire?

—Would they, as guarantors with Britain of Cyprus' independence under a 1960 treaty, accept the British invitation to start talks immediately in London for the restoration of peace and constitutional government in Cyprus?

There was no reply from either Ambassador Osman Olcay of Turkey, whose air, sea and land troops hit the island early Saturday, or Constantine Panayotacos of Greece, whose 650 officers in the Cypriot national guard were charged with instigating last Monday's coup that overthrew Archbishop Makarios.

Panayotacos said the Greek government told the Turkish ambassador in Athens Saturday that Turkish military operations must be restricted to the Turkish Cypriot enclave in Cyprus. If the Turks continue to occupy Greek Cypriot territory, Panayotacos said, Greece will consider it an act of aggression.

In that case, the Greek envoy said, Athens would also send troops to Cyprus to protect Greek Cypriots as part of its obligation under the 1960 treaty.

Olcay denied the Turkish action was an invasion but said Turkey was merely fulfilling its obligation to protect the independence of Cyprus.

CYPRIOT Ambassador Zenon Rossides, loyal to Makarios, replied that it was odd to protect the integrity of a country by dropping bombs on it and shelling it.

Three members of a rival delegation sent by the rebel regime witnessed the debate from the visitors' gallery after the United Nations refused to accept their credentials.

Council President Javier Perez de Cuellar of Peru did not set a date for another meeting but implied another urgent session might be convened if the fighting is not stopped.

Greece had asked the urgent Security Council session after Turkey's invasion of the Mediterranean island.

But the resolution specified that among the foreign troops that must be withdrawn are the 650 Greek officers who led the National Guard in deposing Makarios.

Reward offered in Cerritos murder

SECRET WITNESS

It was shortly after 10 p.m. last May 11 when a passerby noticed the man slumped across the seat of a red Volkswagen parked at 19638 Sequoia Ave. in Cerritos. He approached to investigate, believing the occupant might be ill.

One glance at close range revealed that the man had been shot to death.

Sheriff's homicide detectives identifed the victim as Stephen Eugene Conner, 25, of 5191 Idywood Ave., La Palma. They further determined that robbery apparently was not the motive, since a substantial sum of money was found on the body.

Extensive investigation enabled detectives to establish that Conner had been shot at another location, then placed in the red VW—his own vehicle—and driven to the Sequoia Avenue location by one suspect, with another suspect following in a white Volkswagen. The suspects left Conner in his car and drove away.

From witnesses who saw the men before they drove away, investigators obtained a description of suspect No.1—the man who drove the white VW—as a white man about 18 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, about 140 pounds, with blond and bushy hair, almost shoulder length. He was wearing a white T-shirt.

Suspect No. 2 was described as a white male about 20 years old, 6 feet tall, 160 pounds, with dark brown wavy hair. He was wearing a colored T-shirt with an undetermined design on the front and Levis.

Secret Witness will pay $2,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderers of Stephen Eugene Conner.

If you have such information, call Secret Witness at 436-2526 between 8 a.m. and midnight on weekdays, or between 3 p.m. and 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Or write to: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

People in the news

Hannabelle just wouldn't die

Combined News Services

In a big back yard in suburban Bridgeton, Mo., romps a three-year-old female dog with an incredible will to live.

She is Hannabelle, part German shepherd, part pointer, survivor of attempts to kill her by starvation, hanging, strangulation and poisoning. Some of the efforts to kill her, if the story told by her onetime master were true, were incredibly cruel.

"I guess she must have an extra strong will to live," said Chris Cross, 14, of the dog she adopted from the Hannibal, Mo., animal shelter.

Shelter officials said a man had taken the dog to the agency in January, saying he was tired of trying to kill her.

Blanche Booker, shelter office manager at the time, said the man told her he tried to starve the animal by tying her to a tree and leaving her without food. Two weeks later the dog was alive, having eaten the bark from the tree.

Mrs. Booker said the man said he then hung the dog from a tree with a tire chain, but two days later she was still alive. He tried to strangle her with the chain, twining a hammer in the chain for extra leverage, but the animal refused to die.

"When I asked him why he tried to kill the dog, he just shrugged his shoulders and said he didn't want her any more," Mrs. Booker said.

The shelter took in the dog, but in March she developed distemper and officials decided she would have to be humanely destroyed. She was given a dose of a poison, sodium pentobarbital.

The next day she crawled out from a pile of dead dogs.

Dr. William Wommack, the veterinarian who nursed the dog back to health, said the animal was given enough of the poison "to kill two St. Bernards. It's a freak of nature that she survived."

Miss Cross, a high school student who works part-time for a veterinarian, adopted Hannabelle when the shelter decided to save the dog.

Hannabelle has since grown to 75 pounds from 45 pounds in March and romps in the family's large yard with a smaller pet dog.

"She's awful lovable and playful," Miss Cross said. "She's friendly with everybody. I guess that man (who tried to kill her) must have been sick."

Edsel

Edsel Bryant Ford II, the son of Ford Motor Co. Chairman Henry Ford II, will marry Cynthia Layne Neskow of Boston on Sept. 28 in Tequesta, Fla., her family has announced.

The couple has been unofficially engaged for several months and a formal announcement was made this weekend by Dr. and Mrs. Robert Savine Neskow of Tequesta. Dr. Neskow is an oral surgeon.

Young Ford, great-grandson of auto pioneer Henry Ford, has been working for the auto company as a product analyst in Dearborn since last January.

Rabbi

Rabbi Max Nussbaum, whose congregation included a number of Hollywood stars, died Saturday in Los Angeles of a heart attack. He was 66.

Nussbaum collapsed at dinner on Friday night and was taken to a hospital where he died Saturday morning.

He had been spiritual leader at Hollywood's Temple Israel since 1942. Actors, producers and directors — including Edward G. Robinson and Fanny Brice — were in his congregation.

He was a counselor to Sammy Davis Jr. during the singer's conversion to Judiasm and he accepted actress Elizabeth Taylor as a convert so she could marry singer Eddie Fisher.

Omitted

Atlanta Mayor Maynard Jackson has taken a stand for women's rights and refused to be included in the book "Men of Achievement" because it omitted women and represented "an insult to half of the world's population."

"Women such as (former Israeli Premier) Golda Meir, (Indian Prime Minister) Indira Ghandi, (Brooklyn Congresswoman) Shirley Chisholm and many others are certainly worthy of inclusion in your volume," Jackson wrote to Ernest Kay, general editor of "Men of Achievement" in Cambridge, England.

"I feel very strongly that all people must join together to eradicate all vestiges of discrimination against women," Jackson said.

Checker champ

Dr. Marion Tinsley, a Florida A & M mathematics professor, won the U.S. Open Checkers championship in Philadelphia Saturday, defeating Great Britain's Derek Oldbury in the final round.

Tinsley, of Tallahassee, Fla., captured the $1,000 tourney prize by winning one game and drawing two against the Devon, England, challenger.

Tinsley, who has lost only two games in 24 years of championship competition, held the U.S. title from 1955 to 1958, then retired and returned to play in 1970.

Prettiest

Miss Spain, 20-year-old Amparo Munoz, was named Miss Universe of 1974 early today in the Philippines.

The 5-foot-8, chestnut-haired beauty from Malaga cried as she walked down the runway before a worldwide television audience estimated in the millions. More than 8,000 persons attended the pageant at the Folk Arts Theater in Manila.

Miss Wales, hazel-eyed Helen Morgan, 21, a model who now lives in London and says she cannot speak Welsh, was declared first runnerup at the end of the two-hour telecast ending the competition among 65 beauties from around the world.

Others in the first five were: Miss Finland, Johanna Raunio, 19, of Helsinki, second runnerup; Miss Colombia, Ella Cecilia Escandon, 20, of Bucaranmanga, third runnerup; and Miss Aruba, black-eyed Maureen Ava Vieira, 18, of Organgestad, fourth runnerup. Miss U.S.A., Karen Morrison of St. Charles, Ill, was among the 12 semifinalists.

Miss Munoz is the first Spanish girl to win the title in the 23 years of the pageant competition, which until 1972 was held only in the United States. Margie Morgan of the Philippines won in 1973.

Bankrupt

Bill Bonanno, 41, son of onetime, reputed New York underworld chief Joseph "Joe Bananas" Bonanno, has filed for bankruptcy and charged that he is harassed by the Internal Revenue Service.

The deposition, filed in U.S. District Court in San Jose late Friday, said young Bonanno had assets totaling $6,000. The IRS alleges he owes $225,000 in back taxes.

Bonanno was released in March from Terminal Island Federal Prison after serving three years of a five-year sentence for perjury, conspiracy, mail fraud, attempted extortion and concealing ownership of a home on New York's Long Island. The Bonannos were the subject of a book on the Mafia by Gay Talese entitled, "Honor Thy Father."

Sebastian

Veteran actor Sebastian Cabot, hospitalized after a stroke earlier this week, is unable to speak, hospital authorities said Saturday in Victoria, B.C.

A medical spokesman said the right side of Cabot's body has been affected, but he refused to detail the extent of impairment. The 55-year-old actor's condition was listed as satisfactory.

An American, Cabot is well-known for his role as the good-natured, bearded butler, "Mr. French," in the television series, "Family Affair." He also appeared in "The Three Musketeers" and "Checkmate."

Conductor

Today's national broadcast by the Mormon Tabernacle Choir will be the last directed by Richard P. Condie, 76, who retires after 17 years as conductor.

Condie also served as assistant conductor 23 years with the 375-voice choir.

Sunday was to be the 2,344th live, nationwide broadcast of "Music and the Spoken Word."

Worst of illness over for Franco

MADRID, Spain (AP) — Spain's ailing leader Gen. Francisco Franco appeared on Saturday to have pulled back from a near-fatal medical crisis.

Nevertheless, the 81-year-old general faced a long recovery, and it was uncertain whether he could ever resume his powers as chief of state, which he temporarily handed over on Friday to Prince Juan Carlos de Borbon, the man he has chosen to become Spain's next king.

Doctors said Saturday that Franco had passed "the acute period" after suffering an intestinal hemorrhage while being treated for an inflamed vein in his thigh. They also reported for the first time that Franco had suffered thrombophlebitis, or clotting, in his leg.

Franco entered a Madrid clinic on July 9 for treatment of phlebitis, his most serious hospitalization in 35 years of rule.

Despite the clotting, the seven doctors attending Franco said in a medical bulletin that the generalissimo exercised his leg, took food normally and had normal blood and venous pressure. A visitor reported earlier that Franco reluctantly got out of bed and walked about his room on doctor's advice.

The latest bulletin said nothing about Franco's recuperation. A Madrid newspaper reported, however, that "the relapse of Friday has been overcome and a slow period of recuperation has begun."

The 36-year-old prince, named by Franco five years ago to succeed him, visited the general again on Saturday. He had been at Franco's bedside when he made Juan Carlos acting chief of state until Franco is able to reclaim the title.

Political observers in Spain considered Juan Carlos's assumption of chief of state functions, even if only temporary, a giant step toward the end of Franco's reign. Juan Carlos also becomes head of the Spanish armed forces.

In past years, the government has taken great precautions to obscure information about the general's health. Medical reports of the last two days, however, put the country on notice that the end of the era that began during the Spanish Civil War was drawing near.

Nixon tapes on stage— but will Peoria like it?

PEORIA, Ill. (AP) — Will it play in Peoria?

A play called "The Nixon Tapes," taken from the Watergate transcripts, will be performed amid great fanfare here Sunday so its creator can tell how it will go over in Middle America.

"John Ehrlichman raised the question a long time ago, 'Will it play in Peoria?'" said Thomas Sharkey, 39, of Maywood, who created the play. "They were talking about one of their scenarios. And so we're going to find out."

"Peoria is the closest thing we have to Middle America, the real Middle America," said Sharkey.

The play opened in late June at a suburban Chicago theater and runs about 3½ hours including intermisions of 18½ minutes and 19 minutes — symbolizing gaps discovered in the White House tapes.

Sharkey says he plans to take "The Nixon Tapes" on a tour of college campuses this fall and may try to bring it to Broadway. However, he says it's not proper to say he wrote the play.

"I didn't write the play, the play was written by a man named Nixon, other men named Haldeman, Ehrlichman, Dean, Mitchell, Kleindienst, Peterson and so forth," he said. "These are the Watergate transcripts."

Sharkey said he edited the original White House tape transcripts, inserted his own expletives for those that had been deleted, then made revisions in the play when the House Judiciary Committee version of the tapes was released. The play is a tragedy, he said.

"It happens to be a very funny one, but that's unusual in a tragedy. There are some pretty funny tragedies," said Sharkey, a playwright and free lance writer.

Sharkey said he thinks the play is easier to digest than the transcripts themselves. However, he said he miscalculated when he made up his own expletives for those originally deleted in the White House transcripts. The House Judiciary version showed the President using stronger language than the play, he said.

"I underguessed," he said.

Manson in psychiatric unit

—Steve Grogan, 20, also known as Clem Tufts, sentenced to life imprisonment for two killings—the Shea and Hinman murders.

—Bruce Davis, the bearded, crew-cut newcomer to the Family, sentenced to death for the Hinman murder.

—Kenneth Como, 32, Manson's first link with the prison racist gang, the Aryan Brotherhood, and prison inmate for most of his life, is in jail again on an assortment of charges—the latest a robbery of a gunshop in an attempt to free Manson from jail.

—Dennis Rice, 29, a comparative newcomer to Manson's clan, was jailed for getting caught up in the Family's plan to twist a prosecution witness' mind by feeding her a hamburger laced with LSD.

—Laurence Bailey, 23, also known as Larry Jones, was convicted of aiding in the attempted robbery of a Hawthorne war-surplus store, in search of guns to aid in the anticipated Manson escape.

Of Manson's girl followers, all are either in prisons or scattered across country and being sought.

Only one—Linda Kasabian, the girl who turned state's evidence against the Family in the sensational Tate-La Bianca murder trial—is free. She is reported to be traveling from hippie commune to commune, but has never "surfaced" since the trial ended more than three years ago. ...

—Mary Brunner, Manson's first Family member and mother of his child, took her master's degree in library science with her when she joined the hippie leader in his wanderings across the state. She is now in prison serving a 10-to-life term for two armed robberies, including the one which would have aided Manson to escape.

—Catherine "Gypsy" Share, the violin virtuoso who fiddled while Manson played with his "Family" at their Spahn Ranch home in Chatsworth, is imprisoned for the same two robberies. She was also convicted for her part in salting the LSD hamburger.

—Two others—Nancy "Squeaky" Pitman, 24, and Lynnette "Sandy" Fromme, also 24—were arrested and convicted in Northern California in the deaths of a young couple with whom they lived for a while. The two were arrested with three ex-convicts, all linked to the Aryan Brotherhood.

PATRICIA KRENWINKEL

— But Manson's most "famous" girls—Susan Atkins, 26; Patricia Krenwinkel, 27, and Leslie Van Houten, 25, who were convicted with him for the seven Tate-La Bianca murders—are together at the California State Prison for Women at Frontera. At the time the three were sentenced, they were the youngest women ever to receive the death penalty in California—and they were ready to die for their charismatic chief.

Today—after three years in prison—apparently the thrill has gone.

"They're not necessarily anti-Manson," Paul Fitzgerald, the leading defense attorney in the case, maintains, "but I think they've finally detoxified—redeemed their sanity—and are no longer 'followers'.

"In fact," the Beverly Hills attorney says, "they have a hard time explaining their previous conduct, except to say they were out of their senses."

The three, along with two other of Manson's former "girls"—Miss Share and Miss Brunner—are confined to a special concrete "pillbox" built for them at the prison when they were under the death sentence. But, despite abolition of their death sentences by the Supreme Court, they remain in the special unit and are not allowed to mix with the general prison population.

"The prison is a very progressive place," Fitzgerald maintains. "It resembles a campus, with grassy areas, etc., and the inmates wear their own clothes and use the telephones when they want.

"But with the Manson girls everything is different. They've got them in this special concrete place and hired special security personnel. It's very depressing and doesn't help rehabilitate them."

FITZGERALD, who quit his job as the county's top public defender to represent Miss Krenwinkel at the marathon trial, maintains officials are afraid to place the trio "on campus" because of a possible escape and because of a mass of letters following the trial demanding that the girls be given "no special favors" and be "under constant surveillance."

Although the five Manson girls were in their own "world" at the prison and, in the past, had been ready to "do anything" for each other, a rift developed.

Miss Share and Miss Brunner brought a new "leader" with them when they entered prison. They had rejected the jailed Manson and had decided that Como—the perennial prisoner—was their new god. Susan Atkins, who had been rejected in prison by her two fellows, joined them in their militant stand.

Fitzgerald says Miss Krenwinkel and Miss Van Houten have turned into "model prisoners, hoping to advance themselves and not talking about getting out."

The others, he says, "just want to do their time."

THE TWO "model prisoners" meanwhile are taking University of California extension courses, writing short stories and articles about their pre-Manson lives, painting (Miss Krenwinkel won first prize in a prison contest, and both are selling their paintings at the facility's gift shop) and embroidering—something they learned to do with proficiency when they were with Manson.

"They've embroidered a huge, playful dragon—it's about 6 feet long by 3 feet wide—and each scale, and there are 400 of them, took the two of them three hours to do," the attorney says. "It's incredible."

The attorney says the dragon was appraised at $1,500 and the two girls wanted to enter it in the State Fair but feared the repercussion of adverse publicity.

The two girls, Fitzgerald says, have reverted to the time before they knew Manson and are visited frequently by their parents.

Miss Atkins, like Manson, however, has no visitors.

"Susan really has no one," the attorney says. "Some young guy visits her once in a while, but her family has never seen her. She never had much love in her life."

Manson—in an interview in February of 1970—maintained it was only people like Susan and him that went to prison:

"Most people that go to jail—and society doesn't understand this—are generally people who have no one on the outside to help them—and I'm one."

The attorney general of the state of California disagrees.

In a report on "Terrorism in California" Evelle Younger points out that Manson and members of the Aryan Brotherhood are getting help from outside prison.

"WHEN MANSON knew he was going to prison, he looked around for a prison gang that he could join," Younger contends. "He had his girls send letters to members of the Aryan Brotherhood and nude photographs in an attempt to influence them...The followers of Charles Manson have become associated with the Aryan Brotherhood."

The attorney general points out that two former members of Manson's clan are now living in Sacramento and one of the Manson girls attempted to see Manson at Folsom Prison but was denied admittance.

Said the attorney general:

"Because of their past activities and their potential for violence, members of the Manson clan could become involved in a terrorist plot to free Manson...or other members of the Aryan Brotherhood..."

And here's where Manson would disagree.

He had no help escaping from several institutions—beginning with Boys' Town and ending with the federal prison on Terminal Island.

In an interview while he was on trial for the Tate-La Bianca murders, Manson talked of escape:

"You know, they left a window open in the day room for me to escape. If I had stuck my head out, it would have been blown off.

"I'll pick my own time and place..."

Householders protest strike-caused outages

Combined News Services

Fifty angry residents, whose electrical power is off, staged a brief sit-in Saturday outside the room where negotiations resumed in the Department of Water and Power strike in Los Angeles

"We're out there roasting to death, everybody has rotten food and we're sitting there with children that are sick and people that are ill and we've decided they're not going to play games with us," said Janice Spietzer, one of the protesters.

"NEITHER the DWP or the union has the right to cause us not to have power and to cause me to lose $400 or $500 of food to date," said John Borer, who said he had a wife and nine children.

"I'm really not concerned personally as to the dispute or the battle between the union and the department, but I am concerned about that dispute causing that much disruption in my life and the lives of my family," he said.

The protesters are from an area in Woodland Hills where about 800 homes are without power, a DWP spokesman said. They asked to see a representative of Mayor Bradley and sat down outside the negotiating sessions on the 15th floor of the DWP building.

Invited into an adjoining room, they met briefly with a Bradley aide and later left.

DETAILS of the negotiations which continued late Saturday were not announced. "I don't know what's happening, but it's a good indication they're continuing so late," a department spokesman said.

An estimated 12,000 homes were without power Saturday, and officials said the impact could spread rapidly if the dispute was not settled soon.

Striking workers have asked for a 12 per cent pay hike while the department has offered eight per cent.

The strike started Wednesday. The unions have about 5,000 members, andthe DWP employs about 11,500 persons.

Several unsuccessful attempts were made to storm into a room where a state mediator was trying to bring the three striking unions together with DWP management.

Tom Vitich, the mediator, told the homeowners they were only making matters worse.

"All this (demonstrating) is detering what I'm trying to do," he said when he came out to talk with them.

Eight hours of negotiations Friday made no headway.

DWP general manager Robert V. Phillips called on strikers to restore service where equipment failures have blacked out homes and businesses.

"We are negotiating in good faith to end this strike," Phillips said. "Service should be restored as soon as possible to all customers who are without power, regardless of what caused the outage."

UNION officials said they would continue their policy of restoring power only where emergency and hospital facilities are affected.

L.B. weather expected to stay sunny, near 90

Flash-flood warnings have been issued for canyons and washes in Southern California mountain and desert areas, but the rest of the Southland should have few surprises from today's weather, forecasters said.

Continued variable clouds and a warm, mostly sunny day are due in coastal areas, National Weather Service meteorologists said.

Little change in temperature is expected, with a 90-degree high forecast for Long Beach, compared with a 93 reading Saturday.

Evidence bares drama of shootout

—Witnesses described two vans at the house—a red and white one and a faded blue one with curtains in its windows and damage to its left front. Both vans, the witnesses said, had been parked in front of the home during the week.

Less than three hours later two Newton Division officers spotted the vans parked less than a block away from where the SLA band finally died.

Within hours several anonymous callers pinpointed the SLA hideout and for the six there was no escape.

Initial intelligence reports claimed all nine were in the house, the report says.

Witnesses, police describe only as Jane or John Smith, claim that in the early morning hours of May 17, two men—one later identified as SLA leader Donald "Cinque" DeFreeze and William Wolfe, whom Miss Hearst later described in a taped message as "the only man I ever really loved"—kept looking out the front win dows, apparently waiting for their three missing companions.

THE THREE never came—but the police did.

The report, for the first time, gives a comprehensive picture of what happened in the house the day of the shootout through the eyes of witnesses.

Four of the witnesses were in the house drinking beer and wine when DeFreeze knocked on the door. It was 4 a.m., and DeFreeze claimed that he and his friends were stranded and needed a place to stay. He offered $100 to let them stay in the house. It was accepted.

One of the witnesses said he helped the man, who identified himself as "Cinque," unload two vans of weapons and ammunition. It took 20 minutes, he said, to store the weapons in the kitchen and then he volunteered to show Cinque where he could hide the vans.

AT THE man's suggestion, Cinque parked the vans at the rear of a partially boarded-up, two-story apartment house. However, unknown to the revolutionary, the location was a well-known drop spot for stolen cars—a spot routinely checked by police.

Three of the women witnesses maintained it didn't take long for them to begin worrying about the arsenal of guns, the bottles filled with gasoline and the ammunition that surrounded them. As their anxiety grew, they said, they began drinking and consuming "nerve pills."

SLA members' anxiety apparently increased also.

"Trish, we got to get out of here, it's getting too hot," Cinque was heard to say five hours before the shooting began.

ASKED BY one of the witnesses what he was doing in Los Angeles, the SLA field marshal maintained he and his followers had come to start a revolution and "get the police." He later added that one of the reasons he had come to the south land was to search for his wife and six children.

SLA members, apparently reluctant to leave the small two-bedroom home in which they felt they had found refuge, sent their new-found friends on errands for food, etc., only to find many times they would not return.

One of the witnesses was sent—with $500—to buy a new van for the group. He never returned.

ANOTHER witness—the 10th to enter the SLA occupied house—told police she went because of her "curiosity and sympathy for the SLA."

She told police that Cinque told her that his real name was Donald DeFreeze and that he was the leader of the SLA. As they discussed the group's "mission" the woman said Cinque told her that he was in Los Angeles to fight for the rights of needy people and to help them exsat in this world.

He wanted to utilize whites and blacks to fulfill his mission, she said, explaining that by using rich white girls he could convince them to seek financial help from their fathers and the SLA would use the money. He maintained, she said, that he had used Patty Hearst in this manner and that she was now a member of his army and one of his children, as were all white girls fighting with him.

CINQUE, she said, knew that police were in the neighborhood but maintained that his children would fight to the death.

"I know I am going to die and all my people know that they will also, but we are going to take a lot of ... pigs with us," Cinque is quoted as saying.

Although the escapee from Vacaville State Hospital was drinking wine the long hours before the shootout began, he was not drunk, she said.

However, as police began to close in quietly, the witnesses began disappearing just as quietly. When the first bullhorn warning boomed through the small house—"Come out with your hands up. Comply immediately and you will not be harmed."—only three witnesses remained, and one had passed out from pills and liquor.

After the second warning, an 8-year-old boy came slowly out of the house.

IT TOOK two more warnings before another adult witness came out the door and into the arms of police.

The third came out when she awakened and found that the house was engulfed in flames.

But all three survived.

Two others—both charter members of the cyanide-bullet army—crawled from the flaming structure in the final moments of the shootout and didn't fare as well.

Both were killed.

The final desperate attempt by Nanci Ling Perry, 26, and Camilla Hall, 29, to "take some pigs with us" was described for the first time in the police report:

"THE HOUSE was totally engulfed in flames and members of the SWAT (Special Weapons and Tactics) Team ... were receiving automatic weapon fire from air vents in the foundation of the house.

"... Nancy Ling Perry, wearing military fatigues and a hunting knife attached to a web belt, came out of a crawl hole ... She crawled away from the house. When she was approximately 10 feet away ... Camilla Hall ... emerged from the crawl hole. She was firing an automatic pistol towards members of the SWAT Team. Automatic weapon fire still was coming from the crawl hole behind her.

"SWAT TEAM members fired ... she dropped to the ground ... and was dragged back through the crawl hole out of view.

"Nancy Ling Perry then turned and fired a revolver towards the SWAT team ... they returned the fire towards the crawl hole—from which automatic weapon fire was still coming—and at her. She fell to the ground.

"SWAT team members continued to return weapon fire toward the crawl hole until the automatic weapon fire ceased ... and no further weapon fire was coming from the house.

"At 1858 hours, the walls and roof of the house collapsed and ammunition could be heard exploding within ..."

NINETEEN firearms, including fully automatic M1 rifles, pistols and shotguns were recovered from the burned structure, the report said. The machine guns used by the revolutionary group were not military conversions, ballistics experts maintain, but were done by a person who had some basic knowledge of machine shop operations and an above average knowledge of the M1 carbine.

The location of the bodies, the experts said, indicated they had shifted their position to the subfloor level—a tactic consistent with most guerrilla manuals. The concrete foundation of the house provided a bunker and the crawl hole and vents supplied the air.

"In the eyes of the SLA," the police department report maintains, "it was a war."

Hoffa in L.A. over kidnaping

DETROIT (AP) — Former Teamsters President Jimmy Hoffa flew to Los Angeles Saturday to try to talk to a man arrested for the abduction of the teen-aged son of a former Detroit fire commissioner, Hoffa's son says.

Charles L. O'Brien, Hoffa's adopted son, said the longtime union boss is an old friend of Robert Adell, whose 16-year-old son Lawrence has been missing since June 1.

Hoffa is also an acquaintance of Angelo Inciseo, a former union official from Chicago, who was arrested in connection with the abduction.

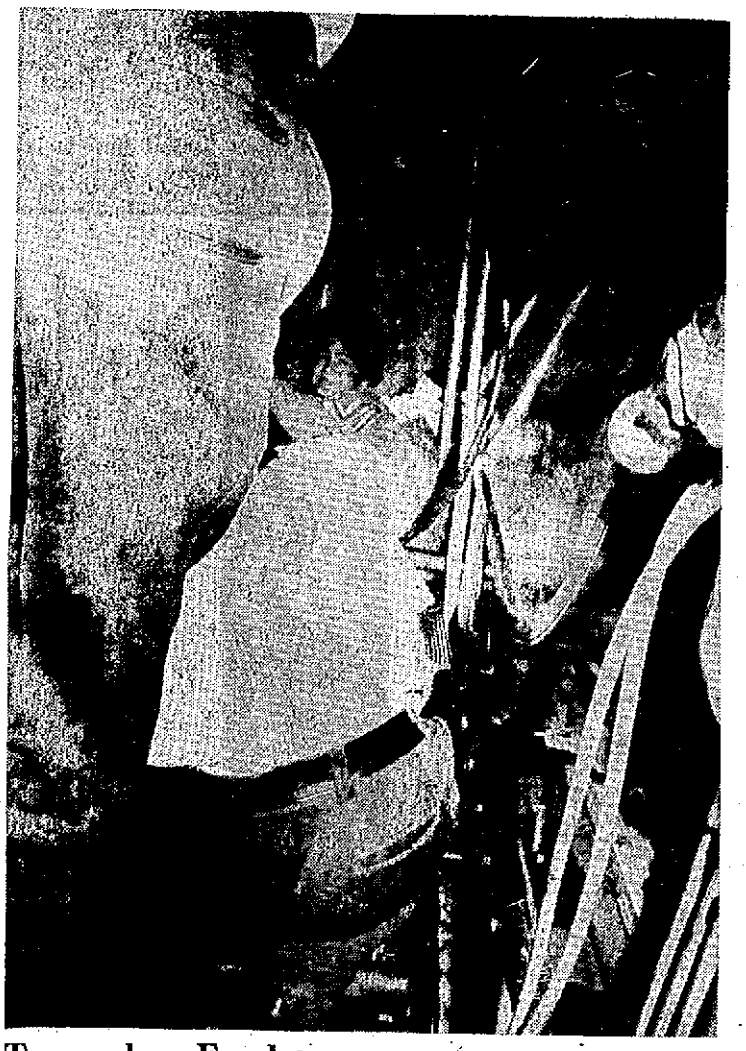

THE ELDER Adell has deposited a total of $400,000 in three separate ransom drops, O'Brien said, but the money has never been picked up.

Inciseo, 61, was picked up on July 14, along with convicted bank robber Hugh M. Pheaster, 41, of Long Beach, said the FBI.

O'Brien said Hoffa knew Inciseo when he was president of Chicago local 286 of the United Industrial Workers Union.

Hoffa left Detroit early Saturday to "try to talk to Angelo," said O'Brien. He said Hoffa would attempt to see Inciseo in jail "and try to talk some sense into him."

Hoffa's trip to offer aid to the Adell family "was his own idea," said his son, and comes one day after a federal judge ruled in Washington that he cannot seek union office until 1980 under terms of clemency set by President Nixon.

Trapped on Escalator

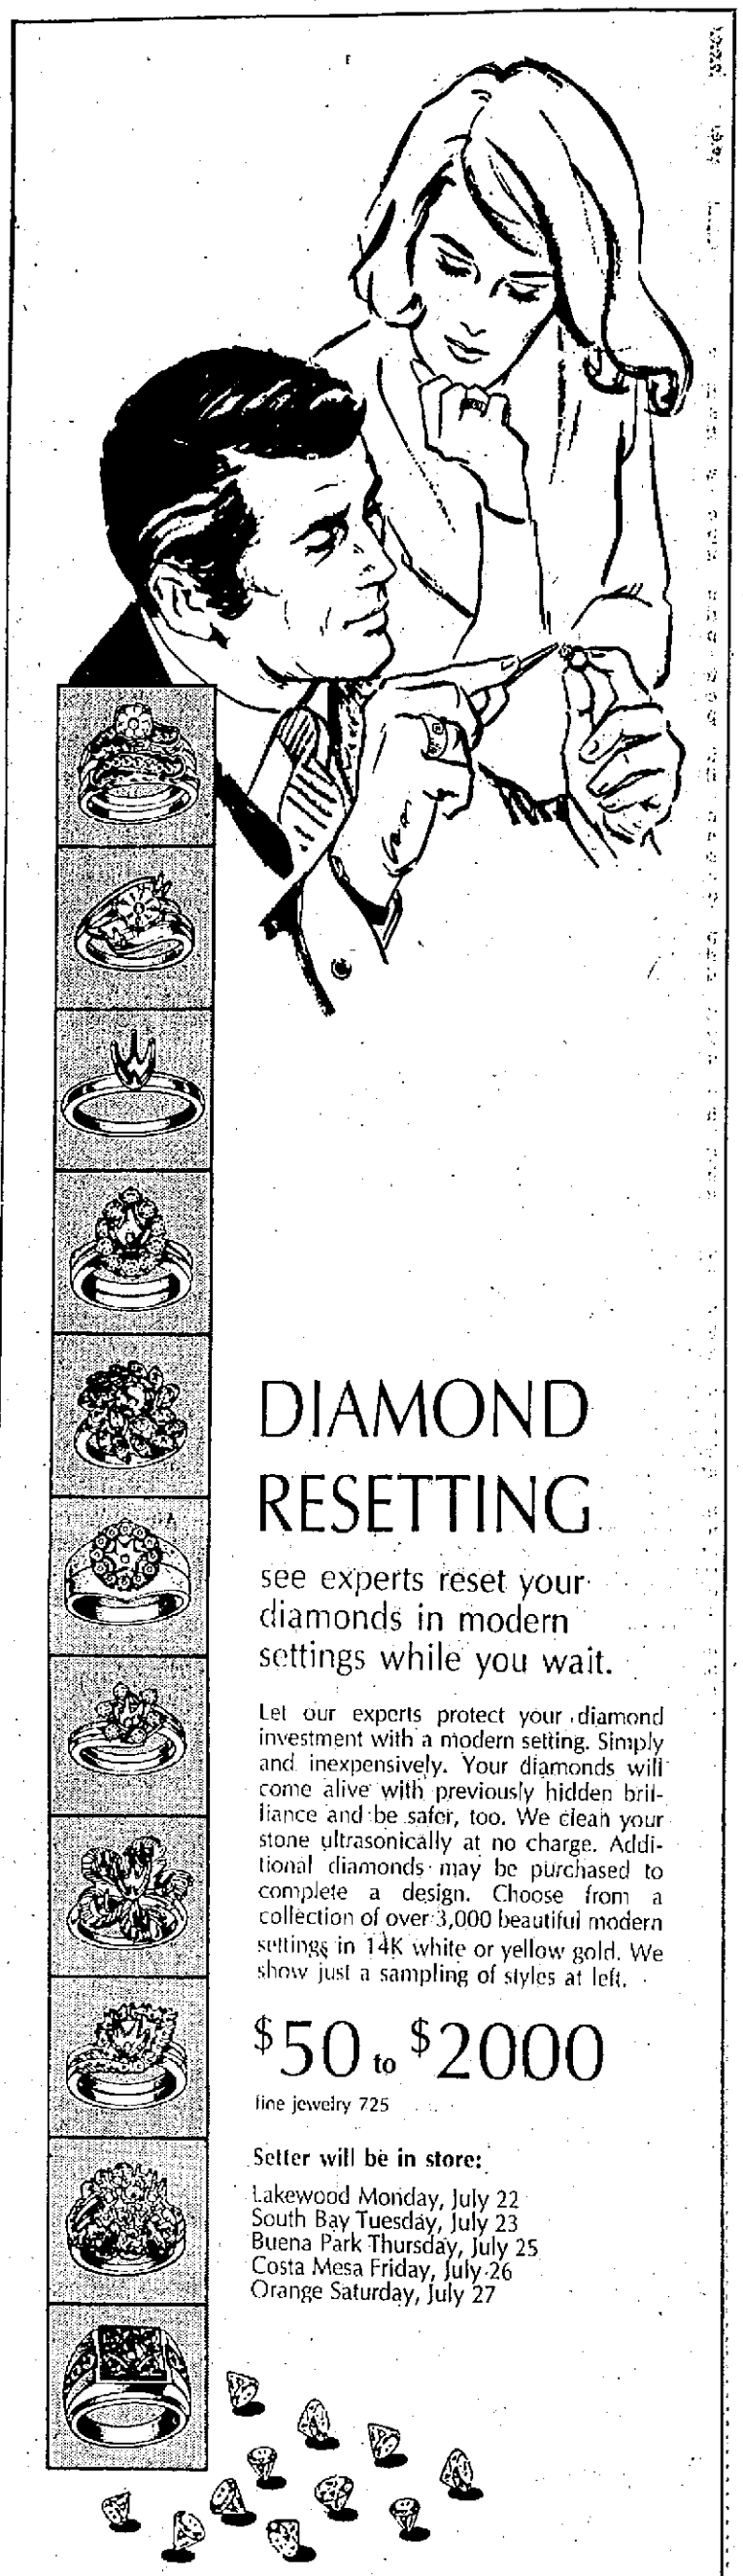

Karolyn Navarro, 20 months old, cries in pain as firemen try to extract her foot from the space between escalator steps and side paneling. Karolyn was in the May Co. in Lakewood Shopping Center going from the first floor to the basement with her mother, Lillian Navarro, when she got stuck. After the 90-minute ordeal, the girl was taken to Doctors Hospital in Lakewood and treated for a three-inch cut on her left ankle and severe bruises. She remained in the hospital for observation, a spokesman said.

Inflation worse than expected; 10% rise seen

By G. DAVID WALLACE

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government economists expected the first half of the year to be bad, and it was.

But inflation and real production were even worse than expected. There is concern that the expected second-half recovery might not be enough to balance the losses.

Here's how the economy's performance stacks up with original projections:

—Gross national product, the nation's total output of goods and services, was originally expected to rise 8 per cent without allowing for inflation. So far, the increase has been at a 6 per cent annual rate.

—Inflation, as figured into the gross national product computations, was expected to be 7 per cent over the year. However, the increase for the first half when projected over the year would be 10 per cent.

—On the brighter side, employment was expected to peak at about 6 per cent and average about 5.5 per cent for the year. The rate so far hasn't gone above 5.2 per cent, and the average is just below that.

After allowance for erosion of the dollar due to inflation, the real output of the economy declined for the entire first half of the year.

Six months ago, the President's Council of Economic Advisers forecast: "The situation at the beginning of the year does not appear to presage any long or severe slowdown."

The council is still projecting a slight gain in real output, but other enonomists are more guarded.

"Slow and improving growth is expected, but the pattern of that growth will probably not attain the level that was expected," said Sidney L. Jones, top deputy to the President's economic coordinator.

"This will result in little, if any, growth," he said. "And we probably will not have any growth for the year as a whole, given the sharpness of the first-quarter drop."

The administration contends the first-half drop was "an energy crisis spasm" that shouldn't carry over into the final six months.

However, Courtenay M. Slater, an economist with Congress' Joint Economic Committee, argues that inflation was more broadly based than that and the increases still working their way through the economy.

"THE FACT THAT we now have no wage policy and incomes policy to deal with this problem is unfortunate," she said.

The administration approach is to maintain tight budget and fiscal controls and "not lose our nerve," as Herbert Stein, departing chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers, has urged.

But a major factor of uncertainty in the second half of the year to both administration and independent economists is the possibility of crippling strikes. Contract negotiations covering two million workers in vital industries such as coal, ocean shipping, construction and nonferrous metals are scheduled.

In the first three months of the year, according to the government, settlements in the steel, can, aluminum and other major industries averaged a 6.9 wage and benefits increase during the first year of the contract and a 5.9 per cent gain over the life of the contract. Those figures are lower than the average annual gain in any of the past six years.

But real earnings as measured by the Labor Department are 4.5 per cent lower than a year ago because of inflation, and strike activity has been increasing.

Who has what at stake in Cyprus

By NICK LUDINGTON

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Every time the game of "Cyprus" is played, at least seven players sit down at the table.

Greece, Turkey, Turkish Cypriots, Greek Cypriots, Britain, the United States and the Soviet Union are the regulars.

Recently there has been a new player, invited by Greece—Greek Cypriots opposed to Archbishop Makarios.

What do the players want?

GREECE wants Cyprus. Annexation of the island, which has a four-fifths Greek Cypriot majority, to mainland Greece is an old Hellenic dream and much desired by the ruling junta.

TURKEY doesn't want Greece to have Cyprus.

Cyprus is only 45 miles from Turkey's southern coast, and Greek annexation would change the balance of power between the two uneasy NATO allies.

Turkey, secretly would like a healthy hunk of Cyprus for itself, in a physical partition of the island to give the one-fourth Turkish Cypriot minority secure boundaries against the alleged threat of persecution by the Greek Cypriots.

TURKISH CYPRIOTS want what Turkey wants. Both would settle for a form of federation in which Turkish Cypriots had substantial autonomy in the areas they inhabit, scattered all over the island.

ANALYSIS

ANTI-MAKARIOS Greek Cypriots want what Greece wants — union with Greece.

PRO-MAKARIOS Greek Cypriots pay lip service to union with Greece. But they really like their nonaligned independence, particularly since the military took over in Athens.

BRITAIN wants its sovereign military bases on Cyprus but despite its responsibilities as former colonial power and guarantor of the island's independence, does not want a lot of fuss and expense.

Britain is a guarantor with Turkey and Greece according to the London and Zurich agreements which set up the Cyprus republic in 1960.

THE U.S. wants the Russians out. It wants the British bases on the strategically placed island secure because they are used for NATO purposes.

RUSSIA wants in. In 1964 and 1967 the Russians screamed when Turkey threatened to kick out Makarios, who has always kept good ties with the Communist bloc.

This time Moscow is cooing with satisfaction at Turkey's invasion to return Cyprus' duly elected president to his position.

Kissinger sees hope of negotiation on Cyprus

By FRANCES LEWINE

SAN CLEMENTE (AP) —Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger expressed optimism Saturday that the Turkish government will agree to join in negotiating sessions in London with Greek officials to settle the Cyprus crisis.

He reported that Greece was prepared to accept negotiation if there is a cease-fire on the island.

The road to negotiation is open, Kissinger said, and has the support of the United States and the European community.

Kissinger voiced public assurances that there was no question of any confrontation with the Soviet Union in the area and that Soviet actions have been low-key and unprovocative.

With Undersecretary of State Joseph L. Sisco shuttling between Athens and Ankara, Kissinger said the U.S. was doing its utmost to promote immediate negotiations to end the Cyprus conflict.

The secretary of state spoke at a news conference at the Western White House.

Meanwhile, the Pentagon alerted an 800-man Army paratroop battalion in Italy as about a dozen U.S. warships, including the carrier Forrestal, steamed toward Cyprus to evacuate Americans, if necessary.

The two actions were described as "prudent, precautionary measures" in case evacuation is required. They said there is no intention to intervene militarily between Greeks and Turks.

Affected by the alert was the 1st Battalion 509th Infantry, at Vicenza, Italy. "The unit has not moved and has no orders to move," the Pentagon said. "It is simply in a higher state of readiness than normal."

Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger monitored the situation in the Pentagon Command Center and the Joint Chiefs of Staff met to review the situation.

But no major alerts were ordered for U.S. forces, and Pentagon officials did not appear worried by what they had earlier reported to be an alert of seven Soviet airborne divisions. The Soviet official news agency Tass later denied there was any alert of Soviet troops.

DEFENSE authorities appeared to believe the Turkish invasion may be a limited one, designed to establish a presence before moving toward serious negotiations to settle the long-standing problem of the island's rule and the welfare of the Turkish minority.

U.S. sources estimated that the Turks put about 5,000 men into Cyprus, including several hundred paratroopers. They said the landing was not followed by any large-scale reinforcement.

There have been reports that U.S.-made military equipment was being used in the Cyprus fighting. Kissinger emphasized that while the crisis lasts, there will no U.S. weapons supplied to either of the NATO allies.

WITH THE news that the Turkish troop-carrying craft were headed for the beach on Cyprus, Kissinger conferred with Nixon by telephone. The President then dispatched early morning messages to leaders of Greece and Turkey, urging restraint and expressing extreme disappointment that military means had been used before diplomatic efforts were exhausted.

Both Greece and Turkey are members of NATO. Ankara, however, is considered much less responsive to American pressure than the Greek military dictatorship in Athens.

Soviets call for Makarios return

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union called Saturday night for the withdrawal of "all foreign troops" from Cyprus in order to restore the "legitimate" government of President Makarios.

The statement specifically demanded withdrawal of the Greek officers of the national guard who deposed Archbishop Makarios in a military coup on Monday.

"It is necessary, to enable the legitimate government of the Republic of Cyprus headed by President Makarios to fully implement their power, to remove immediately from the island all Greek servicemen," the Soviets said.

"The position of Cyprus as an independent and sovereign state which existed before the military interference of Greece must be restored."

The statement concluded that every peace-loving state should try to "ensure withdrawal from Cyprus of all foreign troops."

The Kremlin made no direct criticism of the Turkish invasion of Cyprus on Saturday, but it said "the Soviet government believes the situation now strongly requires quick and effective action."

Arabs on alert in Cyprus siege

BEIRUT (NYT) — Syria has placed its armed forces in a maximum state of alert while the Egyptian navy has been instructed to stay close to Egyptian shores after the Turkish invasion of Cyprus Saturday, according to informed Arab press spokesmen here.

Syrian President Hafez al-Assad has canceled a scheduled visit to Yugoslavia to meet with President Tito.

Jackson warns on Russ in Cyprus

CHICAGO (UPI)—Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., said Saturday the United States must find a solution to Cyprus that will keep the Soviet Union from gaining a naval base there.

At a taping session for Chicago raduo station WBBM's At Issue program, Jackson described Greece and Turkey as "NATO's soft underbelly" and said some way must be found to "keep NATO's structure credible."

When the Turks hit Cyprus...

By MICHAEL KEATS

NICOSIA (UPI)—The crackle of a Russian-made AK47 and the scream of Turkish jets heralded the start of the Turkish invasion of Cyprus for Nicosia at dawn Saturday.

Jumping from their beds at 5 a.m., citizens could see waves of American-built F105 warplanes striking at Nicosia Airport.

Prop-driven C130 Hercules transport planes dropped paratroopers about five miles north of the city.

UNITS OF the Greek National Guard, stationed on the roof of the Ledra Palace Hotel near the dividing line of the Greek and Turkish communities, fired their AK47 automatic rifles in frustration.

The radio blared the news. The feared invasion by Turkey had begun.

Greek National Guard vehicles and troops sped to defend the Greek section of the city waving all cars off the streets.

"We have been waiting 11 years for this", said Pvt. Selim Gavus. He said he would be dancing with Greek girls and drinking whiskey in the Greek sector of Nicosia Saturday night.

At the Ledra Palace Hotel, no one was in a mood to talk.

One soldier crashed back from a ground floor window clutching a bullet-shattered arm.

One of his buddies had been killed earlier, and two others injured.

One of the girl receptionists burst into tears as the soldier lay groaning.

"This is dreadfull. Where will it end?" she sobbed.

No one could tell her. For Pvt. Selim Gavus there was no dancing in Nicosia Saturday night.

On Scene in Athens

Mediation upset by invasion

By DAVID BINDER
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON — A high State Department official said Saturday: "What concerns us is not just the intervention from Turkey but the likelihood of another intervention from Greece."

U.S. officials said that Joseph J. Sisco, undersecretary of state for political affairs, apparently was informed of the invasion decision about 8:20 p.m.(PDT), presumably over an automobile radiotelephone, by Premier Ecevit while on his way to the Ankara Airport.

SISCO told his pilot to head for Athens, apparently in the hope of persuading the Greeks not to respond by invading Cyprus, too.

The news of the invasion reached the State Department shortly after midnight and Sisco was advised to hold off on his return to Athens. His plane was "flying about" without a geographic or political destination, according to a top U.S. official.

"We don't know yet what to do," the official said.

LATER, however, Sisco was instructed to fly on to Athens and his jet landed there at 10:45 p.m. (PDT).

Robert Anderson, the State Department spokesman, said this morning on behalf of the administration: "We regret this military action by Turkey just as we deplore the previous action by Greece that precipitated the crisis."

He said Secretary of State Kissinger and President Nixon were "in continuous touch" with American diplomats here and abroad on the crisis.

THE Anderson statement was the first in which the U.S. directly blamed Greece for engineering the Monday coup in Nicosia that ousted Archbishop Makarios as president of Cyprus.

The invasion by Turkey, while unpalatable to the U.S. and its mediation effort, may force the Nixon administration to take a firmer stance than it wanted to during the last five days. The policy enunciated by Kissinger up to Friday night was that the U.S. supported "the independence and territorial integrity of Cyprus and its constitutional arrangements."

THE STATE Department official, who has been privy to the week-long strategy sessions conducted by Kissinger on the Cyprus problem, noted that the well-armed Greek force on Cyprus, numbering 10,000 troops, faced about half that many Turks already stationed on the island before the Turkish landings.

U.N. won't give credentials to Cypriot envoy

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — The new Cypriot regime's chosen ambassador to the United Nations was denied accreditation and a Security Council hearing Saturday.

Loucis Papaphilippou attempted to present his credentials from the new Nicosia government that deposed Archbishop Makarios and expressed a desire to address the council in its current Cyprus debate.

REINECKE ARRIVES FOR PERJURY TRIAL
Motion for Directed Verdict of Acquittal Made

Reinecke denied mistrial motion

WASHINGTON (AP) —Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke's attorney argued Saturday that the government relied on an inaccurate hearing record in charging him with perjury and asked for a directed verdict of acquittal.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker denied a motion by defense attorney James E. Cox for a mistrial, but withhld until Monday morning a decision on his motion for an acquittal verdict.

At the same time, out of the hearing of the district court jury in the case, Parker voiced dissatisfaction with Cox's plans for the defense, if he denies the motion.

"I have allowed you to conduct this case without the presence of a local attorney," he told California lawyer Cox. "I will require the presence of one local attorney from this point on.

Cox has conducted Reinecke's defense by himself during the trial, which opened Monday. J. Joseph Donohue, Theodore Kligman and William E. Becker are Reinecke's local attorneys. They took part in pretrial proceedings but have been present only intermittently during the trial and have taken no part. Becker was on hand Saturday.

Parker did not elaborate but told Cox: "I am not going to allow you to make a travesty of this case."

He had expressed dissatisfaction with Cox's tentative list of defense witnesses, saying that it should be pared down and that it included persons whose probable testimony seemed remote from the perjury indictment.

"We are not going to have relitigation of the ITT antitrust case," he told Cox.

Reinecke is accused of giving false testimony to the Senate Judiciary Committee on April 19, 1972, about when he first talked to former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell about a financial pledge to help underwrite the 1972 Republican national convention in San Diego.

Richardson affidavit

Cox probe limited at start

By DAVID ROSENBAUM
New York Times Service

WASHINGTON—Elliot L. Richardson told the House Judiciary Committee last month that President Nixon had imposed restrictions on Archibald Cox's investigation even before Cox officially became special prosecutor.

In an affidavit, Richardson, the former attorney general, also said that Nixon had threatened to dismiss Cox several times before he actually ordered him discharged last October.

After former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew resigned, according to the sworn statement, the President said to Richardson: "Now that we have disposed of that matter, we can go ahead and get rid of Cox."

The affidavit was contained in a two-volume set of evidence compiled in the impeachment inquiry that was made public by the Judiciary Committee Saturday.

THE VOLUMES trace, in meticulous detail, the repeated efforts of Nixon —beginning in April 1973 —to impede the investigations of the special prosecutors and the Judiciary Committee.

No conclusions are drawn in the 102 "Statements of Information" that were prepared by the special impeachment counsel, John M. Doar. But Doar reportedly asserted in a closed committee hearing Friday that the evidence showed that the Watergate cover-up had never stopped and was, in fact, continuing right up to the present.

The volumes released Saturday also contain the transcript of a tape of a long conversation the President had in June 1973 in which he expressed concern that he might have made damaging statements at his March 21, 1973, meeting with H.R. Haldeman and John W. Dean III.

And the evidence raises doubts about Nixon's assertion that his April 15, 1973, meeting with Dean was accidentally not recorded.

LAST WEEK, the committee published seven volumes of evidence on the Watergate case starting with the events leading up to the June 17, 1972, burglary and carrying the case through April 30, 1973, when Haldeman, Dean and John D. Ehrlichman left the White house Staff.

The material published Saturday picks up where the earlier volumes left off.

As in the previously released evidence, there were few new disclosures in the two volumes. But the Richardson affidavit, published for the first time, provides an insight into the limits the President placed on Cox to keep him for obtaining all the data he wanted.

On May 22, 1973, Nixon announced that executive privilege would not be invoked "as to any testimony" in the Watergate case.

Richardson stated in his affidavit that three days later, just before he was sworn in as attorney general, the President told him that the word "testimony" had been used advisedly in the public statement and that the President would continue to claim executive privilege to prevent Cox for obtaining documents.

Neither the President nor Richardson told that to Cox, who became special prosecutor at the same time Richardson was sworn in and who had been assured that the White House would cooperate with his investigation.

The Richardson affidavit goes on to note that on two separate occasions in July 1973 the President or his chief of staff, Alexander M. Haig Jr., threatened to discharge Cox if he pursued certain matters involving the President's personal property and finances.

SIGHTSEERS Elliot Richardson and his wife, Anne, stroll through the Kremlin's Cathedral Square in Moscow during a visit to the Soviet capital. Richardson is in Russia at the government's invitation.

Apparent flaw in new transcript stirs furor

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — Responding to an apparent flaw in a new White House-edited transcript dated March 22, 1973, a spokesman said Saturday that President Nixon was referring only to newspaper speculation when he discussed an event that did not occur until the next day.

Several members of the House Judiciary Committee said in Washington that the apparent discrepancy in the 212-page transcript was the latest episode in a pattern of deception by the White House during the committee's 10-week impeachment investigation.

In the transcript, Nixon refers to a jail term prescribed for Watergate conspirator G. Gordon Liddy, who was not sentenced until March 23 — the day after the reported conversation.

"I can state categorically that this is the tape of March 22, 1973," said Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, insisting the transcript had not been tampered with.

Ziegler said that around Jan. 31, 1973, when the Watergate burglars were found guilty, the newspapers speculated they would get long sentences from U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica — sometimes known as "Maximum John."

Nixon's chief Watergate attorney, James D. St. Clair, gave the transcript to the committee Thursday at the end of his summation of arguments against impeachment.

The transcript records a conversation between Nixon and his former chief of staff, H.R. Haldeman.

Haldeman: "Liddy is enjoying—Liddy's in jail—he didn't stay out. He just said I want to start serving my term. And he's at Danbury (federal prison and thoroughly enjoying it. It's a little strange."

President: "That, uh, judge gave him 35 years."

It was not until March 23, the following day, that Judge John J. Sirica sentenced the Watergate conspirators.

DEAN BURCH
'Black Spot' in Law

Hearings partisan —Burch

Committee lawyers 'hired guns' of Demos, he claims

SAN CLEMENTE (UPI) — President Nixon's political adviser, Dean Burch, Saturday described the House Judiciary Committee impeachment proceedings as one of the "black spots in jurisprudence" and accused the panel's chief lawyers of serving as "hired guns" for the Democratic majority.

Burch made the comment at a news conference after discussing the impeachment situation with Nixon several times in the past few days. He said he felt confident in concluding that the President also considered the proceedings highly partisan and unfair.

His attack was much like one mounted Friday by Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler and appeared to reflect a new offensive strategy by the White House as the Judiciary Commitee prepared to vote this week on articles of impeachment.

THE WHITE HOUSE legal defense team released a 150-page brief earlier in the day that said no evidence has been presented to demonstrate wrongdoing sufficient to justify impeachment of the President.

Burch, echoing past White House complaints about the committee's closed door-investigation and the gradual publication of evidence, said the public now is witnessing "the reaping of a whirlwind whereby bad procedures are almost guaranteed to give you bad results."

Overall, Burch said, "the proceedings certainly must be one of the black spots in jurisprudence."

The White House official was particularly critical of John Doar, the committee's chief counsel, and minority Republican counsel Albert Jenner.

"WE'VE ALSO seen the phenomenon of the bipartisan, nonpartisan attorneys who have now disclosed themselves as hired guns of the Democratic majority, which in fact was their role all along as far as I'm concerned," Burch said.

He sharply criticized Doar for arguing in favor of impeachment before the commttee and called Jenner "a pale copy of Mr. Doar."

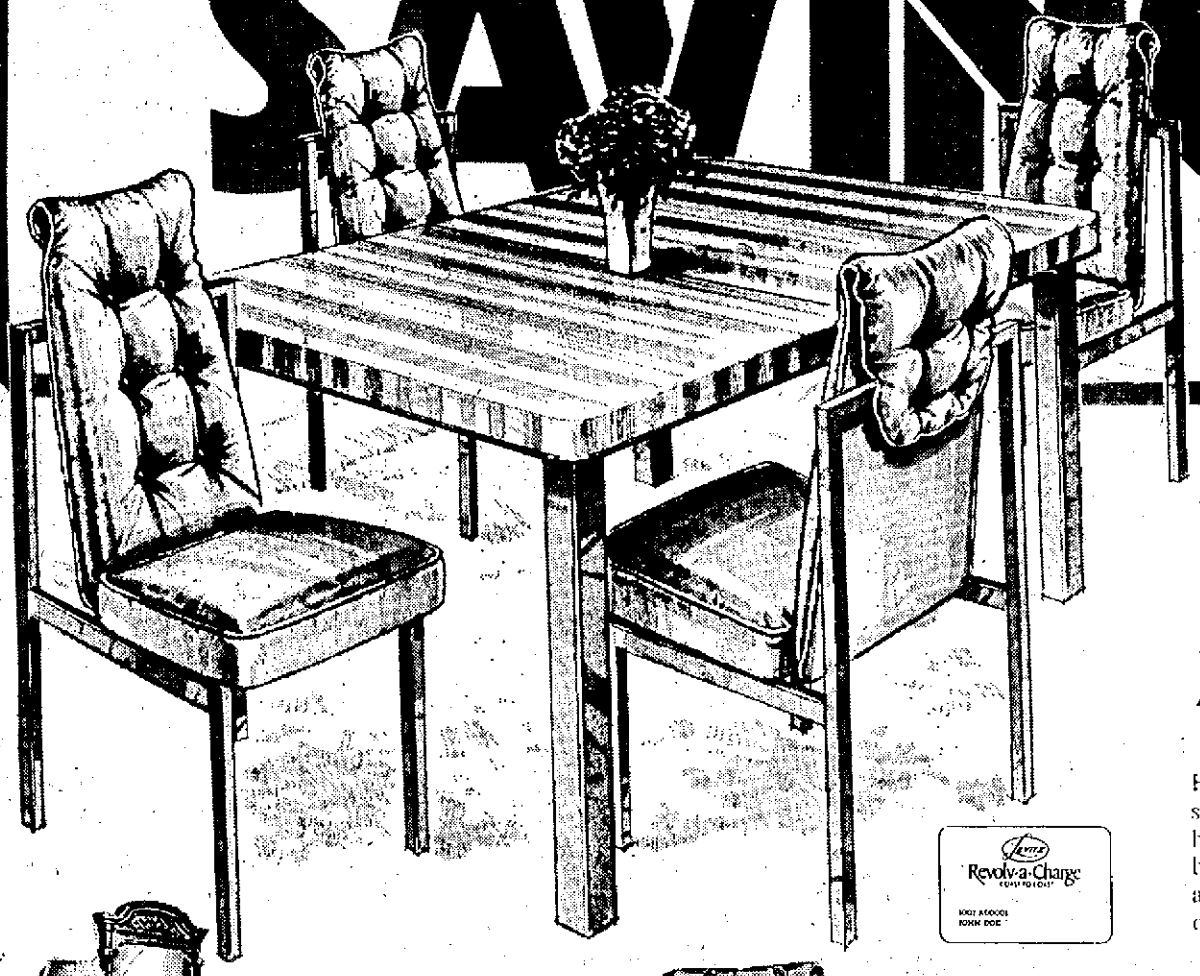

Burch gave no details of his discussions with Nixon in recent days, except to say they had gone over the impeachment situation "in general terms."

He said the President was in an "excellent" mood, but also "well aware of the way the proceedings are being conducted." And when a reporter asked if Nixon thought the investigation had been fair and impartial, Burch replied, "I think I could say no."

BURCH SAID he was confident the full House would not vote to impeach the President. He said he would not be surprised if all 17 Republican members of the Judiciary Committee voted against impeachment, but said he did not mean to suggest that the White House was relying on any precise head count for its optimism.

Money hunt

I received Aid to Families With Dependent Children until last October. My ex-husband's first child-support payment was due April 29 and he was supposed to make his payments through the court trustee's office, which would forward them to me. However, the trustee's office has been sending the money to the Department of Public Social Services because DPSS hasn't sent the trustee a notice that I am no longer receiving welfare payments. I have been trying since April to get DPSS to send this notice, but I just keep getting the run-around. I've also tried to get the money that the trustee has sent to DPSS, but the department keeps saying that my ex-husband hasn't made any support payments. The trustee's office disagrees. I have two children to support and I need this money. R.J., Long Beach.

By now, you have obtained your money. We, too, originally got conflicting information from the trustee's office and DPSS — the court claimed it had sent the money to DPSS, which maintained it had received no payments. DPSS official Robert Kiehl, head of the department's child-support division, finally located the source of your problem. You had been assigned two different file numbers, and only one file showed the payments your ex-husband had made. According to Kiehl, DPSS had sent a discontinuation notice on your case to the trustee nearly six weeks ago, but it hadn't been posted by the court. That, too, will be taken care of, Kiehl said, and future payments will be mailed directly to you.

Issue in doubt

In February, I sent a money order to Psychology Today magazine for a subscription. I received three issues and then I started getting invoices stating that I wouldn't receive any more magazines until I paid my bill. I have written to the company several times and I've sent copies of my canceled money order, but all I get in return are more bills. I really like this magazine, but I don't think I should have to pay twice to get it. Can ACTION LINE help? S.P., Terminal Island.

Your account has been marked "Paid" and your subscription has been reinstated. Belle White, customer-service representative for the magazine, said she would make sure you receive the back issues you missed. She said she didn't know what caused the computer error.

Worse than weeds?

Are there any harmful chemicals in the spray used by the Norwalk High School groundkeepers to kill weeds? They spray along the chain-link fence between the school and the homes. The odor is very strong and lasts a long time and the wind brings it into the house. I'm afraid the spray may be harmful for children to breathe and I'm concerned about myself too, as I am pregnant. Mrs. S.C., Norwalk.

The weed killer is diesel fuel only and "to the best of our knowledge can't be harmful," said Bruce Butler, a Norwalk-La Mirada Unified School District official. He said the fuel is sprayed around fences and sprinkler heads to keep Bermuda grass from spreading. A Long Beach environmental health officer agreed that the fuel "wouldn't be harmful under normal circumstances as long as herbicides aren't mixed with it."

Drain

I am greatly concerned about a ditch that is in front of the Belmont Shore Mobile Estates on Pacific Coast Highway near Loynes Drive. I think this ditch is a health hazard. The smell from the water in the ditch is overpowering and it's difficult to wait for a bus there. Why can't something be done to clean up this area? K.L., Long Beach.

At ACTION LINE's request, the Long Beach Health Department has asked the city's street-maintenance division to clean up the drainage ditch, but there really is no way to keep the problem from recurring. That area, which used to be the site of the old Long Beach dump, has drainage problems because the land is sinking in spots, according to a Health Department official. Instead of flowing down the drainage ditch, the water from the mobile-home park accumulates in some of the lower spots. The spokesman said that a crew investigated the area and reported that, although there is some stagnant water there, they could find no evidence of a health hazard. Even so, the city has agreed to try to keep the area cleaned up.

U.N. DELEGATES vote unanimously to call for cease-fire and restitution of constitutional government in Cyprus. —UPI

Cyprus cease-fire ordered

WHILE NOT mentioning the Greek officers by name, the resolution called for withdrawl of troops "requested by the President of the Republic of Cyprus Archbishop Makarios in his letter of July 2, 1974."

Greece has so far agreed only to "replace" the officers 50 at a time without withdrawing them.

Makarios himself, who watched the debate on television from his New York hotel suite, later issued a statement saying he was "satisfied with the resolution adopted by the Security Council.

"The resolution contains many positive and constructive elements," Makarios said. "I am grateful because all the members showed keen interest in the tragic events in Cyprus and are making every effort to put an end to them. I hope that the resolution will prove conducive in this direction in the interest of peace in the area."

THE RESOLUTION did not go as far as the Cyprus delegation wanted. U.N. sources said they preferred a clause specifically calling for the return to power of Makarios and for Cyprus' participation in the Turkey-Greece-Britain negotiations.

Scali told newsmen before the resolution was adopted the "Soviet attitude has not been helpful."

"We think the situation is so critical that it is criminal if we do not agree quickly on a call for a cease-fire and for negotiations. They (the Soviets) allege they have no instructions."

Turkish sources told newsmen they wanted the council to postpone action until Rauf Denktash, Turkish Cypriot vice president, could come to New York to be heard by the council.

They said they had warned of dire developments earlier this week, but the council refused to debate the situation until Makarios could fly here to be heard.

Denktash was still in Cyprus Saturday morning.

Cypriot capital said in control of Turks

Greek United Nations Ambassador Constantine F. Panayotacos charged during U.N. debate that Turkish warplanes had dropped napalm bombs on Cyprus, but Eugene Rossides, the Cypriot envoy loyal to Makarios, said he could not confirm this.

UPI correspondent Michael Keats reported from Nicosia that the Turkish invasion triggered intercommunal firing on Cyprus between Greeks and Turks, but a shaky local cease-fire was arranged by U.N. personnel during the day.

Panayotacos said his government had informed Turkey that Greece would "consider it an act of agression" if Turkish troops continue to occupy Greek Cypriot territory. In that case Athens would also send in troops to protect Greek Cypriots, he said.

Turkish Ambassador Osman Olcay also avoided a direct answer. He denied the Turkish operation was an invasion and said Turkey was only fulfilling its obligations under the treaty guaranteeing Cyprus' independence.

On Cyprus, President Nicos Sampson, sworn in Monday after Makarios was overthrown, said in a radio and television broadcast that Greek Cypriots would keep fighting "until we throw the invading Turks into the sea."

And in London, the British defense ministry announced Saturday it had begun airlifting 1,000 commandos and armored troops to reinforce the 8,000 British servicemen manning British bases on Cyprus.

The invasion prompted President Nixon to confer with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger at San Clemente.

Seven hours after the invasion started, the Turkish government in Ankara announced that both Nicosia and Kyrenia had fallen to the invading army. There was no immediate confirmation from correspondent of the capture of Nicosia, but reporters confirmed Kyrenia was in Turkish hands.

Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit declared, "We are going to Cyprus not to make war but to restore peace."

Radio Nicosia claimed eight Turkish warplanes shot down.

Turkish paratroops dropped 10 miles inland near the Cypriot capital of Nicosia and fanned out over the mountainous countryside Nicosia and the northern coast.

UPI correspondents witnessed heavy fighting raged along the Kyrenia-Nicosia road, which twists about 18 miles from the sea to the capital.

Turkish jets roared in over Nicosia. Greek Cypriot Radio Nicosia said they bombed the headquarters of the Greek-led Greek Cypriot National guard and the police headquarters on the outskirts of the capital.

National Guard tanks and armored cars streamed north to fight the Turkish invaders.

The 2,300-man United Nations peacekeeping force on Cyprus announced it had arranged a cease-fire of unspecified duration along the line separating the Greek majority and Turkish minority in Nicosia itself, according to a British armed forces radio broadcast.

But the broadcast said the cease-fire would not last long enough to evacuate civilians.

The ground fighting ranged Turkish forces numbering roughly 15,000 men against the troops of the Greek Cypriot majority and the regular Greek garrison on the island, or a total of about 1,100 men.

A State Department spokesman said no Americans had been wounded in the new fighting, and no American property had been damaged.

The crisis began Monday when the 10,000-man Greek Cypriot National Guard, headed by 650 officers imported from Greece to train them, overthrew Makarios. He fled the island and appeared later in the week at the U.N. to demand that Greece withdraw its forces.

The 650,000 Cypriots are about four-fifths Greek and one-fifth Turkish.

Greece ordered full mobilization of its 160,000-man armed forces and rushed troops to the Turkish border. Turkey has 455,000 regulars under arms. Both countries have roughly equal air forces.

In Athens, Constantine Kypraios, the acting Greek foreign minister, summoned Turkish ambassador Kamiran Gurun and demanded "immediate cessation" of all hostile acts by Turkey, the official Athens New Agency said.

A pall of smoke hung over the "green line" in central Nicosia which divides the Greek and Turkish communities. Explosions and gunfire crackled through the capital.

Turkey and Greece nearly went to war in 1964 and again in 1967 over Cyprus. Under a 1960 treaty, Britain, Turkey and Greece agreed to keep the island independent.

Ex-wife accused of killing family

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — A woman who wanted to "solve all the heartaches and hurts" killed her three children, her former husband and one of his relatives in northeast Arkansas Saturday, police said.

Shirley Marie Curry, 37, of Lowell, also wounded another man, officers said, and was arrested in Fayetteville less than two hours after the killings. She was held without bond, and authorities said they would charge her Monday with five counts of murder and perhaps assault with intent to kill.

Deputy Sheriff J.D. Snow said Mrs. Curry lost a custody battle over one of her children on Friday, and that "festered in her mind."

cover-up this shortly after the break-in on June 17, 1972, and that he has been in charge of the cover-up from that day forward."

Doar was accused of bias against Nixon by White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler, but in the transcript, Doar denied it.

"As an individual, I have not the slightest bias against President Nixon," he said. "I would hope that I would not do him the smallest injury. But I am not indifferent, not indifferent to the matter of presidential abuse of power, by whatever president...."

Before Doar renewed his briefing, a new question of the adequacy of White House-edited transcripts arose when it was learned a partial transcript presented in Nixon's defense last Thursday appears to contain a reference to an event that had not yet occurred. (See story on Page A-8.)

In the brief excerpt provided by St. Clair, Nixon is shown to comment, apparently about Hunt or his partner in the Watergate break-in, G. Gordon Liddy, that "the judge gave him 35 years." They were not sentenced until March 23.

Most Democrats reacted with a shrug. "It figures," said Danielson. "That is just part of the pattern that has been going on. The cover-up has not ended."

Chairman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., said he has instructed the committee staff to investigate the matter. A White House spokesman said only that the transcript speaks for itself.

Doar and Jenner's presentation to the committee is based on a 306-page compendium of pertinent evidence culled from the mass that has been collected and tied together with a running narrative that covers the areas in which Doar believes impeachable offenses can be found.

After further discussions of the evidence on Monday and Tuesday, the committee will begin debate on Wednesday, with a vote on impeachment possible by the end of the week. The committee sessions are expected to be televised.

The staff summary of the evidence in support of impeachment says the critical question the committee must decide in determining Nixon's responsibility for Watergate is whether Nixon was duped by his subordinates or whether they were carrying out his policies and decisions.

From testimony by Alexander Butterfield, personal aide to Nixon during the Watergate period, the staff presents a picture of a President firmly in control of his office, concluding "he made the decisions, he was running his staff and his re-election campaign for President."

One of the decisions reached in the inner White House circles was on June 21, 1972, four days after the break-in at Democratic headquarters in the Watergate office building, when it was determined that further disclosures of the event would be limited, the staff says.

From that day forward, it says, a policy of containment under Nixon's direction was followed.

In dealing with the crucial March 21, 1973, conversation about payments to Hunt, the staff study says:

"In response to this report the President did not condemn the payments or the involvement of his closest aides. He did not direct that the activity be stopped. The President did not express any surprise or shock. He did not report it to the proper investigatory agencies. He indicated familiarity with the payment scheme and an awareness of some details."

"The staff says investigations of Watergate have been hampered by the refusal of Nixon to provide tapes of White House conversations.

In the area of domestic surveillance, the summary says, wiretaps on newsmen and White House aides, while they may not have been illegal, "were intended to serve the personal political purposes of the President, not any national policy objectives."

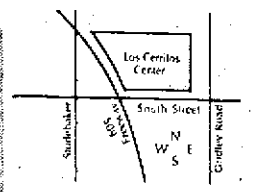

And in setting up a special investigating unit to get derogatory material about Daniel Ellsberg, who had leaked the Pentagon Papers, the staff says, "The President's concern ... was not with espionage or national security, but with politics and public relations."

The summary says a case for abuse of presidential power can be found in Nixon's "misuse of the Internal Revenue Service to obtain confidential tax return information on individuals and to accelerate or initiate IRS investigations or audits of political critics of opponents of the President."

Concern over March 21 tape bared

Nixon 'worried aloud' on cover-up

By JANE DENISON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon knew 13 months ago that his crucial March 21, 1973, talk with John W. Dean III was a "tough" problem that would give Dean "some justification" for testifying that the President was part of the Watergate cover-up, it was revealed Saturday.

Nixon also realized 13 months ago that he "should have reacted" to the Watergate scandal long before Dean warned him on March 21 of a "cancer growing on the presidency."

In a previously unpublished transcript of a secret White House tape, Nixon worried aloud about that March 21 meeting — a session that may prove to be critical evidence when Congress decides whether he should be impeached.

THE TAPE transcript was released by the House Judiciary Committee as part of evidence amassed for its impeachment inquiry.

The bulk of the material released plowed ground already well known, dealing with the events leading to the firing in October of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox and the resignations of Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson and his deputy, William Ruckelshaus.

In the new transcript, Nixon on June 4, 1973, rehashed — first to Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig, then to Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler — what he had heard that day listneing to a batch of Watergate tapes.

He chiefly was concerned about March 21 — the day Dean has testified he told Nixon all about the cover-up and on which it has been alleged that the President approved payment of "hush money" to the Watergate burglars.

THOUGH NIXON'S chief defense lawyer, James D. St. Clair, contends Dean's testimony is false and the record proves it, the newly released tape shows the President was worried more than a year ago.

"Well, as I told you, we do know we have one problem: It's that damn conversation of March twenty-first ... but I think we can handle that," Nixon told Haig.

"Bob (former chief of staff H.R. Haldeman) can handle it. He'll get up there and say ... 'I was there; the President said —'"

Later, to Ziegler, Nixon said the "goddamn record" was not that bad — with one key exception.

"What I was saying about this crap is that it's reassuring up to a point, but in fact, uh, at least, in this whole business we, we sat there and we conspired about a cover-up (unintelligible) or not," he said. "We did talk about it on the twenty-first. That's a tough conversation. Unless Haldeman explains it — which he will."

AT THAT POINT, the President sighed.

"But I think we can survive that, too," he said.

"Yeah, absolutely," Ziegler replied. "We'll survive it all."

Haldeman, present for part of the Nixon-Dean meeting, has testified that the President rejected as "wrong" payment of hush money to the Watergate burglars. The Watergate grand jury, after hearing a tape of the meeting, indicted Haldeman for perjury on that point—largely on the basis of listening to the tape.

The grand jury also named Nixon an unindicted coconspirator in the cover-up plot for which six former aides go to trial in September.

The evidence released by the committee Saturday, in two thick volumes totaling 1,069 pages, summarized Nixon's consistent refusal to turn over Watergate evidence to two special prosecutors and to two congressional investigating committees. That refusal will form the basis of an article of impeachment that the committee will debate next week.

IN THE JUNE 4 tape, Nixon admitted he had told Dean that they had to block the Watergate trail before it got to Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman. And more than a half-dozen times, he conceded Dean might have drawn dangerous conclusions.

"I suppose he could say there that I was telling him to cover-up, wouldn't you say, for Haldeman?" Nixon asked Ziegler.

"But what I was thinking there, was basically, uh, not to get all those guys (expletive) on each other," he said. "But Dean could go out, with probably some justification, and said (sic) that he, uh, could probably say that he told the President about all this and warned him about all this ... God, I'm worn out."

Though Ziegler reassured the President repeatedly there had been "no warning" from Dean and no reason for Nixon to have acted to clear up the scandal, Nixon was glum.

"I SHOULD HAVE reacted before the twenty-first of March, actually," he said. "Dean shouldn't have had to come in to me with the 'cancer in the heart of the presidency,' which, to his credit, he did ...," Nixon said. "He did. Haldeman didn't tell me that; Ehrlichman didn't tell me that."

Nonetheless, Nixon blamed Dean for his troubles—and John N. Mitchell, his former attorney general and campaign manager at the time of the Watergate bugging.

"I didn't want to burn Mitchell ...," Nixon said. "The key to this thing, Ron, is Mitchell. Always been the key. You haven't had a cover-up. Dean did it—(expletive), he didn't do it for Haldeman and Ehrlichman. He (unintelligible) himself. He did it for John Mitchell."

BUT NIXON said he understood why Mitchell disclaimed responsibility and said he would have done the same thing himself.

"That's the tragedy of the whole thing," he said. "Mitchell would never step up to this. Well, I suppose, would you? No. No. Former attorney general step up and say you bugged? (expletive), I wouldn't.

"What I would step up and say: 'Look, I haven't approved a goddamn thing and so forth but I take responsibility for it, bah, bah, bah, bah, you know, uh, a suspended sentence or a misdemeanor slap in the face or whatever the hell it's going to be.' But once denied — under oath — uh, he was stuck. See? Goddamn."

ABOUT six weeks after this conversation with Haig and Ziegler, the evidence shows Nixon already had decided to fire Archibald Cox as special Watergate prosecutor unless Cox quit digging for evidence.

Included in the material was a sworn affidavit from Richardson about the events that finally led to Cox's dismissal on Oct. 20, the so-called "Saturday night massacre."

"On July 23, 1973," Richardson related, "Gen. Haig called and told me that the 'boss' was very 'uptight' about Cox and complained about various of his activities.... Gen. Haig told me that 'if we have to have a confrontation we will have it.' Gen. Haig said that the President wanted 'a tight line drawn with no further mistakes' and that 'if Cox does not agree, we will get rid of Cox.'"

And in late September or early October, Richardson said, around the time then-Vice President Spiro T. Agnew resigned, Nixon himself told him: "Now that we have disposed of that matter, we can go ahead and get rid of Cox."

NIXON'S determination to fire Cox apparently coincided with the prosecutor's quest for Nixon's secret tapes. Existence of them was disclosed July 16 and Cox immediately moved to subpoena nine of them, his first confrontation with the White House.

Nixon refused to honor the subpoena and when ordered by a federal court to do so Aug. 29, the evidence showed, the White House began to transcribe them for the first time — only to discover that two were missing and another contained an 18½-minute gap.

It was after these discoveries that Nixon announced he would not surrender the tapes and fired Cox for his persistence. But he relented after a storm of public protest by turning over the tapes and agreeing in the appointment of a new prosecutor.

GOP to study '74 elections

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "Who doesn't vote in 1974" will be more important than who does to the Republican Party as it gears for the 1976 presidential election, a top political strategist said Saturday.

F. Clinton White, campaign strategist for the Committee to Re-Elect the President and Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.,spoke at a national convention of the Young Americans for Freedom here on Republican campaign strategy for 1974 and 1976.

Inflation like war: easy to start, hard to end

ANALYSIS

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Americans are learning a painful economic lesson. Inflation, like the Vietnam War, is deceptively easy to get into and terribly difficult to end.

The economic enemy is proving as tough to beat in the neighborhood supermarket as the military foe was in the jungles of Southeast Asia. Two years of wage-price controls—the economic equivalent of saturation bombing—seems only to have made matters worse.

Politicians are becoming uncomfortably aware that "light at the end of the tunnel" rhetoric doesn't help much, either. The voters are passing along an election-year message that they won't be happy until prices begin to fall.

The United States is relatively better off than other countries in the cost of living. But that doesn't ease the anguish of a Des Moines housewife trying to squeeze the family food budget or a St. Louis businessman looking for money to expand a factory.

The worldwide price explosion makes inflation even tougher to cure.

INFLATION, something Americans once smugly considered reserved for banana republics and other undisciplined economies, is running about 11 per cent annually in the United States.

Most Western European countries, with the exception of Germany, aren't doing much better. In Japan prices are soaring at an annual rate of 23 per cent, in Taiwan 63 per cent, Uruguay 77 per cent, and so it goes.

The fourfold jump in oil prices played a critical role in this inflationary surge, but so did simultaneous economic expansions throughout the industrialized world that caused extraordinarily heavy demands for food and manufactured products and forced prices up.

In the United States, the upward pressure on prices was fed by years of a deliberate or unintended federal policy of deficit budgets, in which the government spends more than it collects.

Some of the blame even goes to a wayward Pacific Ocean current that last year caused a temporary famine of Peruvian anchovies with resultant shortages of fish-meal feeds and thus higher prices for poultry feed and supermarket chickens.

SHIFTING ocean currents are beyond the control of government bureaucrats. But presumably the administration can call other antiinflation remedies into play.

What, then, is being done in Washington to slow the rampaging cost of living?

If one looks for bold, innovative programs, the answer is, "Not much."

Burned by their just-concluded experiment in economic stabilization, President Nixon and his economic advisers have retreated to the textbook solution for combating inflation: Hold down spending, restrict growth in the money supply and increase production of goods to ease shortages.

This is the "old-time religion" of fiscal and monetary discipline that the President contends will, given enough time, ease inflationary pressures.

The key problem is the time.

Arthur F. Burns, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, predicts it may take two or three years to get inflation under control. In the meantime, the nation is likely to suffer higher than normal unemployment, lower than usual economic growth and excrutiating interest rates.

IT WILL take heavy medicine, but Burns says it is inevitable.

"If past experience is any guide, the future of our country is in jeopardy," he said recently. "If long continued, inflation at anything like the present rate would threaten the very foundations of our society."

With the White House under Watergate siege and its body of economic policymakers in some disarray, Burns has inherited almost by default the job of leading the government's economic battle plan. He has not shirked his duty.

With apparent support from his six fellow Federal Reserve governors, Burns has signaled his intention to curb the availability of credit, even if it pushes some corporations to bankruptcy and prolongs housing-industry depression.

There is danger in the Fed's strategy. Many industries are now running at peak capacity and need to borrow money to build new plants to alleviate the very shortages that are causing much of the inflation. Public utilities and the steel, oil and fertilizer industries are especially hard pressed.

But with interest rates in the stratosphere, these companies must choose between paying an inflationary premium for their capital or foregoing expansion. Small companies and consumers are likely to be squeezed out altogether.

ONE SOLUTION attracting attention is to set up machinery for doling out the supply of money to those who need it most, meaning those who would invest it in ways that would contribute most to dampening inflation.

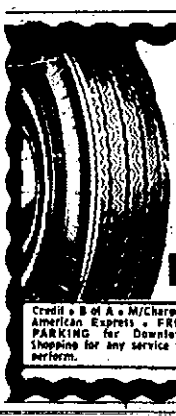

Burns, who is technically not a member of the administration, has also been tougher than any other Nixon appointee in calling for federal budget cuts, even though he has no direct responsibility for such action.

Burns told the House Ways and Means Committee last week the new federal budget should be cut by $10 billion, twice the $5 billion Budget Director Roy Ash said was possible. Burns also favored a wage-price review board that would spotlight anti-inflationary behavior of companies and labor unions.

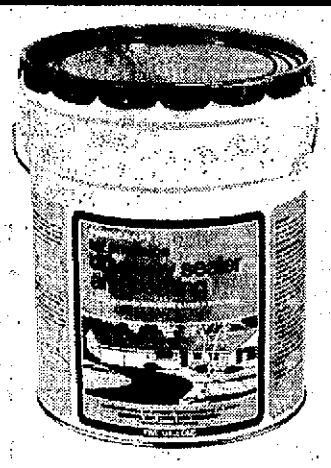

With Nixon's economic controls now expired, the administration has limited its direct intervention in the marketplace to one "dialogue" between Nixon and several prominent businessmen and economists.

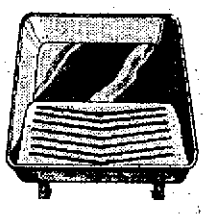

During 2½ hours of "gentlemanly jawboning" at the White House, Kenneth Rush, Nixon's economic coordinator, asked for price restraint from leaders of some of the nation's biggest corporations, and suggested business might benefit from more generous tax breaks that would stimulate investments if it cooperated. He received no promises in return.

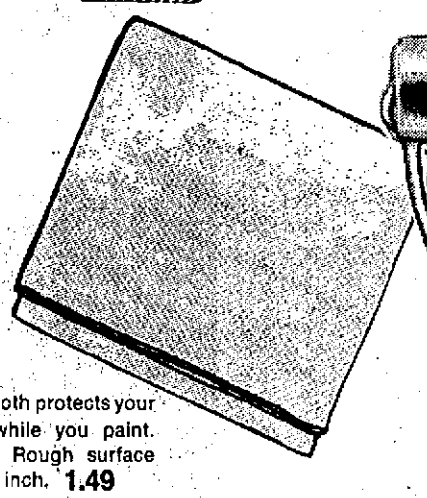

The adminstration has stoutly rejected any tax cut as inflationary. Rush argues that tax incentives for business—in effect a tax cut—would be anti-inflationary by stimulating production, increasing supplies and depressing demand.

Cranston hits budget

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said Saturday the federal budget could be cut easily by eliminating more than two-thirds of U.S. economic and military aid that now goes to "authoritarian regimes abroad."

Cranston made his charge as the Senate Foreign Relations Committee moved toward the final stage of considering the administration's $7.5-billion foreign aid program for the fiscal year that began July 1.

Citing figures supplied by the Library of Congress, Freedom House, the Center for Defense Information and the State Department, Cranston said $5.1 billion of the funds would go to a total of 57 countries having repressive governments. Of them, Cranston said, 18 are classified by the government itself as out-and-out dictatorships.

A total of 27 other countries will benefit from the remaining $2.4 billion, Cranston said.

Seer says Nixon will stay in office

Congress's investigation into Watergate, a carousel gathering many riders and increased momentum these past six months, may prove a costly ride, indeed. Congress may well spend another 24 months preoccupied with Watergate if it does not direct its attention to far more pressing domestic issues, such as runaway prices. I see Watergate causing the realignment of party allegiances, and resulting in a better form of government. The criticism, publicity and scandal surrounding Watergate will in the long run reinforce American confidence in the presidency, which I see the country judiciously preserving.

These are Jeane Dixon's midyear predictions.

PRESIDENT NIXON — President Nixon will continue to occupy the White House. He will be found to have committed no impeachable offenses, although he will be plagued by Watergate manipulators until November 1975. (More in 1975 New Year's forecasts.) I see several letters surfacing, revealing that one of the principal conspirators in the Watergate and Ellsberg break-in clearly plans to blackmail Nixon.

LEON JAWORSKI — I feel that Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski will bow out of the Watergate picture in the not-too-distant future.

PETER RODINO — Congressman Peter Rodino, D-N.J., is beginning to feel stifled by Watergate. The leaks from within his committee and the charges that he lacks control will hurt his future.

I see him declining to give a ruling until all the evidence about Watergate is out. A man of unusual ability and fantastic memory, Rodino will not be stampeded into premature judgments or rash statements.

I see the wrangling dragging on into October of 1975 and ending inconclusively because of lack of impeachment information and what I see as misrepresentation of the facts. Rodino will bow out thelatter part of 1975 amid a conflict of interests and disagreements. His successor will make the final judgment.

Rodino's wealth will increase and he will have his own personal difficulties which will subject him to the same sort of scrutiny he is focusing on the President.

CHARLES COLSON — The Watergate investigation committee is far from finished with former presidential counsel Charles Colson. Many new scandals are yet to unfold, despite a temporary respite from committee inquiries. Colson will think he is free, but new specters from the past will arise to haunt him.

He has turned to God for relief, and he will be saved through Jesus Christ. But those he has hurt in the name of his career will be less forgiving. They will unceasingly criticize him, question the sincerity of his new faith and accuse him of using God as an escape from Watergate.

National affairs

PATRICIA HEARST — The betrayal of Patricia Hearst by a female member of the Symbionese Liberation Army will provide an end to the long episode and the beginning of legal action against her abductors. Among other schemes, this betrayer plans to forewarn officers about one of Ms. Hearst's infrequent visits to a neighborhood store to buy food or clothing. The female informant will be motivated both by jealousy and by an offer of reward money. August promises a breakthrough in the mystery surrounding the kidnaping and the events which followed.

Elections

VICE PRESIDENT FORD — I feel that Vice President Ford presently has presidential aspirations and will become a candidate.

VICE PRESIDENT for 1976 — The thoughts of an influential woman reveal to me her plans to seek nomination for vice president of the United States in 1976. Those plans include using the press to thrust her into the political limelight.

I withhold disclosure of her identity because it could possibly deter the progress of less powerful political figures as they seek nomination for the vice presidency.

I FEEL THE GOP will only lose about 30 seats in the fall congressional elections, not much more than it would in any other off-year election.

Political figures

GOVERNOR George C. Wallace — I foresee Alabama Governor Wallace moving gradually from politics to the pulpit to preach the gospel of love and unity. His thoughts and plans are now influenced by a voice urging him to "teach the world how not to hate." Although he will play a powerful role in the 1976 elections, the urgency of his calling to the ministry will supersede previous political ambitions, regardless of pressures by his peers, who do not recognize his spiritual greatness.

I believe that Wallace's foreordained mission is truly God's reason for allowing him to be alive and with us today.

GOVERNOR Reagan — Gov. Reagan will be of great service to our country and to the world. He has very positive international vibrations and will use his great talents constructively for the good of humanity.

Economics

I see a worldwide attack on the American dollar in which gold will be the main instrument. This will have little effect on the U.S. economy, but the USSR will suffer serious losses because of it.

Inflation will continue unabated. Food and commodity prices will drop slightly this summer, but will soar next winter and continue to rise.

The stock market will continue in its doldrums. The stock exchanges will never again return to their former dynamic status. They will adjust to fit a new U.S. economy and government.

Defense

I feel a serious situation developing in our defense structure. Cost overruns and lack of research and development funds will hinder our future army. Most of all I see as a serious threat our lack of production of small nuclear weapons for the foot soldier. We will not be able to compete with the massive manpower available to certain other countries. Only superior weapons and technology can make up the difference. The disarmament advocates will fight hard to stop the development of these new tactical weapons, which the USSR also will be working furiously to develop. Congress will finally realize that our defenses are ineffectual and will force the development and production of small nuclear weapons.

International

MIDEAST CRISIS — I see an unstable peace in the Middle East. Lasting peace between Israel and the Arab countries will not come until the end of this century until which time the struggle will continue.

CHINA — Relations between the Republic of China and the United States will remain much the same as they are presently. The greatest change for China is its future relations with the Soviet Union. Such relations could be very devastating.

SOVIET UNION — I predict the USSR will take advantage of the U.S.'s political and economic situation. The Soviet Union will try to intensify events as they arise.

Newsman asks Nixon to resign

MIAMI (UPI) — John S. Knight, the editorial chairman of Knight Newspapers, Inc., called today for President Nixon to resign and for Gerald Ford to assume the presidency and appoint a bipartisan cabinet.

Knight, in a column distributed to Knight's 16 daily newspapers, said Watergate "has destroyed public confidence in government at all levels" and the President "cannot recapture the respect and support of a majority of his countrymen."

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Opens a "treasure-hunt" year in which any search or self-improvement effort yields unexpected benefits. Material affairs require much scurrying to keep them coherently organized. Relationships are subject to exciting episodes, extra travel. Today's natives either collect or scatter, one extreme or the other, according to the special qualities of their birth years.

Aries (March 21-April 19): An early start and persistence are essential to your success today and all week. Do you best in good faith! Send flowers, some remembrance to your beloved.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Nothing comes out exactly as planned, but no harm is done. Give romance a second chance. Keep busy improving home and work situations. Take extra rest and retire early.

Gemini (May 21- June 20): No speculation or short cut is quite what it appears. Be sparing in the use of money, generous in affection and sympathy. Settle domestic questions despite demands of work.

Cancer (June 21- July 22): Personal needs take early priority. Then gather those close by for a group effort. Get a lot done on the work at hand before moving to expansive plans.

Leo (July 23- Aug. 22): Impatience upsets your progress if you indulge yourself. Easy does it! Give people a chance to respond. Don't put out cash for any more than you really need to buy.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Get into step with the world, obtain what you want without spoiling anybody's enjoyment of life. Spending impresses nobody, certainly not those who know you.

Libra (Sept. 23- Oct. 22): What you've been doing begins to bring results. Act according to what you see for yourself. Group concerns offer food for thought, little chance to solve problems.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Differences easily arise over money. Social affairs are fun but apt to run over your budget. Keeping up with the Joneses is expensive just now; don't try.

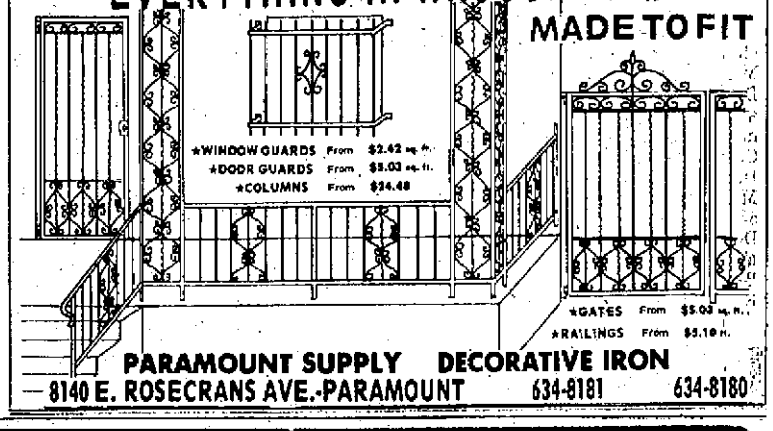

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Proceed at full speed to clear away the most important chores early. Look over your available resources, decide how best to apply them.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan 19): Interruptions for social activity seem probable. Get routine work done as quickly as you can. Expect no special consideration from family or relatives.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Build reserves today—never mind fancy frills of speculations that tempt you. Hold purchases to immediate needs only. Change of scene and activity can make later hours happy.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Emotional expressions can't be passed over lightly. Respond at once with reconciliation, consolation. Your patience and care redeem your faults.

Bond calls for delay in federal offshore oil plans

Assemblyman Bill Bond, R-Long Beach, Saturday called on the federal government to postpone further coastal oil development until the California Coastline Commission has completed its comprehensive coastal protection plan.

He said the Department of Interior plans to open bidding this spring on oil leases for drilling off the Southern California coast in an area extending from Malibu to the eastern boundary of Orange County. The federal government has jurisdiction for oil lands beyond the three-mile limit.

BOND SAID he is alarmed that decisions will be made in Washington without proper consideration being given to local priorities, noting that "two years ago 55 per cent of the voters of this state approved Proposition 20 establishing the Coastline Commission to govern future developments within 1,000 yards of the coast and to create a plan for the permanent protection of the coastal environment. This plan is to be reported out in 1976.

"My discussions with top officials of the Interior Department in Washington reveal that they are totally unaware of the mission of the Coastline Commission. Although they will hold public hearings, I am concerned that they will only be perfunctory exercises because the administration is accelerating its efforts to find additional sources of domestic energy.

"I BELIEVE strongly that the government should move swiftly to make our nation independent of foreign supplies of energy through the development of new resources and alternate forms of energy. However, I think the federal government should seek the cooperation of the states in this program. In California it would not hurt the overall energy picture to defer new offshore oil development for two years. If necessary, Elk Hills could be opened up during the interim."

Assemblyman Bond said the Coastline Commission has asked Interior to determine the feasibility of under-water oil operations to replace above-water platforms; to require federal drilling procedures to be drawn and enforced as strictly as the state's are; to draw up precise plans for containing oil spills, and to consider a system approach to oil recovery involving such things as determining the need, number, ways and location of pipelines, storage tanks and refineries for the new oil and gas that will be recovered.

Bond said he does not consider the Commission's request unreasonable.

"BECAUSE the voters of this state want to preserve their natural environment," he said, "it would be totally irresponsible for the federal government to ignore our wishes and adopt a go-it-alone policy.

"On the other hand, in view of the need for additional sources of oil, the commission should certainly speed up the development of its coastal protection plan. There is no reason why at least a preliminary plan containing developmental guidelines and criteria cannot be produced sooner than 1976."

$1.3 million expended on Prop. 9

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Proposition 9 supporters outspent their opponents 6-1 in their successful campaign to pass the political reform initiative, according to campaign reports released Saturday.

Final spending reports showed that six pro-Proposition 9 committees and organizations spent more than $677,900 before the June 4 primary campaign. Committees opposing the proposition spent $170,250.

ALTOGETHER $1.3 million was used to oppose or support propositions on the June 4 ballot. Only one of the nine measures, Proposition 7, was defeated.

California Common Cause, the California branch of the so-called citizens lobby, spent the most in support of Proposition 9: $452,621.

The national Common Cause organization spent at least $215,125, including a $123,000 loan to California Common Cause. Its final campaign report was not available Saturday.

The Know Nine Committee and Californians Against Proposition 9 together spent $115,069 in an attempt to defeat the measure.

ROCKET FUEL LINE BRACKETS RUSTED

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — A decade ago as many as 200 rockets a year thundered away from Cape Canaveral. The average now is two a month. The nation's space center has become almost a ghost town of gantries.

Of 42 launching pads built at the cape, only five are still operable, mainly for unmanned weather and communications satellites. The others have been dismantled, sold for junk, or are rusting in the Florida sun.

Pad 14, from which John Glenn became the first American to orbit the earth in 1962, sways in the gusts of briny winds sweeping in from the nearby Atlantic. Rattlesnakes sun on the concrete apron. Small white-tailed deer feed in nearby clearings. On Pad 19, from which Gemini astronauts were launched on 10 missions to perfect the techniques of docking and space walking, the dull orange gantry lies on the ground. Its once sterile white flight room houses a colony of wild rabbits. Alligators live in a nerby pond.

Pad 5, the jumping off spot for Alan B. Shepard on the first U.S. man-in-space flight in 1961, has been preserved as part of a space museum.

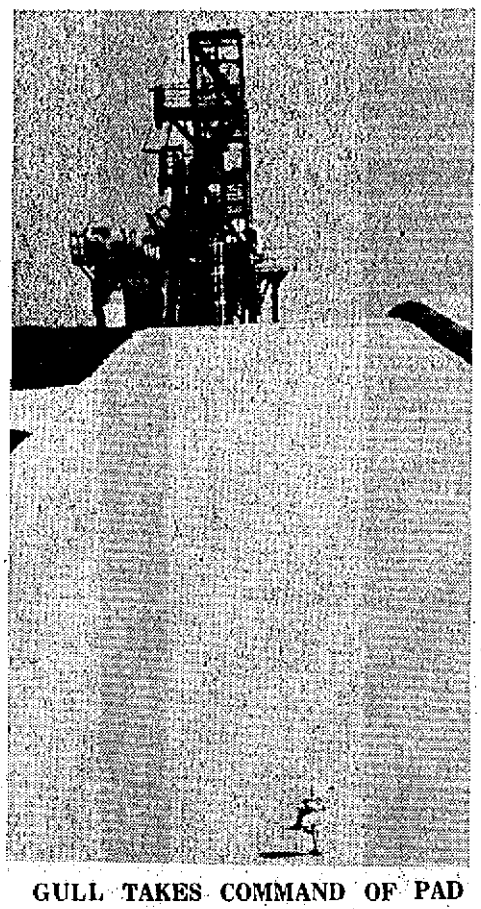

Apollo astronauts departed for the moon in 1969 from Pads 39A and 39B. One is in mothballs. The other is being renovated for a joint U.S.-Russian manned flight in July 1975. After that venture, the spaceport here will remain almost dormant until 1979, when the first space shuttle flights are to be made.

The shutdown has continued gradually since June 20, 1969, when the United States achieved its principal space goal of the 60's — landing man on the moon.

Once, 14 different military missiles were tested here simultaneously. Now there is only one, the submarine-launched Poseidon.

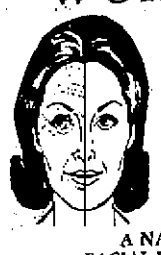

For even the limited, routine satellite launchings, 11,000 people are still employed at the Kennedy Space Center — down from a high of 26,000 five years ago.

And in a decade or so, Cape Canaveral is to come alive again as a futuristic spaceport from which even civilians will depart into space aboard the shuttle craft now being developed.

Apollo 11 astronauts celebrate 1st moon walk

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

WASHINGTON — Three Apollo 11 astronauts Saturday celebrated the fifth anniversary of man's first moon landing and mission commander Neil A. Armstrong said he thought at the time there was only a 50-50 chance they would succeed.

"I think it's fair to say that I, at least, was surprised every time something worked," said Armstrong, first man to walk on the moon and now an engineering professor at the University of Cincinnati.

"I had a continual suspicion that the next item on the checklist would be the one that would crump out on us."

Edwin E. "Buzz" Aldrin, who landed on the Sea of Tranquility with Armstrong, said he thought there was a better chance of success, but added, "I think we were all very surprised that there were no surprises in store for us, that things turned out as smoothly as they did."

Michael Collins, the third crew member who stayed in lunar orbit while his colleagues spent 21 hours, 36 minutes on the moon, said "the wonder of it all" was that nothing went wrong.

Armstrong, 43, Aldrin, 44, and Collins, 43, commemorated the anniversary of the landing at a ceremony at the Smithsonian Institution, where Collins is director of the National Air and Space Museum.

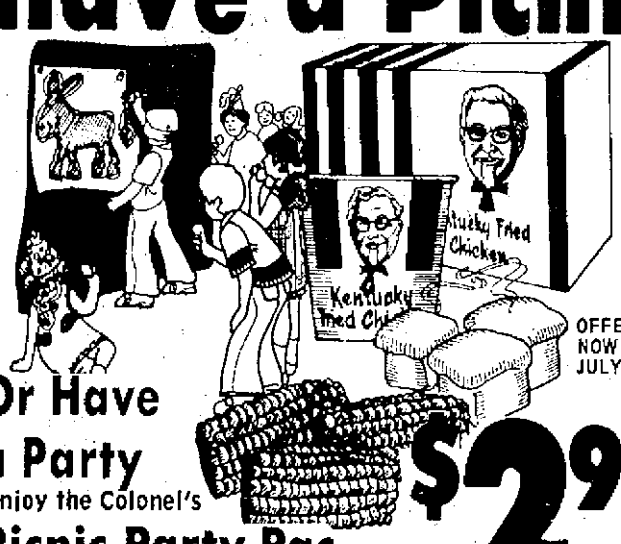

At a news conference at the Smithsonian, Armstrong was asked to comment on a statement in a soon-to-be-published book by Collins ("Carrying The Fire") that Armstrong "exercised his commander's prerogative to crawl out first" on the moon. This, Collins wrote, irritated Aldrin because earlier preliminary plans called for the commander to follow his copilot.

Armstrong said the decision was made higher up in the space agency because it would have been difficult for Aldrin to exit first since he would have had to change places with Armstrong in the cramped cabin while both wore bulky, pressurized spacesuits.

Summary of Secret Witness cases

As part of the Independent-Press—Telegram's Secret Witness program, 10 selected summaries of cases in which rewards are offered are printed in the Independent and Press-Telegram each Sunday and Thursday.

Cases are dropped from the summaries from time to time, but rewards will remain in effect for these until the cases are closed by police or until notification in print that rewards have been withdrawn.

Rewards also will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of suspects in any criminal cases, or the apprehension of fugitives from justice, whether covered in these summaries or not. These rewards will vary in amount depending on the seriousness of the offense.

To ensure eligibility for Secret Witness rewards, informants are required to channel all information directly through Secret Witness, either by calling the special Secret Witness telephone number or by writing in care of the Secret Witness post office box.

The summaries follow:

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Benjamin Holate, 70-year-old Compton businessman fatally beaten by a robber during a holdup in his furniture repair shop at 245 E. Compton Blvd. on Sept. 15, 1973.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of, Robert W. Cogley, 44-year-old Long Beach auto wholesaler shot to death by two robbers at the southeast corner of Pacific Coast Highway and California Avenue on Aug. 12, 1971.

—A $2,000 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of Elliot Lawson, 38, shot to death during a holdup at the Atlantic Inn, 1845 Atlantic Ave., on July 16, 1971.

—A $500 reward is offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the armed robbers who held up the Furs by David store at 203 E. Broadway on Dec. 12, 1972, and carried out more than $4,000 worth of furs.

—A $2,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the murderer of 19-year-old Charles Davis of Compton, slain by shotgun blast fired through an open window as he was sleeping on a sofa at the home of a neighbor in the 1400 block on West 154th Street in the early hours of Aug 26, 1973.

—Rewards totaling $1,500, including $500 guaranteed by Secret Witness and $1,000 pledged by victim Frank Fazio, will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of burglars who stole $11,000 from a safe in Fazio's food shop operations office at Ports of Call Village on April 15, 1974.

—A 1,000 reward will be paid for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the men who raped and stabbed a North Long Beach woman, inflicting serious wounds, as she was returning home from work on the night of June 14, 1973.

How to become a Secret Witness

Secret Witness seeks information from the public leading to the capture of fugitives and the arrest and conviction of criminals. For this purpose a guaranteed fund of $100,000 has been established by the Independent, Press—Telegram to be used for rewards of varying amounts.

Identities of informants will be kept secret.

You will be paid a reward if the information you give Secret Witness results in the arrest and conviction of a criminal or the capture of a fugitive in cases-publicized in this column. Rewards also will be paid for information given to Secret Witness resulting in arrests and convictions, or the capture of fugitives, in cases not published in Secret Witness.

To contact Secret Witness, telephone 436-2526 from 8 a.m. to midnight on weekdays, or from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday. Do NOT give us your name. Or write to Secret Witness at: Secret Witness, P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, Calif. 90801.

This is how the last page of your "Secret Witness" letter should look after you have typed or printed your information about a crime.

DO NOT SIGN YOUR NAME. Instead, select a code name, for yourself . . . any name, as long as it's not your own . . . and place it and a code number at the bottom of your letter. The code number should combine three letters and three numbers in any combination.

Tear off and keep a corner of the last page, with the same code name and number on it. Mail your letter to "Secret Witness," P.O. Box 67, Long Beach, 90801.

Leonard Sillman — he has known them all . . .

NEW YORK — Leonard Sillman knows or has known everybody — Garbo, Sir Noel Coward, Mae West, Bette Davis, Gypsy Rose Lee — and right now his most passionate ambition is to produce a new show along about Christmas which'll be called, "The Best of New Faces."

When people look at him funny when he says this — and people do look at him funny when he says this — he reminds them that they also doubted him when he remarked that Henry Fonda, Jimmy Stewart, Gypsy Rose Lee, Imogene Coca and Paul Lynde would be stars. His first "New Faces" was 1934 — "40 years ago, 40 years," he says, striding around in his town house in the East 70s.

The autographed pictures of the great stars smile down from the mantle. The story of his introducing little-knowns who became stars was told recently on the Merv Griffin show from L.A.

"Why isn't Leonard here?" Merv asked.

"Because you were too cheap to bring him," said Paul Lynde.

Sillman says that the attention he got from the Merv Griffin show probably brought him 20 new angels (at $7,000 a unit) for his next show which, instead of introducing unknowns, will bring back some of his graduates such as Eartha Kitt, Imogene Coca, Robert Clary, Robert Klein and Paul Lynde.

"Hank Fonda was in that first show, too," he says flipping the calendar back to '34. "And also Jimmy Stewart but I had to let him go.

"He was this tall lanky boy playing the accordion. Fonda was already in it. They were so much alike, I found myself dividing the material. I asked Coca, 'Which do I get rid of?' She said, 'Flip a coin.'

"I did and got rid of Jimmy Stewart. He did very well without me."

Currently there's a rage for female impersonators. Sillman remembers fondly that in his 1954 show he had T.C. Jones getting raves as Tallulah Bankhead, just what the female impersonators are doing today.

Sillman also employed young and then unknown writers doing material — Neil Simon, Mel Brooks, Paddy Chayefsky, Peter De Vries, Woody Allen, and Ronny Graham.

"Ty Power was just an unknown kid . . . Eunice Quedenz . . . I changed her name to Eve Arden . . . I spotted this kid in the back row of a chorus in Paris . . . Audrey Hepburn . . . Anita Loos and Colette saw her on the beach and said, 'She's Gigi' . . . I call her 'The One That Got Away.'

FONDA

"I told Mae West, 'You would be wonderful in pictures.' I still have a letter from Harry Warner, 'We feel Mae West wouldn't be suitable for pictures.'"

The people who see Leonard Sillman talking about producing a new New Faces don't mostly know that at 17 he was a replacement for Fred Astaire in "Lady Be Good."

Leonard Sillman has it in the words of the late Fred Allen who in his autobiography said, "Leonard Sillman was the loudest dancer in history. He sounded like a log jam in a dry river. Fortunately, Leonard Sillman jilted this muse . . . if he had pursued his iron-footed career he would have beaten holes in every stage from coast to coast and ruptured the acoustics of every theater in the land." THE WEEKEND WINDUP

Sammy Cahn of "Words & Music" is one of the few B'way stars without a dresser helping him backstage: "I don't need anyone to help me into and out of my pants — yet" . . . Evel Knievel says he'll make an album (BEFORE the big jump — naturally).

MGM studio boss Dan Melnick signed Brian Keith to play Teddy Roosevelt in "The Wind and the Lion" . . . Expublicist Marc Olden's series of "Black Samurai" paperbacks has two film companies interested . . . Singer-pianist Corky Hale sold her Manhattan restaurant; she and her trio'll be featured in a London cafe . . . The new addition to Caesars Palace in Las Vegas will have a dozen suites opening out onto private swimming pools.

Lee Castle (who leads the Jimmy Dorsey band at the St. Regis Roof) played one of the mobsters in "The Godfather" . . . Restaurateur Rocky Aoki greeted a party patron graciously at his Benihana Palace: "Nature was cruel to you — it left no room for improvement."

Today's Best Laugh: A film company's trying to cut costs, but discovered it can't fire some high-priced executives — their names are on the expensive stationery.

GARBO

COWARD

Wish I'd Said That: Up-to-date riddle from Shelby Friedman: "What's the difference between Kissinger and a string bikini?" "Well, one of them covers a lot of territory."

Remembered Quote: "It's the job that's never started that takes longest to finish." — J.R.R. Tolkien.

Earl's Pearls: The trouble with TV is that we sit so much watching the 21-inch screen that we develop a 50-inch bottom.

Alan King reports he stayed at one of the elegant new resort hotels — "It was so exclusive that it had its own doctor and room service — and neither of them made house calls." That's earl, brother.

Harpsichord making comeback

By FREDERICK M. WINSHIP

NEW YORK (UPI) — There's only one concert instrument more difficult to move around than a harp. It's the harpsichord.

Elaine Comparone, a harpsichordist whose career is riding the crest of the antique music revival, has solved the problem of carting one of her two 180-pound harpsichords to engagements around the nation. She hauls it in her own Ford van.

"It's a lot cheaper than using professional movers," Miss Comparone said. "I was granted the money to buy my van by the Martha Baird Rockefeller Foundation. The foundation helps musicians, but it never had an application like mine before. Foundation officials said it was unheard of, but they finally saw the practicality of my request.

With her waist-length brunette hair and dungarees, she looks more like a vacationing college student than one of the foremost exponents of Frescobaldi, Bach, Scarlatti, Rameau and Couperin fulfilling an engagement.

"The only time I wear a dress, is on stage," she said. "I like long dresses —something in a solid color with an 18th century look, like a Spanish princess."

The harpsichord, a neglected instrument for 150 years, is enjoying a comeback triggered a generation ago by the late Wanda Landowska and Ralph Kirkpatrick. In the next few months, Miss Comparone will perform in Utah, South Dakota, Illinois, North Carolina, New Hampshire, Connecticut and New York.

Born into a musical family, she began studying the piano at five and later mastered the flute and violin. She was a music student at Brandeis University when the university bought a harpsichord. She was the first to sign up for instruction.

"A lot of people think of the harpsichord as a sort of typewriter instrument because it has a sharp, clear sound and you cannot change the loudness by altering your striking force, as you can on the piano," Miss Comparone said. "But you can overlap notes to make a legato sound. You can make the harpsichord sing. And you can feel the vibrations in your fingers, which is more exciting than the piano."

The harpsichord, forerunner of the grand piano, was the most popular keyboard instrument of the 16th-18th centuries. Unlike the piano, whose strings are struck by hammers, harpsichord strings are plucked by a quill, which used to be crow's quill but is now made of plastic.

"Otherwise, the new harpsichords we play today are exact copies of antique ones," Miss Comparone said. "Most of the antique instruments are in museums. You couldn't use them on the concert circuit anyway because they are too fragile to withstand travel."

Harpsichords are not made by piano companies but by individual craftsmen. Most harpsichord makers have such heavy backlogs of orders that two to seven years can elapse between ordering an instrument and delivery. A New York firm even sells harpsichord kits for assemble-it-yourself musicians.

The instruments are expensive—ranging from $2,500 to $6,000. Some harpsichordists perfer the natural wood look but Miss Comparone admires the 18th century lacquer finishes, dark green for the case and red for the underside of the lid.

"Red makes audiences feel good," she said.

Her audiences are big (she sells out Carnegie Hall's Recital Hall) and growing bigger as more Americans find enjoyment in chamber music and acquire an ear for the harpsichord. The lively instrument also is replacing the piano and organ in the performance of oratorios, cantatas and orchestral works originally written with harpsichord accompaniment.

Susan Hayward resting after tests for tumor

ATLANTA (AP) — Academy Award-winning actress Susan Hayward remained in good condition Saturday at Emory Hospital, a spokesman said.

But her physician continued his refusal to disclose the results of tests for an apparent brain tumor.

The hospital spokesman said the 55-year-old actress' condition was unchanged and that no more reports would be issued until Monday.

A brain biopsy was performed on Miss Hayward Wednesday by her physician, Dr. George Tindall. She entered the hospital a week ago.

Tindall said, "The results of the test are confidential between the doctor and patient." His only other comment was, "She is here for a neurologic evaluation."

A FRIEND of Miss Hayward's said the actress was in the hospital for reevaluation of a condition she considers "to be highly exaggerated."

RUN RUN RUNS FILM SCHOOL

By JOSEPHINE CHANG

HONG KONG (UPI) — Asian movie magnate Run Run Shaw doesn't wait for movie stars to be discovered He cultivates his own.

Shaw's training center for movie stars is located on a hillside in the New Territories, across from Hong Kong Island.

He opened it in 1970 to meet the growing demand for more trained actors and actresses. The school now has about 80 students a year. It's hard to enroll and even harder to graduate. Only one in 20 applicants is chosen.

The students, all young and eager, meet five nights a week in a lecture hall to begin their training. Instruction is carried out in either the hall or an adjoining room, bare except for mirrors.

There is an introductory course in the history of film making, but most of the emphasis is on the practical side of acting, says Chu Yu-wah, the center supervisor.

The students are given a script — usually a basic one that has a wide range of personalities so they can portray different types of characters. The current script is a piece called "Sunrise," which is a combination comedy, tragedy, satire and love story.

The course lasts for one year. After a student graduates, he or she must sign a contract to appear in any of Shaw's films for the next five years at a basic monthly salary of $100 (U.S.). While filming, he or she will receive free room and board.

The school is open to anyone over 16. Admission generally is based on appearance and acting ability.

Despite the attraction the school might have for aspiring movie stars, Chu said there were not enough applicants to meet the demand. Part of the reason is the social pattern of the Hong Kong Chinese.

"Most Chinese frown upon having their children being movie stars, due to a somewhat erroneous traditional concept that actors have the lowest social status," Chu said.

One of the constant headaches of running such a center, according to Chu, is finding qualified instructors.

"We can't find any local movie stars trained abroad to instruct them," he said. "In the past two years, we got two Italian-trained directors who could ony direct the students on how to perform. We need movie stars to impart them knowledge of how to express themselves."

Despite its problems, the school is welcomed by students. "In Hong Kong, where the unemployment rate is high, no school could guarantee us a ready job on graduation," said one youth. "It is worthwhile to struggle our way in the center, since we are all secured of a job."

No time to rock around the clock

I HAVEN'T witnessed a more upbeat spectacle since the University of Texas hauled out its 25-foot drum (largest in the world, I think), mounted on wheels and towed by a tractor.

The Long Beach Junior Concert Band doesn't have a drum that big, natch, but they have every other kind of percussion instrument going. Field drums. Tenors. Bass. Snare drums. Cymbals. And glockenspiels.

Those were already loaded in the band's 2½-ton van—along with 175 uniforms, props, cartons of chow, flutes, trumpets, trombones, French horns, bassoons and whatever other instruments those talented kids toot to win sweepstakes awards wherever they go.

And here they were en force, at the corner of Spring and Palo Verde, out in front of Arby's Roast Beef—all 175 of them—swarming around like honey bees in blue jeans.

They were getting ready to pile into three buses for another competition up north. This time in Salinas. They were to march Saturday night in the state's largest nightlighted parade, a feature of Salinas' annual Colmo del Rodeo.

The competition is highly competitive and you'd expect butterflies. But not with this troupe of young veterans. In 10 previous appearances, they'd marched off with the award seven times.

THE SIDEWALK was a maze of suitcases, transistor radios with earphones ("somebody might want to sleep"), bedrolls, plastic bags, sheet music, pillows, thermos jugs and boxes of munchies so not one hungry flute or French horn player would starve on the freeway.

I found Marvin Marker rushing from bus to van to nearby telephone booth, his checkered shirttail flying and his trusty whistle dangling around his neck.

"Couldn't run this band without my whistle," he said.

He's been running and blowing that band director's whistle 22 years now. That hardly seems possible since he doesn't look much older than 22 now. But maybe that's because he organized and became director of the band when he was only 16. "I guess that gives you a pretty good idea of my age," he said.

GETTING THE story of what the band was up to for the weekend wasn't easy. There were constant interruptions.

I did find out, though, that they were going to stay in the gym—like sleep on the floor—at Alsal High School in Salinas ("can't afford a motel")...that they'll cook their own meals in the school cafeteria ("can't afford to eat in restaurants")...that they were going on to Lake Tahoe to appear at the South "Y" Shopping Center and, while in the area, will visit Ponderosa Ranch in Virginia City.

A young man in a freshly ironed white shirt came up to ask, "Now, does that pass muster?" Marker said it did.

While I was still trying to figure out what had passed muster, Marker explained. "I wasn't going to let him go," he said. "His hair was too long." It's not that Marker is leading a campaign against long hair. It's just that it (long hair) sticks out from under a fellow's shako. "And we get graded down for that," he said.

THEY MUST win brownie points for other reasons than no shair sticking out from under the band's red sparkle shakos, though.

As Long Beach's official junior band, these talented young musicians (ages 13 to 21) have been state champions 15 years, have won 19 Las Vegas Helldorado celebrations, are permanent winners of the "Cashman Perpetual Trophy"...et cetra, et cetra, et cetra...adding up to more than 600 grand sweepstakes and first-place awards in 19 years of competition.

I got the idea from trombone player Dave Thompson, who lives 25 miles away in Mission Viejo and is president of the band's student council (there's a parents council, too), that he'd drive half way around the world to be a member of the Long Beach Junior Concert Band.

"It's so great...so much a part of my life now that I don't have any other friends...they're all in the band." The band's call letters are "OBST." Translated, that's "Our Band Sticks Together." And do they ever. Some even get married.

Marker can't remember how many have graduated from "Joshua" (one of their favorite numbers) to the wedding march. One such couple—Roy and Carolyn Queen—were married just two weeks ago. Now past 21, they were going along as chaperones.

I guess like Marvin Marker said—it's a labor of love.

Porno rack headlines sizzle

Red hot news— read all about it

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

"Explosive! How Girls are Being Raped in Federal Prisons!...Party Girls...Orgies on the Beach...Hollywood's Sex Secrets..." It's all in the latest edition of the Hollywood Press, on your newsstands this week.

"Raw Sex...Prostitutes Talk...Ms. Views Porn..." Those headlines and an erotic picture adorn the cover of another tabloid, available on Long Beach street stands, called Hollywood Vice.

"Porno Stories...Sex Quiz...Photo Ads..." Pastel proclamations fight for the passerby's gaze on the cover of a third paper where the name — Ecstasy — is the big attention getter. It's carefully stripped across the apparently bare breasts of a laughing young lady with a wanton twinkle in her eye.

BUT THE passerby can't tell if the breasts are bare or not. And he's got to buy the paper, price 50 cents, to look below the fold and see what he's suspected all along: The rest of the young lady is clad only in a pair ofknee-high boots.

It's printed that way on purpose. If the word Ecstasy were just a little lower, a little smaller, those papers would be confiscated from every street stand in Long Beach under the city's new newsrack ordinance, placed in force this weekend by a Superior Court order.

The ordinance, which uses words out of an anatomy text to define what newspapers may legally display from city street stands, was designed amid emotional outcry to put a damper on the booming business of using sex to sell newspapers in public.

IN FACT, the new ordinance is causing only a minimal cover-up on the front pages of the "sexually oriented papers," as one publisher describes them.

Robert G. Austin, the deputy city attorney who drew up the ordinance for the city council even while warning councilmen it might be unconstitutional, said last week that he'd been monitoring several downtown street stands for the past few weeks.

Soon after talk about a newsrack ordinance began in earnest, said Austin, the sex papers began to use a little restraint — at least on the side facing the street. In the four weeks before the new ordinance took effect, he said, no paper appeared to be violating the law.

What do the publishers of such papers think about the Long Beach newsrack ordinance?

THEY'RE CONFIDENT that it is an unconstitutional restriction on freedom of the press, but it's a restriction they're having to live with for now, according to Shirley Eberle of the editorial board of L.A. Star.

The Star, which bills itself as the rival of the long-established Los Angeles Free Press and "an unauthorized newspaper," is in its third year. It is among the oldest of the area sex papers. It also may be the most beleaguered, legally speaking.

Mrs. Eberle explained that the Star, with editorial offices on Wilshire Boulevard in Beverly Hills, has a circulation of some 50,000. Just now, it also is the target of a dozen court cases.

"I guess we're going to go to court in August, that's what our lawyers say," she said. "There are so many rack ordinances, I can't keep track of them all."

Her husband, Paul Eberle, is a chief editorial force in the paper. They met while he was editor-in-chief of the old L.A. Free Press and she was on its advertising staff, she said.

BY THE TIME the "Freep" underwent its controversial split, with many writers rebelling at increasing adult movie ads, the Eberle's were already starting the Star.

"We started off more as a political paper," she said. "But people are really turned off by politics...people weren't interested.

"Then one issue we just happened to put a girl on the cover that was, well, nude," said Mrs. Eberle. There was a noticeable effect on sales and it helped the Star set its course.

In last week's Star, there were a few remnants of the political outlook which flourished in the underground papers of the sixties.

The rest of the paper was gaudily stuffed with pictures of nude men and women — some advertising for sex partners; with ads for massage parlors and services, "marital aids" and even for "Marilyn," a life-sized, battery-operated vinyl "play-girl" doll with "human-like action."

MANY OF THE paper's written features focus as closely on the same topic.

"We're not doing anything unusual," maintains Mrs. Eberle. "We really feel that sex is a part of our life, it's a natural relating factor. Why not get turned on to the idea that your body is not dirty?"

She said the paper sells well in the Long Beach-Orange County area. "Orange County, too. No kidding. Anywhere you have sexual oppression, or repression, we do well."

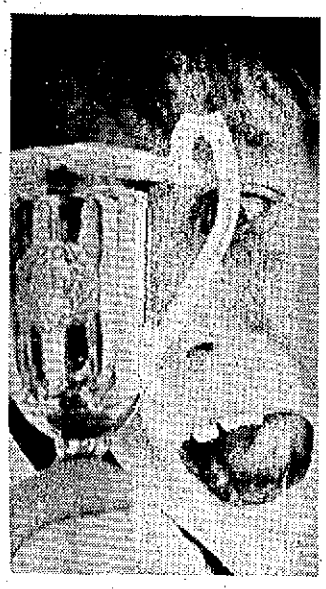

Grant Shkrab, at 31 the managing editor of Ecstasy, generally agrees with that sales philosophy.

FORMERLY a hairdresser, Shkrab entered the underground newspaper field some two years ago as an advertising and circulation employe of The Staff, the North front collapses in build strike

By CHARLES SUTTON
Staff Writer

If there were any communiques between leaders of the various contractor groups involved in the statewide construction strike last week, the crucial message must have read: Our northern front has collapsed.

And, indeed, around 11:30 a.m. Thursday, it was announced that Northern California contractors who had been in the fifth week of a strike by the Carpenters Union had hoisted the white flag and agreed to a settlement calling for an additional $1.75 hour in wages and fringe benefits over a one-year period.

In Southern California, where the contractors are now in the third week of a strike by the carpenters, cement masons and laborers, there was little attempt to gloss over the fact that the north had capitualted.

"We knew it was coming," declared contractor spokesman Dan Peterson. "We prevailed on the North to hold out for a while" he added. But eventually, he said, the effects of two strikes within the space of half-a year were bound to take their toll. The northern contractors had gone through a seven-week strike around December of last year, and now the most recent walkout had stretched the total to nearly 13 weeks of idleness.

"We don't think we signed a good agreement," said Wendell Reed, a spokesman for the Northern California contractors. "But we had a gun at our heads, and we gave in."

The question is, does the Northern California settlement presage a similar agreement here? Is it now only a matter of time before the four major contractor associations in Southern California also cave in?

It would seem so. And, in fact, Reed agrees that the northern settlement will have some effect on the Southern California dispute. But he also says, surprisingly, that the effect will be "minor."

For Dan Peterson, the contractors' chief negotiator in Southern California, the answer is even more emphatic. The northern settlement, he insists, will have "absolutely no effect on us in Southern California. I disagree violently with the idea that it will hurt us down here."

Reporting medial news

More and more, the American physician wants to play editor.

He wants to determine what goes into a newspaper or magazine and what is shown on television when it comes to news of medical and surgical research.

AS A CONSEQUENCE, doctors frequently cite "rules" they like to call medical ethics.

One such rule, a doctor suggests in a letter we print today, is that a physician's name cannot appear in the press in connection with medical research.

We have yet to find a newspaper, magazine or television station that abides by this so-called rule of ethics. Every newspaper we know of uses the medical investigator's name when discussing a research project.

ANOTHER RULE, we are told, is that research must be published in a medical journal before being discussed in the lay press. That's not so. Even Dr. Ernest B. Howard, the executive vice president of the American Medical Association, denies this. He has told the National Association of Science Writers there's no such "rule" insofar as the AMA is concerned.

Informed of this, one physician recently told one of our writers: "I don't care what he said. It's wrong."

Doctors, who are trained to be careful observers, have a blind spot when it comes to newspapers. Day after day, newspapers, wire services, newsmagazines, general magazines, radio and television employ doctors' names, write or tell about medical research, tackle medical controversy — yet doctors say it's just not done.

In medicine, this is known as a reverse hallucination — that is, failing to see something that exists right in front of your face.

FOR SOME reason unknown to us, ophthalmologists appear to be the most uptight about news in their field, even though the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology regularly issues press releases about the research of its members. Probably the eye doctors aren't even aware they employ a public relations agency.

It would be interesting to know why they protest so much. One of our editors recently telephoned a local ophthalmologist asking for a routine examination. That was in June, and the receptionist told him he could see the doctor next February.

Honest.

So it can't be that someone is taking business away from another. If anyone finds out the reason, let us know.

In the meantime we will continue to do our duty to the public by publishing stories regarding medicine, including research. It's the public's health that is at stake in the long run and we—like other editors—feel the public has the right to know what is going on in such an important field of human endeavor.

Playing charades again in politics

SACRAMENTO — Charades is a game in which one player provides clues to the parts of words and titles, with the other participants trying to use the clues to come up with the title.

POLITICIANS and bureauerats try to play that game, too. It is never clear why they play it, when to play it permits wrong guesses to be made — and circulated — about what they mean. But they play it.

Last week, for example, Vic Biondi, a Sacramento-based television newsman for a Los Angeles station did a story on a slick public relations campaign the California Association of Highway Patrolmen is putting on to pressure the Legislature and the governor for a pay raise.

Ralph Schiavone, executive manager of the association, told Biondi the public relations campaign was preferable to "a more drastic approach" to getting increased pay. There were several other inferences about alternatives which the patrolmen, reluctantly, might have to employ to make their point.

Bob Schmidt

View From Our State Bureau

"You mean strike?" asked Biondi.

"You used that word, I didn't," Schiavone said, obviously pleased that his clues had been picked up, but that he himself had not delivered a threat to the state.

IT IS A STRANGE game, and it is played frequently, with newsmen as unwilling participants.

Earlier this year, Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. called a press conference to point out that circumstances of President Nixon's tax deduction claim on his vice-presidential papers were susceptible of challenge. He pointed out facts which appeared to be in conflict and upon which such challenges could be made.

"Are you accusing the President of being a tax cheat?" Brown was asked.

"I'm simply presenting facts. Draw your own conclusions," he replied.

MAYBE THERE'S a difference between making a flat statement that "President Nixon is a tax cheat" or "The highway patrolmen are going to go on strike if they don't get more money," and making statements which lead to those conclusions but avoiding the conclusion itself.

But the difference, if any, is only in the mind of the person making the statement. Certainly people who saw Biondi's televised interview with Schiavone thought he was threatening the state with a strike. Certainly people who saw the Jerry Brown press conference thought he was accusing the President.

In 1968, Ronald Reagan was a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. A "political advisor," F. Clifton White, had been hired. There were Reagan-for-President groups springing up around the country. There were junkets from state to state during which Reagan and White talked to GOP leaders and delegates.

BUT, THE GOVERNOR insisted, he was not a candidate. He had not announced his candidacy formally, and so he was not a candidate.

His coyness cost him, as things turned out. By the time he decided to admit that he was a candidate, too many delegates had given their commitments to Richard Nixon, who said he was, indeed, a candidate.

Californians are about to be subjected to the same game from Reagan, it appears. He is certainly a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination, formal or informal, and why he doesn't just come out and say it and invite potential supporters to express themselves is a mystery.

But he is a politician, and politicians must play their game. Not all, but most.

Crisis builds on Palestinian issue

AMMAN — A new coalition between Jordan, Egypt and Syria, a development unthinkable before the Yom Kippur war of last October, now threatens to upset the U.S. timetable for stage two of gradual Israeli withdrawal from its occupied Arab territories.

INSTEAD of focusing the initial phase of stage two on deeper Israeli withdrawal from the Egyptian-Sinai peninsula, as both Israel and the U.S. want, the three principal Arab states — Egypt, Syria and Jordan — are forming a common front for a far more difficult objective. They want to compel Israel to face up now to the toughest of all the territorial issues: return of the Palestinian West Bank of Jordan with its long frontier with Israel proper.

Robert Novak
Inside Report
Rowland Evans

The gradual coalescing of Israel's three principal neighbors, moreover, is being powerfully assisted by leading Palestinians in and out of King Hussein's government: These Palestinians both here in Hussein's east bank kingdom and in the Israeli-occupied west bank of the Jordan River, are quietly pressuring the King to make political overtures to Yassir Arafat, who heads the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO).

THAT PLAN has the muscular backing of Syria's President Hafez Assad, now riding high on the strength of the Israeli pullback on the Golan Heights, and Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's closest collaborator in the brilliant diplomacy of the past six months.

But there is a terrible danger in the game plan now being drafted by the Arab triumvirate — Hussein, Sadat and Assad. If Israel refuses to play, a new Middle East war by the end of this year is better than a 50-50 proposition, coupled with a drastic reduction of Saudi Arabian oil production from the present 9 million to 3 million barrels a day, threatening another U.S. gasoline famine.

The U.S. plan for stage two of a Middle Eastern settlement is focused on Egypt, with a new Israeli pullback from the desert sands of Sinai to be followed by an Egyptian-Israeli pledge of nonbelligerency. Only after that will Israel feel confident enough to negotiate withdrawal from the West Bank.

SADAT, HOWEVER, seems unwilling to risk getting so far in front of his Arab allies. Likewise, Assad and Sadat both know that the crux of the Israeli problem is the West Bank — that to settle Sinai and even the Syrian Golan Heights before Israel shows its hand on the West Bank would be to treat the symptoms but not the disease.

The most remarkable aspect of the developing common front in the quiet pressure of Assad and Sadat on Arafat to let Hussein have the leading role in negotiations with Israel over return of the West Bank. Assad has sent word here that it would be "stupid" to get bogged down over the precise political future of a possible Palestinian state on the West Bank until after Israel withdraws. That amounts to an appeal to Arafat to stay in the background at this stage, an appeal that seems directly at odds with the Soviet buildup of Arafat as Moscow's Mideast ace-in-the-hole.

The pace of this diplomacy is accelerating. Assad sent his foreign minister here two weeks ago to counsel rapprochement between Hussein and Arafat; Sadat entertained Hussein in Cairo last week; a meeting of the three foreign ministers is secretly planned for late next month, just before the Arab summit at Rabat, Morocco, in September. The single objective: a unified West Bank position by the three Arab states whose borders all join Israel, with Arafat a symbolic partner.

THUS HUSSEIN has come from Arab outcast to principal actor in the unfolding Arab strategy. He is being discreetly pressed here to give Palestinians more prominent roles in his government, particularly in his palace guard and army, both long dominated by non-Palestinian Bedouins. That would strengthen his plan for a united Arab kingdom if and when Israel returns the West Bank.

Hussein, however, confronts internal problems. Some of his Bedouin advisers, fearful of an eventual Palestinian takeover, want no part of any future political arrangement that links the Bedouin-controlled East Bank to the turbulent Palestinian West Bank.

But Hussein's far greater problem is what happens if Israel says no to the joint Arab timetable. Then in the words of Prime Minister Zaid Rifai, "Only direct intervention from Washington" can prevent stalemate and deadlock, climaxing in a fifth Arab-Israeli war.

Letters to the editor

Don't report experiments

EDITOR:

This letter is in reference to an article that appeared on the front page of your Saturday, June 22, edition.

Although the article was well written by (medical-science editor) Ben Zinser, it was, I think, very detrimental. It is my opinion that a discussion of experimental eye surgery should not appear on the front page of a daily newspaper.

It is my understanding that this is the second such article that your paper has printed regarding experimental eye surgery.

I do not believe that the press should be a forum for discussion of experimental procedures. It is my understanding that these procedures should be submitted to medical journals and be studied in detail over long periods of time to determine the efficacy of the procedure. Thus, I think, it was unfortunate that your readers are misled by this kind of press.

It is my understanding, also, that a physician should not allow his name to appear in print regarding these matters. In fact, I think it is considered unethical for this to occur and it was a mistake on your part to allow the physician's name to appear in print.

The American press does do a great service to the public by reporting on new and interesting developments in the field of medicine. However, experimental surgery should be stated as such and only the scientific journals be allowed to publish material that is in the experimental realm.

Surgery report praised

EDITOR:

On behalf of the board of directors and the members of the medical staff, I wish to express our pleasure in having Mr. Ben Zinser present at the general staff meeting at which Dr. Marcus J. Lemley spoke.

We were tremendously pleased with his article, which appeared on page one of the Independent, Press-Telegram of Saturday, June 22.

We will inform you in the future of any notable event occurring here at Woodruff Community Hospital which we feel you may wish to consider for an article in your newspaper.

Nude bathing

EDITOR:

I highly disagree with the decision that public nudity on beaches is shameful, or that it will cause a mass of lurid actions. I'm sure there are others that share my opinion.

The time of Queen Victoria is far behind us, so why the feeling that nudity is immoral? The human body is a beautiful thing, so why hide it under swimsuits? Besides, with today's swimwear, people are practically nude anyway. Man was born naked, so why shouldn't he be allowed to continue being naked, even if it is only on a beach.

In your July 11 edition it says, in an article on anti-nudity, that 24 hours after nudity was opened on a beach, a woman was raped. Rape occurs all the time, everywhere. I'm not saying rape is right, but there are bad people everywhere. But this is only one incident. That should not be enough to condemn something for thousands, even millions, of others who don't want anything more than an opportunity to relax in the sun the way they were born, naked.

I, for one, enjoy nudity. It relaxes me and enables me to get back to nature and become part of it without traveling far from home.

There is one item I would like to mention. In Japan, men and women are allowed to bathe together. Since this was allowed, the number of rapes in Japan dropped considerably.

And in many European countries, nudity is allowed on beaches, and it works for them.

I say, make swimwear optional on all beaches, no matter how public. And if there is any attempt to outlaw nudity, it should be put to a vote open to anyone who wishes to vote, no matter what age.

Useful metal

EDITOR:

In reply to Pat Kroek's letter, "It's all fools' gold," the writer had better read up on the uses of gold.

I have been in the sign business for 60-odd years and have lettered hundreds of gold leaf signs on windows, office doors, etc., and have gilded hundreds of carved, raised letters for store fronts.

Gold is used for much more than filling teeth.

Crimes up more than population

According to FBI statistics, the crime rate in the nation has increased in the past 10 years by 174 per cent. This is compared with the population increase of only 11 per cent. For that 10-year period murders have increased from 8,500 in 1963 to 19,600 in 1973 an increase of 129 per cent. Forcible rape is up from 17,490 in 1963 to 51,000 in 1973. Robberies are up from 115,930 in 1963 to 378,400 in 1973. Aggravated assaults were 172,250 in 1963 up to 412,000 in 1973. All reported crimes given as 314,200 in 1963 up to 861,000 in 1973.

These are alarming figures given by the FBI computation of crimes reported from all sections of the country. But it is more alarming when police officials estimate that only about half the crimes are actually reported. They call for greater responsibility of the average citizen in reporting crimes they have seen or that involved them.

Reasons given by the police as to why so many crimes are not reported is that individuals do not want to be involved in having to appear in court or being subjected to questioning by the police. Some are fearful that there may be revengeful action against themselves by those who may be punished by such reporting.

IN THEIR EFFORTS to cut down crime police forces have been enlarged. They hav tested larger police patrolling of streets and neighborhoods, some have tried policemen on foot patrols. The cost of local law enforcement for the nation has increased 7 times from $1 billion in 1964 to $7 billion in 1973. The federal government has added another $3.5 billion in the last five years.

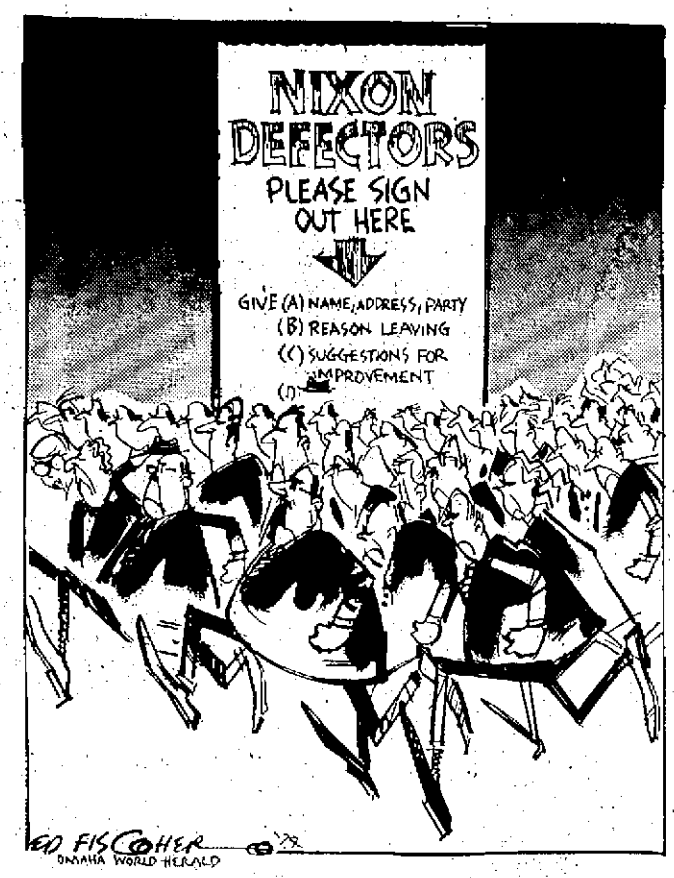

A nationwide poll showed 40 per cent of the people surveyed were afraid to walk the streets at night, in some cities the response was 67 per cent of the people have such fears. For many years this applied to only the large cities. But in recent years the fear has applied to suburbs and smaller cities as well.

The one city that has lowered its crime rate in the past five years is the nation's capital. It had come to be referred to as the crime capital of the country. But it has had a 38 per cent reduction in crime in the last few years. This is attributed to using many improved police methods. But the real reason given is that in Washington, D.C. the FBI and other government agencies have joined in the effort to bring that violent crime area under greater control.

THE EXPERTS say one of the most needed change would be in the courts. They would have more courtrooms and use of computers to pick out the criminals with records of crime and provide for speedy trials. They would have such criminals on trial in 6 to 7 weeks instead of a year in many cases.

A former police official of Washington and New York City says: "There is to much instability in our cities. As long as we have unemployment, broken homes, alcoholism, drugs and mental health problems, we are going to have crime. One fact emerges, what we have tried to do so far has not worked and some new ways must be found if the U.S. is to solve its crime problem."

It is a depressing picture. It is a problem each of us must take part in solving. That calls for every citizen to cooperate by calling the police when they are personally involved or when they see a crime committed. Those who fail to do so are adding to the problem and thereby placing themselves and the nation in even greater danger.

Storm on economic scene

WASHINGTON — All of the excitement on Capitol Hill does not center in the House Judiciary Committee. There is thunder and lightning of Wagnerian opera intensity in the hearings of the House Banking and Currency Committee, and other committees that deal with monetary matters.

There is a clash between the House Banking and Currency Committee Chairman, Rep. Wright Patman, D.-Tex., and some others on the committee vis-a-vis the Federal Reserve Board, the Treasury Department, and, to a lesser degree, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

THE CONTROVERSY centers on legislation proposed by Chairman Patman and several cosponsors aimed at stopping a proliferation of security offerings such as the one proposed by Citicorp, the parent company of the nation's second largest bank, First National City Bank of New York. These securities, totaling $850 million, which Citicorp wishes to issue, would carry a floating interest rate, above the rate of Treasury bills.

The first bill introduced by Rep. Patman to block these and similar securities would permit the Federal Reserve System, the secretary of the Treasury, the FHLBB, and the FDIC to pass on such issues to determine whether or not they are in the public interest.

The objection of Chairman Patman and the cosponsors of his bill to the proposed new securities is that they would be harmful to the savings and loan and other thrift institutions, to the steady flow of credit for long-term mortgages, and unfair to savers of modest means.

Rep. Patman said, " ... it is sad ... but instructive that the Federal Reserve did not better foresee the dislocations which would be caused by its confused monetary policies. He had urged, he said, Federal Reserve Chairman Dr. Arthur F. Burns, to request Citicorp for a two-weeks delay in issuing the floating interest notes so that the Congress and the federal regulatory agencies could study the matter. Mr. Patman charged that, although Dr. Burns complied, he "apparently entered into secret negotiations with the chairman of Citicorp, Walter Wriston, and agreed on new terms for the issue."

MR. PATMAN ALSO said that despite its negotiations with the Fed and "its many public statements," Citicorp refused to send a witness to the Banking and Currency Committee hearings.

Vice Chairman of the Fed, George W. Mitchell, Treasury Under Secretary, George C. Schmults, FHLBB Chairman, Thomas R. Bomar, and FDIC Chairman, Frank Wille, testified that they oppose the Patman legislation.

The most negative, Mr. Schmults, said, "The Treasury is prepared to oppose even the first step towards capital controls which would thrust the government into the heart of the private decision-making process." He maintained that the new offerings would be beneficial to "small investors." In its first proposal, Citicorp had set the initial minimum subscription at $5,000. Their new proposal would lower the minimum to $1,000.

Angered by the Treasury official's term "small investor," Rept. Frank Annunzio, D.-Ill., demanded that all of the federal officials write, for the committee record, their definition of a "small investor."

THE TREASURY undersecretary suggested that government regulations might be changed to allow savings and loan institutions, and banks to raise the interest rate ceilings to allow them to be competitive to the Citicorp issues.

The Fed's Mr. Mitchell testified that the Citicorp-type securities offer "significant public benefits in the form of improved opportunities to the individual savers-investors, and reduced pressure on the commercial paper market and a stronger financing condition for issuing bank holding companies." He said that rather than limit Citicorp's proposed issue now, the Fed thinks it is best to observe the innovative proposal in its early stage. He believes, if Citicorp's issue is successful, the type will spread to include public utilities and "national firms primarily engaged in non-financial business."

Rep. William A. Barrett, D.-Pa., reminded Mitchell that Dr. Burns said recently no country has been able to maintain prosperity once inflation got out of control. Mr. Mitchell indicated that inflation is out of control.

Testifying for home builders, Nathan N. Rogg said that the Citicorp notes and others like it would "have a disastrous effect on the home building industry's ability to function."

Representatives of the savings and loan industry urged that the Citicorp issue and similar ones be blocked.

Over milk price supports

Hardin: man in a tough spot

WASHINGTON — Former Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin isn't in the clear yet on the highly questionable affidavit he signed concerning his reason for reversing himself and boosting dairy price supports to 85 per cent of parity on March 25, 1971.

That affidavit, signed by Hardin on March 7, 1972, is at odds with hundreds of pages of testimony and documents compiled by the Senate Select Watergate Committee showing the strong currents of political campaign cash flowing from the dairy industry to the Nixon re-election committee.

Reliable sources also report the White House tapes of two of Mr. Hardin's meetings with President Nixon on March 23, 1971, are at variance with his affidavit swearing under oath there were no other considerations than "the statutory criteria" involved in his unusual decision to boost milk supports from $4.66 to $4.93 per hundredweight.

AT THE HEART of Hardin's problem are these factors:

1. On March 12, 1971, after several months of compiling economic reports and dairy forecasts in the normal departmental manner, Hardin announced dairy support-levels would be $4.66 per hundredweight, or 80 per cent of parity.

2. On March 23, 1971, Hardin met at 10:30 a.m. at the White House with the President, dairy industry officials and lawyers in the Cabinet room to discuss political and economic arguments for higher dairy supports.

3. On March 23, at 4:45 p.m., Hardin again met with the President, then Treasury Secretary John Connally, then Special Assistant John Ehrlichman and others from the administration. The President made the decision to increase milk price supports and there was a discussion of having special counsel Charles Colson alert the milk producers to the decision.

4. AT 11 P.M. that night, Herbert Kalmbach, the President's personal lawyer and fund raiser, met with Murray Chotiner, a lawyer for dairy interests, and Harold Nelson, general manager for the Associated Milk Producers, Inc. The meeting was to "reaffirm" a dairy industry pledge to contribute $2 million to President Nixon's re-election campaign.

5. On March 25, 1971, Hardin announced a boost in support levels to $4.93 per hundredweight — or 85 per cent of parity — with no consultations with any of the top economic advisors in his Department of Agriculture and with no new economic reports for backup.

In his affidavit a year later, Hardin stated erroneously the March 25 decision to boost supports "was based entirely on reconsideration of the evidence on the basis of statutory criteria and that it was his personal decision" after normal advice from three named assistants. All three assistants have told the special prosecutor and the Senate Watergate Committee they weren't consulted.

The decision of Senator Sam Ervin's Watergate Committee not to have public hearings on the dairy deals saved Hardin considerable political embarrassment. But his affidavit is in the hands of Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, who also has access to the White House tapes of Mr. Nixon's two meetings with Hardin on March 23 — two days before Hardin suddenly announced the new higher support level.

HARDIN, MR. NIXON'S first Secretary of Agriculture, resigned on November 17, 1971, to become a vice-chairman and member of the board of Ralston Purina Company, St. Louis, Mo.

In March, 1972, when President Nixon was still riding high and seemed invulnerable, Hardin had no problem in remembering that he and he alone made the decision to boost dairy supports. He said, "The decision to set the price support level at $4.93 per-hundredweight was based entirely on a reconsideration of the evidence on the basis of the statutory criteria."

After sticking his neck out a mile to assert that the White House had no part of the decision, Secretary Hardin was faced last January with President Nixon's admissions that he had been involved in the dairy decision and that it was based upon "political realities."

PRESIDENT NIXON'S explanation, while admitting "political factors," stopped short of admitting the quid pro quo for campaign funds that would have amounted to a criminal law violation.

Hardin, when questioned by Senate Watergate staff members on the March 23 afternoon meeting with the President during which the milk boost decision was made, had no recollection on many crucial points. Later at the request of the White House, Hardin claimed "executive privilege" on what transpired at the meeting.

The Senate Watergate Committee didn't have presidential tapes of that meeting when it wrote its report. But the special prosecutor does have those White House tapes as they prepare for further grand jury exploration of the dairy deals.

Since Hardin was the statutory decision maker as Secretary of Agriculture, any grand jury investigation of the legality or motivation behind that decision will make the former chancellor of the University of Nebraska a key witness.

At that point, Cliff Hardin will have to make a tough choice.

HE CAN STAND by his March, 1972, affidavit in which he put his name on the line to absolve Mr. Nixon and the White House associates from responsibility for the controversial dairy price support boost.

This would be at odds with the admissions of the White House, the testimony of dozens of others and the common sense that economic conditions had not changed so much between March 12 and March 25, 1971, to warrant an upward adjustment of 27 cents a hundredweight.

Or, Hardin can decide, as others have done, that it is time to look out for his own hide and not argue with the White House tapes which he did not know existed when he made his initial affidavit.

TO THE CITIZENS OF LONG BEACH,
FROM THE LONG BEACH POLICE OFFICERS ASSOC.

Some say figures confuse people and cloud issues, but we feel the citizens of Long Beach are entitled to know the facts. We feel after you consider them, you will understand why we are unwilling to accept a raise that is considerably less than the cost of living.

FOR EXAMPLE, NUMBER OF CITIZENS CALLING THE POLICE DEPT. FOR ASSISTANCE:

 IN 1970 — 128,142 CITIZENS
 IN 1973 — 274,013 CITIZENS

AN INCREASE OF 145,871 CALLS

113% INCREASE!

UNIFORMED PATROL OFFICERS ANSWERING CALLS FOR ASSISTANCE:

 IN 1970 — 243 OFFICERS
 IN 1973 — 225 OFFICERS

A DECREASE!

 STATISTICS TAKEN FROM THE BUDGET, CITY OF LONG BEACH 1970 & 1973.

As tax payers, you are not getting the amount of professional police protection to which you are entitled. On some occasions you can probably get a telephone repairman in less time than it takes to get a police officer!

However, the City Manager has refused to increase the amount of officers for the last three years.

We don't mind doing the work of 486 patrol officers, even though we are only 225 strong, but we do object to taking what amounts to a cut in pay in the process!

We ask you, are we being unreasonable in our request for a cost of living raise?

Taps sounds for Ft. MacArthur in San Pedro

By RALPH HINMAN JR.
Staff Writer

The old lady—San Pedro's Ft. MacArthur—is about to be phased out of existence.

Army Secretary Howard Callaway recently reaffirmed the government's Feb. 4 closing decision, telling Rep. Glenn Anderson, D-San Pedro, in a letter:

"For the near term, we will retain the Middle Reservation for use of Reserve components and an Area Support Detachment. We will report as excess to Army requirements the waterfront property (53 acres), Upper Reservation (121 acres), White Point, (123 acres) and Pt. Vicente (117 acres)."

The projected closing date is September 1975, just 87 years after President Grover Cleveland signed an order setting aside "Old Government Point" for military purposes.

The fort was not named for famed World War II leader Douglas MacArthur but for his father, Lt. Gen. Arthur MacArthur, a Civil War hero and turn-of-the-century military governor of the Philippines.

The fort's need was brought about by the necessity to protect the mining of Catalina granite, the rock used to build this region's breakwaters.

Just before European hostilities broke out in the summer of 1914, multimillion dollar contracts were let to construct gun emplacements. Cement revetments were built to house 14-inch rifles that could disappear into the rolling Palos Verdes hills.

Ammunition storage dumps, sleeping quarters for artillerymen and power plants needed to drive the electric engines of a new-style fortress were dug beneath or behind the batteries.

When civilian laborers moved 111,000-pound cannon up rough dirt roads, almost every San Pedro resident turned out to watch.

The last emplacement was finished in October 1919.

Coast Artillerymen thereafter worked the guns, polished brightwork and drilled, drilled, drilled.

In 1925, Washington sensed impending danger and moved in large guns capable of hurling heavy shells 45,000 yards, about 26 miles out to sea.

The big guns literally shook the land beneath San Pedro, and after each gunnery practice soldiers were sent to nearby homes to evaluate damages from the reverberations.

Every time cannons roared, one nearby house jumped several feet—and every time the army had to pay the costs of moving it back.

Ft. MacArthur was good duty for officers of the "old, between-the-wars" army. A 1929 guidebook advised that "servants were inexpensive and easily available," and that great entertainment was to be had in nearby Long Beach. "A motorcar is an absolute necessity," transferees were warned.

The fort was also a reception center for recruits. A delightful, campy, 1941 movie with Bob Hope and Bing Crosby, "Caught in the Draft," was made at MacArthur and is still making the late-late rounds.

Only one of the fort's guns was manned the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, when Japan attacked Pearl Harbor. Mobile batteries of smaller caliber were dispatched to area waterfronts.

On Christmas Day, 1941, a vessel believed to be an enemy submarine was sighted off Redondo Beach and a 75-mm Ft. MacArthur gun possibly sank it with a few well-placed rounds. In any case, the gun crew was awarded a citation.

Meahwhile back at the post, soldiers and civilians labored around the clock to ready it for imminent invasion. Crews for the heavy batteries were brought in and machine gun slit trenches were dug across Palos Verdes Peninsula.

None were ever used, however, and their remnants remained until well into the 1960s. Likewise the tunnels honeycombing the area were not sealed off until well after war's end.

During the Korean War, the 47th Artillery Brigade was reactivated to serve as command element for antiaircraft defenses of Greater Los Angeles. Reserve units also trained there on weekends, giving rise to the so-called "Ft. MacArthur Plan" for preparing citizen soldiers.

And now at this 11th hour, can the army be persuaded to reverse its decision to close the historic fort?

No chance, says Army Secretary Callaway. But Rep. Anderson says an investigation by the U.S. General Accounting Office (one he requested) was still underway and that its findings might just cause the army to reverse itself.

Carson moves toward minibus

By BOB ANDREW
Staff Writer

Initial steps toward launching a citywide minibus system were approved at a Saturday workshop session of the Carson City Council.

The council voted, 3-0, to let the public works department apply for a transportation grant from Federal Aid Urban Systems (FAUS) funds. Carson's allocation of approximately $300,000 annually under the federal program would more than cover the $216,000 capital outlay for purchase of nine 19-passenger buses.

Under the proposal approved by the council, about 95 per cent of the city's 83,000 residents would have bus service within a quarter-mile of their homes.

The proposal calls for the system to operate five days a week from 6:30 a.m. to 7:00 p.m. along seven routes that would provide service to virtually all public facilities, shopping areas and employment centers within the city.

A central terminal would be located at the Carson Mall shopping center with each route radiating into the community from there on loops of approximately 10-mile-round trips. The two remaining buses would be used as replacements and for charters.

Projections call for about 23,750 passenger trips a year on the 25-cent-fare system for a total revenue of about $90,000, leaving an estimated operating loss of $143,000 a year.

The council also directed the staff to give immediate notification of Carson's plans to the Southern California Rapid Transit District and the municipal bus lines in Torrance, Long Beach and Gardena. This notice would forestall any expansions of the other agencies' routes that might hamper Carson's operations.

Public Works Director Phil Wykoff was also authorized to seek additional FAUS funds to cover installation of traffic signals at Avalon Boulevard and Bayport Street and at Avalon and Turmont Street.

In other actions, the council approved a proposed program submitted by City Administrator E. Frederick Bien to hire 17 additional city workers using federal funds from the Concentrated Employment and Training Act (CETA).

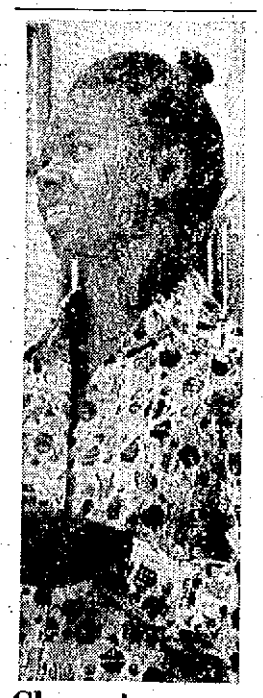

Carson will be handled as a subagency under the Los Angeles County administration of CETA funds.

Initial allocations, Bien reported, call for $140,281 for continuance through March 1975 of the present nine Public Employment Program workers plus $183,400 for the 17 new positions.

Bien said additional funds are expected to be available about October for at least another 17 positions of the 54 Carson has requested from the CETA funding.

CETA is a recently approved federal program that combines several older manpower training plans and releases the funds to cities and counties for use with relatively few strings attached — similar to the general revenue-sharing program.

Positions authorized Saturday were a zone enforcement aide, two clerk typists, five groundsmen, two custodians, a craftsman, a parts clerk, three maintence men, a safety and training officer and a human resources aide.

Champion

Martha Watson, 27, holder of the women's national long jump record, will soon depart on her 15th international tour, competing in track meets in Norway, Sweden and Italy. She will represent the Lakewood International Track Team in the competitions, which are being sponsored by the American Athletic Union. Ms. Renaye Bowen, 20, Lakewood sprinter, will accompany Ms. Watson.

Equipment stolen

Jewelry, stereo equipment and a slide projector were taken from the apartment of Russell J. Farvor, 751 Bennett Ave., by burglars who pried open the front door, police reported Saturday.

Bicycle license is the best insurance

Bicycle licenses are easy to obtain, cost very little and could spell the difference between getting a stolen bicycle returned or having to buy a new one.

Stolen or lost bicycles recovered by local police are sold at auction after 90 days if the owners cannot be located, according to Long Beach officer Morton Bilowit.

And about the only way to return a stolen bike is by tracing the frame number.

Licensing regulations in various cities are:

—Long Beach residents may license their bikes during business hours at most bicycle shops or Monday through Friday at the city's Business and Licensing Division, 225 W. Broadway. The fee ranges from $1 at most shops to 50 cents at the licensing bureau.

—Lakewood residents may obtain bicycle licenses at most bike shops or from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays at any fire station. A license costs 75 cents at the fire station, but retail shops may charge more.

—Bicycle owners in Bellflower, Paramount or Cerritos may buy licenses at any retail shop or from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays at the Lakewood sheriff's substation, 5130 N. Clark Ave. The fee is 75 cents or more.

—Wilmington and San Pedro cyclists must purchase their bicycle tags at the Harbor Division police station, 2175 Wilmington and San Pedro Road, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday. The charge is $1.10.

—Residents of Carson and the Firestone area may buy 75-cent licenses from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays at the Firestone sheriff's substation, 7901 S. Compton Blvd.

—Compton bicycle owners may purchase licenses from 8 a.m. to noon the last Saturday of every month at the Police Department, 100 W. Almond St. The fee is 50 cents.

—Cyclists in Norwalk, La Mirada and Santa Fe Springs may purchase bike tags for 75 cents from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturdays at the Norwalk sheriff's substation, 1235 Leffingwell Road.

—In Seal Beach, bicycles are registered only at Fire Station No. 1, 718 Central Ave., from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 3 p.m. Saturdays. There is no fee.

—And, in the unincorporated areas of Orange County, residents must phone the Orange County Sheriff's Department, which will mail licensing information to bicycle owners.

5 CITIZENS TO BE HAILED

Torrance Police Chief Donald E. Nash is preparing letters of commendation for five citizens who helped a police officer subdue a forgery suspect and probably helped save the officer's life in the process.

Officer Louis Labit was answering a forgery call Thursday at Ohrbach's in Del Amo Fashion Square, Torrance, when he saw a man who officers said fit the description of the suspect.

When Lee Swain, 21, of 822 N. Inglewood Ave., Redondo Beach, ran into the parking lot, Labit pursued him on foot and grabbed him. But Swain took the officer's .45 automatic pistol from his holster and allegedly attempted to fire it into the officer's stomach, according to police.

Four store employes and one customer came to Labit's aid. George Dougherty, 38, the store manager, grabbed the suspect's gun hand and tried to wrench the pistol away, police said. Alice Henderson, 37, head of the cash office, pulled Swain's finger off the trigger, officers said.

Robert Stat, 25, an area manager in the men's department, Susan Dixon, 26, the store secretary and Donald Stiebner, a customer, also helped Labit subdue the suspect, police said.

Swain was booked on charges of suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon, assault with intent to commit murder, burglary, forgery and battery on a police officer.

Meanwhile other employes pointed out a second suspect to Officer Ron Rudy. Rudy arrested John Alan Franks, 22, of Los Angeles, who later was booked on charges of suspicion of burglary and conspiracy to commit forgery.

Thief cuts alarm, takes $1,100 worth

Elijah B. Harris, of 3415 Linden Ave., reported that a thief disconnected an alarm wire under the hood of his car, unlocked the trunk and stole a large tool case and other items valued at more than $1,100, police said Saturday.

End of N. Cal. building strike debated in South

If Peterson seems unusually vehement about the point, it's not because he is cocksure about the prospects. It's because his attitude reflects the curious mixture of bravado and determination that infuse the ranks of Southern California's contractors.

What the contractors are saying, in effect, is that this is no ordinary labor dispute, but a struggle that could — and probably will — affect the nature and character of construction in Southern California for years to come.

For four decades, say the contractors, Southern California's construction industry has operated within the framework of a reasonably sound, if sometimes abrasive, relationship between the contractors and the craft unions. Now, however, the Carpenters Union and a few of the other trades are making that relationship untenable with what the contractors say are unreasonably high and inflationary wage demands.

Not only is the economic stability of the industry threatened, they say, but so is the whole concept of union shop construction in the state. Indeed, if the 40-year marriage between the unions and the contractors is going to continue, they add, then the trades are going to have to moderate their demands, ease up on their restrictive work rules and acknowledge the threat the non-union shop poses to both the unions and the union shop contractors in California.

It's a pretty tall order to ask of the trades. In a nation whose unions are accustomed to fighting for every crumb they gain at the bargaining table or on the picket lines, it's not the sort of thing that is taken very seriously. Under normal bargaining conditions, in fact, management could be accused of wilfull exaggeration, outright deceit or just plain nonsense.

In any case, the trades — save two, the Operating Engineers and the Teamsters — aren't buying the contractors' argument. And it's that refusal that underscores the growing bitterness between the two sides in the current dispute.

As long as there was no threat of the open shop in the past, the contractors could generally meet labor's demands without too great a strain, they indicate. But with the open shop becoming a serious alternative to union shop work in California's construction industry, wages and work rules have become critical issues, they say.

Unless the union contractors can compete successfully with the non-union contractors, they warn, the union contractors will have to go open shop themselves.

It's that propspect that frankly alarms the Operating Engineers' Joe Seymour, who, for all intents and purposes, has sided with management in the strike and allowed his engineers to cross the strikers' picket lines.

A number of Teamster locals have taken the same position, and the net effect is that the building trades are now faced with what is perhaps their most serious split in 40 years. It's not improbable, in fact, that Seymour and his lieutenants, backed by the Teamsters Union, will give his men the go-ahead to work with non-union replacements if management decides to go ahead with new hiring.

Carpenters Union officials have made it plain that something ugly could develop if strikebreakers are brought in; and right now — sobered by the possibility of violence — both sides appear to have pulled back a bit. Thus for the time being, the southern front is quiet, and perhaps a little tense.

The fact that the two sides have agreed not to meet again until Wednesday suggests that neither is in a compromising mood at the moment. "Frankly," says a contractor official, "there's nothing to talk about. The time the carpenters want to come back to work is when the strike will end."

In the meantime, union officials privately ridicule the contractors' argument that a hefty wage increaae will make it difficult for them to compete with non-union contractors.

"They're full of crap," said one carpenter official. "I don't see any problem in L.A., where the overwhelming majority of construction people are union." There are too many "vested interests" in the union shop arrangement, he added.

Faced with such responses (and, more often, no responses at all), the contractors have despaired of even talking with the carpenters. But if the contractors' tone is one of frustration, it is also one of forcboding. "I guarantee you that in three years, with the inflationary settlement they got in Northern California, there won't be a contractor the unions will be able to negotiate with," said one contractor. "It'll be open shop," he added.

Wendell Reed, who speaks for the Northern California contractors, offers a similar assessment. "Most of the private cobstruction work in Northern California will be open shop in five years," he estimated. "Without a doubt, there'll be some union contractors, but the changes will be great. What we'll see is a revolution in the manner and means of construction work."

Reed believes that the unionized sector of the industry — which constitutes the largest sector in California — is a like a dinosaur right now, and the carpenters and the other trades "don't see it."

A major contractor in Central California, where the open shop is more prevalent than it is in the the Los Angeles and Bay areas, Reed said his firm hasn't won a major subdivision contract in the past few years. "The non-union contractors are winning the major contracts," he said. "My firm is getting the subcontracts."

He said home building in Central California is almost entirely non-union now; and Dan Peterson, who speaks for the Southern California contractors, says a large part of the home building industry in the Southland is now union in name only.

Reed claimed that, increasingly, union shop contractors in Northern California will go non-union to reclaim the work they're losing. "They'll either go non-union entirely, he said, or they'll double breast — which is to say that they'll form separate companies, using non-union labor under one name and union labor under the other.

Sex-oriented papers try cover-up paper launched by the indignant Free Press splinter group.

From there he went to The Door, a San Diego underground paper, and on to the Hollywood Sex-Mate before becoming one of the founders of Ecstasy, now about a year old.

Shkrab believes that, of the approximately eight million persons in Los Angeles County, as many as a million may be readers of the half-dozen regular sexually oriented papers issued here.

"There's definitely an audience out there," and it's a lucrative field still not completely tapped, he maintains.

"It's got a ways to go. Oh yeah, rural areas for sure. It's the people who don't have anything to do that evening," he said. "You know, they'll sit around and maybe they'll pick up a paper and it'll bring out their fantasies."

And what are these readers getting for their quarters and half-dollars? "What do I think they're getting? Entertainment. Enjoyment."

BUT IF readership is high, so is opposition in many areas. Shkrab noted that before Long Beach and Los Angeles adopted newsrack ordinances, laws were in effect in other Southland cities such as Santa Monica and Burbank.

He agrees with the editors of the Star — who've started a separate sex paper called Finger just to pay legal fees — that court costs are becoming a heavy burden. But he's also confident the papers will remain on the streets under constitutional protection. "The laws aren't broad enough for a lot of people," said Shkrab.

If the financial burden is becoming heavy for publishers of the papers, it's posing a distinct threat to another facet of the business. Looming legal problems have Roland Keck — otherwise known as KX News Distributors — worried.ATTENTION!!!GET ADD END WHICH IS BEING SENT HARD COPY

A delivery driver for the western edition of the Wall Street Journal, Keck heard a new paper was beginning and branched out a couple of years ago. He bought some news racks of his own. They cost $35 apiece then, he said, but now they're hard to find for less than $50.

It was when Xerox millionaire Max Palevsky financed the experimental tabloid "L.A.," edited by former Newsweek staffer Karl Fleming, that Keck took the jump and became an independent distributor for the new paper. He said he would, in effect, buy copies of the paper and sell them from his own racks on city streets.

That paper folded however, in less than a year. "Here we were sitting out on the streets with nothing to put in our racks," said Keck. "We really didn't have too much of a choice" unless it was to get out of the business, so he turned to sex papers.

"Some of it turns me off real bad," he said. "But what do you do? If you don't buy it you've got nothing to put in the racks. Then the vandalism starts."

Besides, he added, "What might be repulsive to me, pornographic, might be something else to the next guy."

Keck acknowledged that he's had racks picked up by angry authorities "many times" in cities such as Pasadena, Glendale, Inglewood and Hawthorne.

"The city fathers in those little towns pass an ordinance and Christ, before we even know the ordinance is passed, they've picked us up."

In one city, he charges, officials held a late night meeting to bolster their newsrack ordinance. By 2 a.m., he said, authorities had without warning confiscated 26 of his racks because they displayed questionable material. Keck got them back, he added, but 15 of them no longer worked.

"We aren't here to violate the laws that govern our country," he said. "Hell, we want to cooperate. But we are never notified.

"What we need is some kind of a ruling so that the average man can know where the line's drawn."

Longtime exec quits

Ernest W. LaBelle, Long Beach Chamber of Commerce executive vice president since 1967, will leave the position Aug. 30.

The 43-year-old professional chamber executive and onetime newsman gave no reason and chose not to discuss his future plans. In a letter to board members, he wrote:

"It will soon be 12 years since I joined the staff of the chamber in August 1962," when he was named assistant general manager and area development director. "They have been eventful years of profound change in which the chamber has made some very significant contributions.

"But the years ahead are rich with new challenges and opportunities and I believe my resignation at this time will allow me to work for the business community in more specific ways than would be possible in my present position.

"I've enjoyed this opportunity to work with the leadership of Long Beach," he concluded, "and look forward to many more years of continued liaison and friendship."

ERNEST W. LABELLE

1975-76 president-elect W. Robert Pierce said:

"Having been on the board of directors when Ernie came to the chamber, I've watched his progress with great interest. I very much hope he chooses to remain here and be active within the Long Beach community."

Pierce said he assumed Ridings would name a committee to interview candidates for a successor.

"I think we have good leadership remaining here at the staff level and consequently there should be plenty of time for a thorough search;" he said.

Final unit at La Linda Villas opening today

Families are invited to attend the grand opening of the final unit of La Linda Villas in Santa Ana this weekend.

"Perfect for the young executive on the way up," (the patio-styled homes) reports developer Robert Main.

"This feature," Main said, "offers a privacy not normally associated with today's condominium living."

Prices range from $29,950 with conventional financing terms available. Main added that privacy of residents is the keynote of the community. "The units include privacy, enclosed patios," he said, "and large areas of landscaped greenbelt that separate the building clusters."

In a program that literally amounts to rent-free living, La Linda Villas is currently enjoying excellent public response to its "try while you buy" program, reports the developer.

BUYERS may move in immediately and no down payment or closing costs are required at this time.

"In addition," he said, "buyers may move into their choice of a beautiful patio-style unit on a rental basis for six months. At the end of the six-month rental period, the money paid in rent is applied to satisfy the down payment and closing cost requirements. It's like living literally, rent-free in your own luxurious unit.

"When these units are sold," he added, "there will be no more built at this location. The quality and workmanship, evident throughout, cannot be duplicated at these low prices," he continued. Interested homeseekers are, therefore, invited to visit now for a choice selection of courtyard-styled homes.

FEATURES include all of those which have now become standard in most new homes, such as carpeting, draperies, forced air heating, dishwashers, baths with pullmans, extra large mirrors, and complete kitchen built-ins.

In addition, however, La Linda Villas also offer some features which are truly extras. Convenient trash compactors are capable of reducing an entire week's trash to a small, compact bundle which can be easily handled by any homemaker.

Every home has an individual gas barbecue on the patio and all of the garage doors are operated by automatic door openers.

The largest plan in the community is Plan 4, a three-bedroom home with a den, two baths, formal dining room, living room and kitchen. Both the den and the dining room open through sliding doors onto the private patio. This plan is ideal for the professional man.

The Walker & Lee sales office and model complex open daily at 10 a.m.

Visitors may reach the site by taking the Euclid Avenue exit off either the Garden Grove or the San Diego Freeway.

Pepperwood townhomes debut today in Anaheim

Prospective home buyers will find a small country-town-in-the-city at the grand opening of Pepperwood, a new country-style townhome community in Anaheim.

Ultimately to contain 552 townhomes, Pepperwood is being developed in four increments.

The first unit of 82 homes debuts today, with occupancy scheduled for sometime in August, so Pepperwood buyers with school age children will still have time to get settled before the new semester begins in September.

Pepperwood townhomes present a textured blend of rough-sawn fir siding and natural stucco, clustered among shade trees, shrubs and greenbelts. The new community achieves a country-like environment for relaxed living in the heart of the city.

Pepperwood is insulated from the frantic pace of urban life but not isolated from the pleasure and necessities only a city can offer. Its convenient location placed it within easy reach of metropolitan attractions, as well as the Southland's ocean and mountain escapes.

LOCATED at 1381 Walnut St., Pepperwood is close to neighborhood and regional shopping centers. The new private community site is in the Loara High School district and elementary schools are within walking distance.

Hub of the community is a private recreation center that includes a large swimming pool, jacuzzi, children's wading pool and play yard, volleyball court, barbecue/picnic area and rustic clubhouse with comfortable lounge, conversation firepit and fully equipped kitchen.

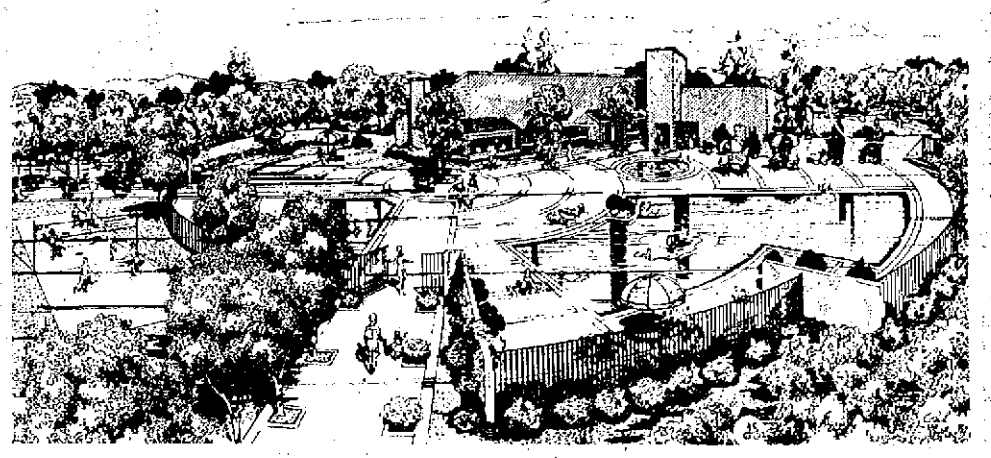

Four two-story plans are offered, ranging in size from 2 bedroom, 1-½ baths with 980 square feet to 3 bedroom, 2-½ baths plans with 1250 square feet.

The townhomes are priced from $27,995 to $31,995 with conventional loans available with up to 95 per cent financing.

Prices include forced-air heating, double-wall construction with sound insulation in walls and ceilings, underground utilities and fully-enclosed garages.

Every home provides an interior laundry wired and plumbed for washer and dryer hook-up. Living rooms, bedrooms, hallways and stairs are covered with quality shag carpeting.

Other floor areas are vinyl asbestos tile.

PRIVATE RECREATION CENTER . . . at Pepperwood, Anaheim

ROOMY country kitchens adjoin dining and-or family rooms and feature Formica countertops and hand-finished natural wood cabinets. They are equipped with gas ranges, continuous cleaning double ovens, pot-scrubbing dishwashers and garbage disposals.

Sliding glass doors allow access to the enclosed garden patios from living areas.

Master bedrooms feature exposed beam ceilings, walls of wardrobes with sliding doors and large private baths with culture marble pullmans.

One plan provides a private dressing room adjoining the master bath.

Furnished models are open for daily viewing between 11 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Visitors coming from the Los Angeles area may take the Santa Ana Freeway to the Ball Road turnoff, right on Ball Road to Walnut, then left on Walnut to 1381.

From south of Anaheim, visitors take the Katella off-ramp, travel left on Katella to Walnut. Turn right on Walnut and proceed to the townhomes.

De Ruff-built Park Westminster units distinctive

PARK WESTMINSTER KITCHENS . . . have luminous ceilings, quality built-ins

The De Ruff Development Co. of Newport Beach, pioneer in land planning and condominium developments, is presenting its latest series of townhomes at Park Westminster, a grouping of homes with distinctive exterior styling in contemporary design.

The Garden Grove community of two, three and four-bedroom dwellings are distinguished by heavy beams and finely textured white stucco, and judicious use of wood paneling, providing the neighborhood with a timeless architectural motif and adding permanent value to the properties.

Offered in one and two-story elevations, the homes are designed to afford maximum privacy for every owner.

Complete soundproofing and insulation assures quiet for the homeowner, and the street system within the walled community is laid out in lanes and drives to minimize traffic movement.

THE CLOSE-IN location of Park Westminster is providing homebuyers with metropolitan conveniences in an established area.

Nearby are shopping centers with a full range of services, recreational conveniences such as golf courses and tennis courts, and the location is handy to major employment areas of Long Beach and Orange County.

Owners of Park Westminster townhomes are getting an extra bonus in the recreation facilities both on the premises and in the neighborhood. Within the grounds is a one-acre greenbelt park with a children's playground and wading pool, a large heated swimming pool for adults with cabana and a recreation room.

Adjacent to the community is city-operated Woodbury Park.

AIR conditioning is included in many of the dwellings, and all plans have deluxe carpeting and draperies.

Kitchens have luminous ceilings and a complete line of quality built-in appliances that include range, oven, disposal and dishwasher. Master suites have private dressing areas and handsome baths.

The stylish townhomes are priced from $24,990, with 8 per cent interest rate available on home loans.

Located at 11273 Westminster Ave., Garden Grove, between Euclid and Newhope Streets, with decorated models open daily from 10 a.m. Davidson Realty & Investment Co., exclusive sales agent, has representatives on the premises.

To reach the family community, exit the Garden Grove Freeway at Euclid and drive south to Westminster, then turn east a short distance to Park Westminster.

Rising costs in evidence

The rising cost of planned unit developments and condominium units in north and west Orange County is evident in a comparison of results of a current study and one made nine months ago by the market research department of First American Title Insurance Company.

In 26 identical developments used in both surveys, the average sales price had increased $3,125 — from $33,658 to $36,784, in the nine-month span, according to Philip W. Kunisch, market research director for the firm.

Included in the overall study just completed were 54 projects.

Success in housing starts 'less than rousing'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Nixon administration's strategy in tackling the nation's housing problems has been to stimulate new housing starts by making available more mortgage money.

But government efforts have been restrained and the current state of the housing situation indicates success to date has been less than rousing.

President Nixon on May 10 announced plans to pump $10.3 billion into the nation's sagging mortgage market. But he has also pointed out that government efforts to stimulate housing won't be allowed to upset the tight money policy the government is attempting to use an anti-inflation weapon.

The $10.3 billion is coming from private money markets through issuance of Treasury notes, a form of government debt. Proceeds will be used to subsidize lower government-insured mortgage interest rates for the home buyer.

ABOUT $4 billion of the money was earmarked for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, part of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, to advance funds to savings and loan institutions.

This, it is hoped, would lend a hand to the money-starved lending institutions which traditionally fork out 60 per cent of the nation's mortgage money.

Up to $3 billion was committed to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. to buy as many as 100,000 home mortgages from savings and loan associations that originate those mortgages. The maximum size of such a mortgage purchase is $35,000 at an 8¾ per cent subsidized interest rate.

The third and most ambitious component of the Nixon strategy added $3.3 billion to the $6.6 billion already committed on Jan. 26 to the so-called Tandem Plan — a subsididy on mortgages aimed directly and exclusively at generating new homes.

THE TANDEM Plan, originated in 1969 and expanded during the current housing slump, is a home mortgage purchase program involving the Government National Mortgage Association, another part of HUD known informally as Ginny Mae.

Ginny Mae agrees to buy FHA-insured mortgages on new homes from any approved FHA lender, usually a savings and loan institution or savings bank. The mortage, bearing a subsidized interest of 7¾ per cent, is then sold at periodic Ginny Mae auctions to private buyers. The current interest rate at the auction market is about 9.6 per cent.

The Tandem Plan is committed to subsidize up to 300,000 mortages this year, but because of the numerous tight money and inflation-related problems, it probably will fall far short of that goal. In fact, the nationwide total for FHA-inspected housing starts was only 24,400 units in the first quarter of 1974, or 7.6 per cent of all starts. That was down from a recent peak of 527,900 FHA-inspected starts for the full year in 1971, or 25.3 per cent of all housing starts that year.

THE KEY problem hampering FHA efforts to relieve the housing industry, according to Sheldon B. Lubar, assistant secretary of housing production and mortgage credit, is the soaring cost of an average home. The largest mortgage the FHA can insure at present is $33,000 — but the median price for a new home now is $41,000.

"With the FHA ceiling at $33,000," Lubar says, "there's no way we can finance a home, say, in New York."

A bill with administration backing now is being considered in Congress that would raise the maximum mortgage allowable for government subsidy to $38,000 for the Ginny Mae Tandem Plan. For all other FHA-insured mortgages, including both new and existing homes, the new ceiling would be $45,000.

There are other snags to over come, Ginny Mae President Woodward Kingman says. "Not enough consumers know about the Tandem Plan, and it's not easy for the lender to explain the program. In addition, the bankers and builders have the impression there's a lot of red tape involved."

AS A result, he says, lenders are shunning the program to the detriment of the mortgage seeker. As long as the Tandem Plan is hindered by lack of bank and builder enthusiasm, home buyers seeking government help from the FHA must settle for the higher general FHA mortgage rate which was just boosted to 9 per cent on July 8 — a full 1¼ per cent over the Ginny Mae subsidized rate.

One proposal before Congress that might relieve the "red tape" problem, Lubar says, would have banks assume 10 per cent of the insurance liability on FHA-insured loans, and would make the lender responsible for more of the paper work required for FHA-Ginny Mae mortgage rate subsidies. This, it is hoped, would bring the administrative mechanics of the programs closer to the bankers.

Mortgage subsidies primarily are aimed at middle-class home buyers. For the poor (those with $7,500 or less in income), the government has a program to subsidize the difference between the tenant's rent and 25 per cent of the recipient's income. The target for this program is 400,000 dwellings.

Buffalo! Yes, buffalo

Much to the surprise of a couple touring Southern California in their station wagon, a full-grown buffalo stood in the center of the freeway as if he were glued to it.

By the looks of him, points out the National Automobile Club, he was the last thing the couple wanted to charge. Frankly, however, they had no choice, had no way of escape, had no time to stop.

So the driver hit and killed the buffalo, severely damaged the station wagon.

Strange hazard

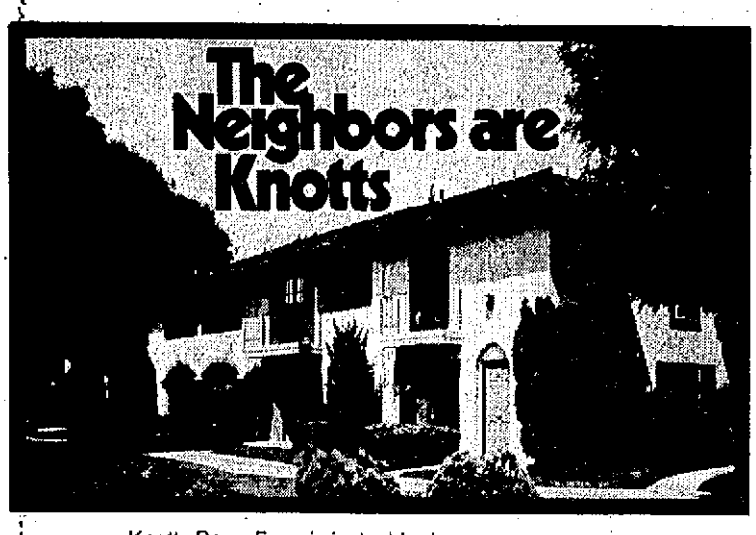

An unexpected hazard of the energy crisis struck a resident of Hampstead, a posh north London district, as he left a restaurant. He was knocked down by a hit-and-run roller skater.

$235.00* a month for a 3 bedroom 2 bath townhome.

(Artist's Conception)

And for the first year, your payments can be only $135.64 a month. That's right. $135.64. $135.64 for your brand new Larwin home. A payment so low you may be able to buy new furniture. Or pay off other bills. And start building equity immediately. Larwin has developed the "Great Take-Off" program that takes away the burden of high monthly house payments.

This is how it works: For example, on a $37,490 home, you would normally have to make a monthly house payment of $235.64*. However, under our "GTO" program, Larwin sends you a check for $100 every month for 12 full months. So your monthly payment is only $135.64. Of course, there are comparable savings on homes in other price ranges. But in order to qualify for Larwin's "Great Take-Off" program, you must take title to your new home by August 23, 1974.

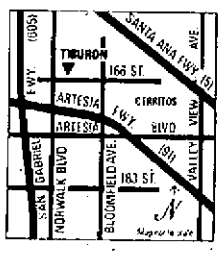

So if you're buried under high monthly payments, this can mean a new financial life. Visit a Larwin community today and talk to our sales representatives. Take off $100 a month from your house payment. And take off into a brand new life.

Now, VA and FHA buyers who purchase homes under this program will receive special benefits in the form of a 7-3/4% interest rate (8-1/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE). Loan maximums are $33,000 on 3 bedroom homes and cannot exceed $36,750 on homes of 4 bedrooms or more.

Typical Veteran Loan Comparison: (1) Regular VA loan. For a typical $37,490 home, $4,490 down payment. First trust deed of $33,000 paid in 354 equal monthly payments of $266.53 principal and interest at 9% simple interest, 9-3/4% APR. (2) Special VA loans. For a $37,490 home. $4,490 down payment. First trust deed of $33,000 paid in 354 equal monthly payments of $237.42 principal and interest at 7-3/4% simple annual rate, 8-1/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE.

The savings to buyer amounts to $29.11/month or $10,304.94 over the 354 month life of the loan.

*Typical Financing: Cash sales price $37,490. Down payment $7,590. First Trust Deed $29,990. Paid in 354 equal payments of $235.64 PI&I at 8-1/4% simple annual rate. 8-3/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE No 2nd Trust Deed.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Free, clear house gives one great peace of mind

By DON G. CAMPBELL

"Free and clear" — it has a nice, satisfying sound to it and, in real estate, despite the obvious tax advantages in having interest payments on the mortgage as a deduction, there's still a great peace of mind in finally getting this particular "monkey" off your back, in having a really and truly paid-off house in your possession.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

We would appreciate it very much if you would explain to us what the procedure is when one finishes paying for one's house through an out-of-city bank (but in the same state). Our payments are on a 4 per cent mortgage and the balance is small enough for us to pay it as we can see no gain, as far as taxes are concerned, in continuing it. Would we need to hire a lawyer, or do banks automatically send you all the papers, or what? Your answer would be deeply appreciated: Mrs. J.U. (Tucson, Ariz.)

ANSWER: About nine times out of 10 the bank will take care of this for you, but it's a good idea to know what you should expect from it, and how you can double-safeguard your physical ownership of the property. When you make your final payment, for instance, you will undoubtedly receive a formal receipt which can carry any of several notations: "satisfaction of lien," "satisfaction of judgment," or possibly, "satisfaction of mortgage."

At the time of the payoff, though, you should also insist that the bank send you the original mortgage and bond or note. With this in your physical possession, of course, it will be impossible for anyone to substantiate a claim on the mortgage — keep it in a secure place, such as a safe deposit box, however.

But there's another point to keep in mind: virtually every mortgage is recorded and the mere payment of the mortgage debt — and the surrender of the bond or note and mortgage by the mortgagee to the property owner — don't change the facts of the records in the recording office where the mortgage was originally filed.

You should make sure, then, that the mortgagee, on receiving final payment, not only signs the formal "satisfaction" piece already mentioned, but that it is recorded as well. The recording officer, upon receiving his copy of the "satisfaction" piece, marks the mortgage on his records as being cancelled or satisfied.

The "satisfaction" piece should include a detailed description of the mortgage — its date, amount, and the date and place where it was recorded and, if the bond or note and mortgage have ever been assigned, then these assignments should also be noted on the record so that there's a clean chain of ownership of the mortgage from the original lender down to the person executing the "satisfaction" piece.

And, when this is filed, the necessary fees paid, it's customary to write, or stamp, across the face of the mortgage (as copied in the recording books) a statement to the effect that the mortgage has been "canceled or satisfied by satisfaction piece filed on such-and-such a date."

Complicated? Not really as much as it sounds, and the chances are good that the bank will probably handle it all for you as a matter of course. But, it is a good idea to follow through, personally, and make sure that none of these steps have been omitted and, if you're not absolutely satisfied in your own mind that the settlement is fool-proof, then the small legal fee involved in having a lawyer check it out is a very cheap form of insurance.

I am 31, married for five years. We have no children and I make $15,000 a year. My wife and I would like to purchase a three-family house costing $44,000 which requires approximately $10,000 down. This would leave a mortgage of $34,000 at 8¾ per cent for 20 years. I believe I can handle the monthly payments, but the problem is the downpayment would almost wipe out our liquid savings. I have adequate life insurance and about $11,000 in a savings bank at 5¼ per cent, $3,000 in U.S. savings bonds, and about 120 shares of common stock which we purchased for $5,000.

We're presently paying $55 a month toward a lot in Florida and it's about half paid off (total cost: $5,300). I also pay $100 a month into a mutual fund on a 15-year, $18,000 contractual plan. I'm also 50 per cent owner of a delicatessen with my brother-in-law and have a $6,000 passbook loan on this that is being paid off from the business. What do you suggest? Mr. S.M. (Jersey City, N.J.)

ANSWER: I don't see too much of a problem for you — you're quite obviously a good, solid, risk. I, too, wouldn't want to see you wipe out most of your liquid assests in making the downpayment on the house, and I see no reason for your having to do so.

The first thing that catches my eye is your comment that you have "adequate life insurance," although you don't specify how much or what type of life insurance it is. If it's a whole life policy with some loan value built up in it, this, of course, would be the cheapest

Unfortunately, the U.S. savings bonds can't be used for collateral, nor can the mutual fund shares unless you have physical possession of them — which you obviously don't have since you are buying them on a contractual plan, in which case the fund retains possession of them. (Incidentally, in an aside, you express concern over the fund. I wouldn't worry, if I were you. Its shares — like virtually all funds — are down, sharply, from a couple of years ago, but you should be relieved to know that your fund, over the longer term, has a good growth record.)

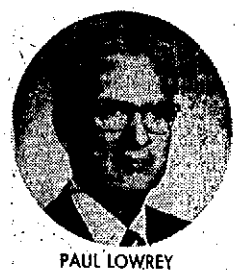

I don't think you should have any trouble borrowing the downpayment you need. You strike me as a very solid type — a very good risk for any lender.

Steel firm will build in Watson

Coutinho, Caro & Co. (Pacific), Inc., international steel traders, have purchased an 11¼-acre site in the Watson/Alameda Industrial Park, in the Dominguez area, and is building a 128,000-square-foot mill depot and adjacent office facility.

Value of the land and buildings is almost $2,500,000, according to Wolfgang Grunewald, president and chief executive officer of the company. The buildings are expected to be completed in November.

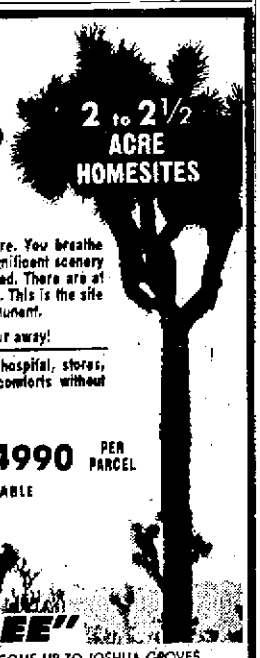

The firm is part of the Coutinho, Caro & Co. group of companies, one of the largest steel trading organizations in the world, according to Grunewald. The parent company, founded in 1895, is headquartered in Hamburg, West Germany.

COUTINHO, Caro (Pacific) will warehouse several types of finished steel products for shipment to steel distributors on the West Coast, Grunewald said. It will employ 20 people. The company also has a steel fabricating plant in Compton.

Industrial planning for the facility, and architectural design, were directed by Peter Kudrave, AIA, of Theodore Barry & Associates, Los Angeles. Millie & Severson, of Long Beach, is the builder.

Both Coutinho, Caro and Watson Industrial Properties, the seller, were represented by Los Angeles industrial realtor Vincent Servin.

A grasshopper weathervane hammered out by Deacon Shem Drowne in 1742, when Faneuil Hall was built in Boston, is valued at $300,000.

Campus Valley Center started

Construction is under way on Campus Valley Center, The Irvine Company's seventh neighborhood center, located adjacent to the University of California, Irvine (UCI) and Irvine Town Center, according to Albert J. Auer, vice president of the development company's commericial division.

The 8.5-acre center will have 19 stores anchored by an Albertson Food Center, a larger-than-usual full service-store with a pharmacy, delicatessen, hot bakery, housewares department and outdoor living section.

The store will have 36,600 square feet, nearly 12,000 square feet more than the average Albertson market, Auer said.

Campus Valley Center, located at the intersection of Campus Drive and Zee Street near the Campus Fire Station, will have a total 66,650 square feet of buildings, including 14 mall stores, a bank, restaurant and fast food outlet, Auer said.

ALBERTSON'S and the mall shops are scheduled to open in December and the bank and restaurants shortly thereafter, he added.

The mall stores are expected to include a sporting goods store, cleaners, ice cream parlor, record shop, plant boutique, gift shop, liquor store, beauty salon and hobby shop.

The shopping mall will be situated to the rear of the site with the major Albertson's store located closest to Zee Street.

The restaurant will be located at the corner of Campus Drive and Verano Street and the bank at the corner of Campus Drive and Zee Street. The fast food outlet will be situated in the interior of the center.

Campus Valley Center will have a village character and mall stores will have their own architectural identity featuring a variety of storefronts and roof elevations. Each store will have a color coordinated awning extending over the landscaped mall walkway.

THE Irvine Company attempted to maintain the natural characteristics of the terrain in developing Campus Valley Center and designed structures about a natural swale which meanders easterly from campus Drive through the parking lot and shopping mall.

The swale will be widened in the interior of the center and will become a small patio park, adjoining the fast food outlet, and then continues easterly to bisect the shopping mall. A rustic wooden footbridge spans the landscaped swale at the shopping mall.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

LEE LIVINGSTON

The opening of Lee Livingston Realty is the latest thrill in what for Lee has been a very happy career in sales.

For over twenty years he sold industrial equipment starting with the Star Machinery Co. in Seattle and later with the DeVilbiss Co. headquartered in Toledo, Ohio. His various territory assignments have included most of the West Coast and Alaska.

About four years ago after some extended trips through the South Pacific, Lee decided to "settle down" and call Long Beach home. Real Estate seemed to offer the opportunity to continue in sales without too much travelling. It has met all his expectations.

While Lee has enjoyed success in sales, some of his greatest satisfaction has come from his work with the Long Beach Board of Realtors, the Chamber of Commerce and the California Real Estate Association. Besides the pleasure of the company of the many fine people he's met in these organizations, Lee spends a little spare time with shooting hobbies. He maintains an active interest in national defense through a membership in the American Ordinance Association.

SOME OF the birds who come to eat at Toll's take time out to peer at intruder to their domain.

GEORGE TOLL fills one of several feeders in his backyard for his bird friends to use.

BIRDS SCAMPER for seed thrown on ground by the "birdman" of Long Beach.

Hobby takes wing

George Toll's retirement years have been so busy he rarely has much time to himself. But when he does, he often spends it with his birds.

They're not HIS birds, exactly. But Toll prefers to think of them that way.

It was several years ago that he constructed the first feeder — for hummingbirds, Toll explained, sipping a tall, cool julep made from home-grown mint, in the shade of his lush backyard garden.

Gardening is another of Toll's hobbies and his expertise is reflected in the quality of the blossoms, greenery, vegetables and fruits that flourish around the manicured lawn. He is rightly proud of his perfect tuberous begonias — raised from bulbs — as well as hanging fuchsias, donkey tails and delicate pansies.

"My wife was ill at the time and I built the first feeder as entertainment for her." (Toll's wife, Lucille, who died in 1972, had been very active here in Democratic politics and community work).

"THE FEEDER was designed for hummingbirds and at first they were the only birds to feed there. But suddenly finches arrived and chased all the hummingbirds away. The finches have been here ever since.

"And there's real women's lib at work in the world of the finches," Toll teased, "because as soon as I noticed they'd chased the hummingbirds off, I began to note that the female finches would chase male finches away from the feeder.

"The finches are unable to hover in the air as hummingbirds can, to drink sugar water from the glass tube. So I rigged the box with the stick for the finches to perch on while feeding."

Then Toll got carried away and added a special device to the box feeder. He's rigged it so that when a bird jumps on the stick, it seesaws down to trigger a perfectly-weighted curtain at the front of the box. The curtain rises, revealing any one of dozens of humorous or thought-provoking signs. Toll has lettered to surprise his guests.

SIGN TELLS all at watering hole for birds.

Simultaneously, a tiny light on a table in Toll's dining room flashes on and off as birds land on the stick.

THE DAY WE visited Toll, his birds were promoting "senior power," an issue the hand-that-feeds-them has been vitally concerned with for many years.

Raised on the Cheyenne River Indian Reservation in South Dakota, (he speaks the Sioux language), Toll went to work for the California State Employment Office (now Employment Development Department) here in 1937 and remained 30 years, 24 of which he served as head of the agency.

Fifteen years before he retired, Toll established a special department in the employment office to help find jobs for senior citizens.

A recent appointee to the newly-formed Long Beach City Commission on Aging, Toll has been a Rotary Club member for 28 years and serves as chairman of the Committee on Aging for United Way, Region III. He is a member of the boards of Los Angeles County Affiliated Committees on Aging; Retired Seniors Volunteer Program; Senior Opportunities and Services; and Meals on Wheels.

Additionally, Toll is president of Goodwill Industries of Long Beach and a member of the advisory committee to the Employment Development Department.

In 1964, he was elected president of the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security, a professional organization with members in the United States and Canada.

TOLL BECAME famous a year ago Christmas when KNBC television newscaster Ray Duncan came out with a camera crew to film the finches, as well as the more than 200 sparrows and mourning doves that nibble daily on wild birdseed Toll places in a homemade tin can feeder and scatters on the ground for baby birds.

"After we were on television," Toll laughed, "I had calls from people from all over the area who wanted to come by and see the birds. Only problem was, some people would drop in without telling me. There'd be days I'd arrive home and find several strangers relaxing in my backyard, watching the birds perform."

Toll's birds are not an inexpensive hobby. Each week, he purchases 50 pounds of birdseed and

MORMON MATRIARCH SPEAKS

Supports homemaker role

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK — There you are, Mrs. John Doe — home all the time and happy. Much as you try, you just can't work up discontent over being a full-time wife and mother.

So ask yourself some questions:

—So what's wrong with you in this era of women's liberation?

—Should you go see a psychiatrist?

—Are you lazy and without ambition?

—Why don't you feel guilty being a parasite, living off your poor husband's earnings?

—What kind of example are you giving your children?

—How come all the pleadings of the leaders of the women's movement went in one of your ears and out the other?

You can put your mind at ease, Mrs. Doe. So advises Mrs. Belle S. Spafford.

Twice president of the National Council of Women of the United States and still on its board, Mrs. Spafford is leader of the worldwide women's organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. For 30 years she has been president of the Mormon Church's Relief Society.

A GRANDMOTHER from Salt Lake City, Mrs. Spafford has held executive positions in the Mormon Church since 1935.

In an interview, she said that women in large numbers prefer the job of wife and homemaker.

"They prefer the gratification of motherhood, the privileges of wifehood, the position generally accorded the woman in the home by family members and the status conferred by society on the title, Mrs.

"Some activists have openly stated that one of their big problems is the indifference of the average married woman to their efforts in behalf of liberating her from her traditional status of housewife."

Mrs. Spafford expanded her thoughts in a speech at a dinner of the Lochinvar Club in New York. Members are from the Western United States who have achieved prominence in professional and business fields and now are based in the New York area.

"Working with women in many countries of the world convinces me that there is no task to which woman may put her hand so broad and inspiring, so filled with interest, so demanding of intelligence and capability, so rewarding as that of wife, mother and homemaker," she said.

"I regard this role as taking precedence over all others for women. In a well-ordered home, husband and wife approach their responsibilities as a joint endeavor.

"They cherish their children. In child rearing, I believe, there is no substitute for a caring mother."

BUT SOME OF THE things movement women agitate for deserve support, said Mrs. Spafford.

"For example, equal pay for equal work; nondiscrimination in hiring practices when a male and female are equally qualified and whose personal circumstances are comparatively equal in meeting job requirements."

But Mrs. Spafford is not in accord with those who believe that current problems and needs of women may best be met by adoption of a constitutional amendment on equal rights.

"I am of the opinion that major advances embodied in the proposed amendment could be achieved through regular channels of state and federal legislative action without raising questionable results," she said.

"By nature men and women differ physically, biologically and emotionally.

"The greatest good to the individual and society results where these differences are respected in the divisions of labor in the home, as well as in community life."

Mrs. Spafford said women should feel free to go into the market place and into community services on a paid or volunteer basis when her home and family circumstances allow her to do so without impairment to her family life.

MRS. SPAFFORD also made some prognostications.

—"I believe that without doubt many of the repressions and injustices which are troubling women today will be resolved. Gratefully this is already taking place.

—"Tomorrow we will hear less of woman's rights and more of her responsibilities and achievements.

—"Some things for which women are clamoring today will be in discard tomorrow.

—"I am convinced that the home will stand as it has stood during past generations as the cornerstone of a good society and a happy citizenry. While old activity patterns within the home may be modified by the impact of change outside the home, the enduring values which cannot be measured in terms of their monetary worth, their power for good, the need of the human being for them — peace, security, love, understanding — will not be sacrificed on the altar of new philosophies and new concepts."

What's on the inside

Policing the world of art

• Members of the Society of Illustrators rode with sheriff's deputies on patrol, then painted and sketched their experiences. Their documentary of law enforcement may be seen in "The Badge and the Brush" exhibit at California Museum of Science and Industry. See Page L/S-6 for details.

Thanksgiving in the Caribbean

• Pointe-a-Pitre in the Caribbean means beauty — scenic and mortal — to some voyagers, delicious creole cooking to others. For a view of Royal Viking Sky's forthcoming visit to that exotic port, see Herb Shannon's story on Page L/S-8.

True meaning of 'I'm 15 and a half'

• Beep! Honk! Screech! Erma Bombeck faces another roadblock on the road to domestic serenity — a new teen-age driver. For a chuckle or two, see At Wit's End, Page L/S-4.

Party guests suffered jet lag

• This party had a multitude of excuses for happening. It lasted from early morning to late evening and included a wedding where the couple arrived by helicopter. For details on this and other social goings on about town, see Socially Speaking on Page L/S-2.

MAKING friends with the animals are three of the Assistance League debs, Linda Wing, left, Dana Teele, petting Tara; and Beth Hoppe, holding Gidget.

Debs to make social bows

Six young women will make their social debut at 15th annual Presentation Ball of Assistance League of Long Beach Saturday in the Grand Salon of the Queen Mary.

"Reflections of Youth" is theme for the evening, which begins at 8:30 when the debs are introduced by William D. Hanna, senior vice president of Hanna-Barbera Productions.

A reception in the Windsor Room will precede the presentation. Following dinner, guests will dance to the music of the Joe Moshay Orchestra.

THE DEBUTANTES and their parents are:

Tracy Jane Crandall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Nelson David Crandall; Elizabeth Mary Hoppe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Charles Hoppe; Joanne Ellen Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Malcolm Johnson Jr.; Judy Ann Proschaska, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Edward Prochaska; Dana Lynn Teele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Earl Teele, and Linda Louise Wing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth S. Wing Jr.

Mrs. Norman Scott is chairman of the ball, assisted by Mrs. Arch Van Palmer. Others helping with arrangements are Mmes. John W. Brooks, Thomas A. Comiskey, Dale G. Carey, Quentin Klenk, James P. Lynch, Harry Fulton, Mulford J. Crane, Gerard Rastello, Stanley V. Hamilton, Wayne B. Sharp, John R. Cockriel, Theodore J. Webb, B.J. Buchanan, Philip Hattery, Burt K. Marter, Charles Sweitzer, Sidney Peizer and Robert Ludlam. Mrs. Max E. Nichols is president.

Good excuses for having a party

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

THE PARTY started at 8:30.

In the morning.

It didn't much matter when it started as many of the guests were suffering from jet lag anyhow.

Jack and Jeanette Haley were looking for an excuse to have a party in their Seal Beach Ocean front home.

They discovered that Allan Harbor, Don Stegen and Harold Sellers were having birthdays — that might be an excuse.

The Haleys had done some remodeling of the home they bought a year or so ago from Geraldine Sleeth. They thought they might invite her to a party so she could view the improvements.

They learned that one of Jack's employee's (Jack is Captain Jack of restaurant fame) was planning a wedding.

Then everyone remembered Bastille Day was coming up so — having found enough excuses — they invited 500 friends from all over to drop in.

Friends from all over were Timmy and Sally McElrath who dropped in from Africa; former Long Beacher, Del Smith, dropped in from Turkey; Sandy Rex Riddle flew over from Hawaii for the day and singer Herb Jeffries made it back from Europe just in time.

Gene Cuthbertson jetted in from New York and Frank Ciarelli rode his motorcycle over from Huntington Beach.

Jack closed his two restaurants for the first time in ten years (save for Christmas and Thanksgiving) so all his employes could be there.

Party progressed from the usual eye-openers to a vodka fountain aptly called "The Fountain of Youth."

In case you may be planning a party of this size, you might start with 100 half gallons of tequila, 100 gallons of wine, 30 gallons of vodka, 100 pounds each of chicken, ham and teriyaki brochette. Then you might whip up a little something for dessert.

John Coultrup probably won't come over and do the barbecuing for you as he volunteered to do for the Haleys.

At midday it was time for the wedding.

The about-to-be-weds, Art Landry and Marge Loveland, dropped in by helicopter right on schedule for the ceremony.

The ceremony was planned by the Haley youngsters, Sondra, Jack Jr. and Timothy and their friend, Mackie Webb.

The procession was heralded with an alpine horn and proceeded under a canopy of crossed oars.

Attending the couple were the host, Donna Dozier and Larry Ethridge.

Very good excuses for a very good party.

WEDDING BELLS will ring later this month for Cheryl London and Mike Mallet. Parents of the couple are Dick and Pat London and Andrew and Velma Mallet.

Cheryl has been honored with a series of showers given by family friends.

Agnes Howell and her daughter, Shirley Williams, entertained at a mother-daughter-grandmother luncheon in Agnes' home.

Nucleus of the group was long time friends of the bride's mother who have gotten together on a regular basis for more than 20 years.

Among those presenting a group gift of Farberware were Sandy O'Malley, Lynn Skeen, Mary Richardson, Loretta Mesa, Sandy Cummings and Janet Burrows.

Paula Irwin and Judy Rowan cohosted a miscellaneous luncheon shower for Cheryl at Virginia Country Club.

Family members included Velma Mallet, Pat London, Cheryl's grandmothers, Agnes Graeber and Vernoy London and an aunt, Dorothy Jean Jahr.

Jean Stewart invited friends for a champagne brunch in her El Dorado Park Estates home.

GROUP FIVE of Children's Benefit League had a gala luncheon and fashion show in the garden of Olga Bower's home.

Pots of ivy centered tables for the 100 members and guests who came to see fashions from the Silver Thread and Hill Furs modeled by members.

Models were Fredene McNeill, Chris Troxell, Dolores Archibald and Jan Leland.

Hostesses were League President Jean McKelvie and group chairgal, June Harrison. Also June Harriman, June Steppe, Sharon Zastrow, Betty Holmes, Betty Newton, Jan Leland, Virginia Wood, Lu Bretting, and Marion Smith.

TRAVEL notes...

Margaret Conn and Jane Melom are talking about their adventures on a three week South American tour.

Imagine going to a country and finding it closed.

Argentinians were in mourning for their President Juan Peron and Jane and Margaret found all the businesses closed and hordes of people standing forlornlyin the streets.

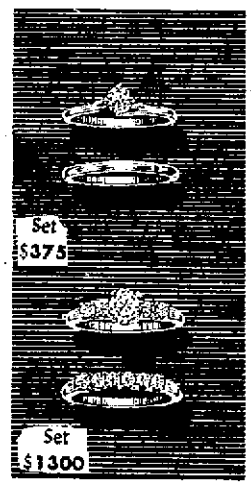

And John and Sally Hunt and their daughters are anxious to show snapshots of their cross country trip.

A HAPPY BIRTHDAY party for Lena Mullen who celebrated 83 years at a party given by her daughter, Delores Williams.

And 94 years for Margaret Martin who celebrated with a trip to Canada. When she isn't traveling, she plays bridge most every day of the week.

THE NEW ETIQUETTE

That first dance

By MAUREEN REARDON

Q: At a large dinner party, who should the gentleman dance with first, second, third...wife, hostess, dinner partner?—Mrs. L. G., Miami Beach, Fla.

A: Lucky the man whose wife is both dinner partner and hostess. He doesn't have the problem of deciding which duty dance to dance first.

When the wife, hostess and dinner partner are three separate persons, it's more complicated...sort of like choosing between three dentists. We'll obviously rule out the hostess, since all the men in the room can't dance with her at once.

Presuming that the party you are talking about is a formal arrangement, then every wife will have a dinner partner to dance with her. Everybody could dance with their dinner partners. This circumvents the problem of men having to search out their wives. I assume that the room won't be full of touchy wives who feel neglected because they didn't get the first dance with their husbands.

Q: I am a middle-aged widow marrying a widower. We will have a small informal church wedding inviting close friends and relatives. My etiquette book says the invitation should be personal notes. I would like a sample wording of such a note. Also, we would like to include a "no gifts please" note. Would this be acceptable?—P.R., Fort Worth, Tex.

A: Your invitation might read something like this:

Dear Mary and Tom:

We're delighted to let you know that we'll be married October 12 at 11 a.m. at the First Methodist Church. It would help make our day if you could come to the ceremony, and to the wedding brunch at the Comstock Hotel. Please don't bring a gift...your good wishes are sufficient.

Pam and Joe

You will note that I recommend that the invitation be extended by both you and your fiance. The traditional way is to have the woman write, extend and accept all invitations. The start of a marriage is a good time to start eliminating this archaic custom.

Q: When a person's husband is deceased, is it proper to use the name "Mrs. John Smith?"—Mrs. F.W., Fort Wayne, Ind.

A: That's the customary way of doing it. The main alternative would be for Mrs. Smith to call herself "Mrs. Mary Smith." It's not a good alternative since that combination has generally come to mean that a woman is divorced. The woman could also call herself "Ms. Mary Smith" if she preferred. I like "Mrs. John Smith" better.

When to use the term "Mrs. John Smith" is another question. It's sensible for a woman to identify herself as "Mary Smith" in social conversation, since her name is, after all, "Mary" and not "John."

Business dealings are another matter. If all of the family's accounts are in her husband's name, for instance, she may find that she must identify herself as "Mrs. John Smith" to avoid the wrath of the computers.

Q: When two couples give a large dinner party and you and your husband are included, are you obligated to invite each of them to dinner, even though you only know the one couple? —L.G., Detroit, Mich.

A: Yes. If you accept someone's hospitality, you are obliged to extend hospitality to them in return. As a general rule, it's always better to extend an unnecessary invitation than to not extend a necessary one. When in doubt, invite.

READER'S COMMENT: Concerning your article on "the gusher"...an acquaintance of mine, having run through absolutely everything else, said, "Oh, Pat, I LOVE the way you've done your eyebrows. Especially the right one!"—P.H., Scottsdale, Ariz.

Evening of German entertainment

A one and a two and off they go across the floor in a polka. Getting in the spirit are Mr. and Mrs. Dick Boone, with musical accompaniment provided by Jim Gibson on the accordion. Mrs. Boone is chairman of the annual fund-raising event at St. Maria Goretti Church. The event, with the theme "Happiness is a Hofbrau," is scheduled Saturday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the parish hall, 3954 Palo Verde Ave. Singing and dancing to the music of The Cavaliers in the old and new world tradition will occupy the evening, which includes a late supper served about 11. Tickets are $2.50 each with reservations taken by the Boones, 3683 Iroquois Ave., or Al Sviatek, 4936 Knoxville Ave., Lakewood.

five pounds of sugar, just to keep them chirping happily.

"And you know, I bought beet sugar once — because it's cheaper — and those crazy birds could tell the difference. They wouldn't touch it. I had to replace it with the sugar I'd always bought before."

THERE ALSO ARE two friendly blue jays who live in George Toll's apple tree. Until recently, when the female laid eggs, the male jay would take peanuts right out of Toll's mouth — shells and all — and bury them in the yard for recovery later.

"But now that they have babies on the way," Toll noted, "the jays won't come near anyone."

Toll admits he cannot distinguish one finch from another — excepting the males have red breasts and the females do not — or one mourning dove or sparrow from any other.

"But my wife knew them very well," he smiled, "and insisted she was able to distinguish individual birds. There was a dove she named Fulbright and a sparrow she dubbed Agnew," he chuckled.

The Aces on bridge

by IRA G. CORN JR., TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn:

What is the correct score for making a vulnerable four spade game, doubled and redoubled? The opponents were not vulnerable. What would the penalty have been if the hand had gone down?

Needs Abacus
Montgomery, Aa.

Answer: The score for making the contract would be:

Trick Score	480
Bonus for Doubled Contract	50
Rubber Bonus	700
	1230

If declarer had gone down he would have lost twice the amount of a doubled vulnerable contract. For example:

	Vulnerable Doubled	Re-doubled
Down 1	200	400
Down 2	500	1000
Down 3	800	1600

Dear Mr. Corn:

We suffered a bad duplicate result with these hands. How should we have bid? These were the hands and our bidding:

West	East
♠ A 10 7 4 2	♠ 8 6 5
♥ K	♥ A J 9 4 2
♦ A Q J	♦ 7 5
♣ A Q 8 5	♣ J 7 4

South	West	North	East
1♠	Dbl.	Pass	2♥
Pass	2 NT	All Pass

Short Tricks
Tallahassee

Answer: West should have passed one spade instead of making a takeout double. A takeout double promises support for unbid suits in addition to high card strength. The probable reason for your poor result is that at the other tables North-South went set instead of East-West.

Driving her batty without license

By ERMA BOMBECK

Who is faster than a speeding bullet?
Able to race locomotives?
Leap tall buildings in a single bound?
A teenage driver, that's who.

I don't know if parents ever get over their children driving but I tried. For a couple of years after the second one had gotten his license, I had to be heavily sedated and blindfolded before I would get into a car. A few weeks ago when it appeared my vehicular DTs were under control, another child came to me and uttered the five words that strike terror in the hearts of parents everywhere, "I'm 15 and a half."

As I told my husband, "I can't go through it again. I'm young yet. I want to live. I want to see the sun set over McDonalds ... the bottoms of my copperware shine ... the bathroom scale stuck on 113 ... I want to dance and sing and laugh. Don't you understand? I can't go through another teen-age driver."

WE FOUND THE solution to our problems in the yellow pages ... a driver's school called the Kamikaze Driving Academy.

"Our teachers are all top men," said the director, "We get a lot of applicants for instructors, but we scoop the cream off the top. Had a bullfighter in here for a few weeks. Poor devil just couldn't take the pressure. A lot of veterans apply. They think they've conquered fear, but they can't hack it two days. Where's your son?"

He was in the car holding the cigaret lighter in the air and shouting, "Is this a spark plug?"

"I'm going to assign Mr. Willard to your son," he said. "He's a veteran of 153 missions and is credited with saving the lives of more than 200 pedestrians, 15 statues, eight fire hydrants, a dog asleep on the steps of a library and a boy scout who was being helped across the street by an old lady."

MR. WILLARD appeared in a green beret, a jump suit and parachute boots. "Mr. Willard," I said, my eyes glistening with tears, "I consider you the bravest man in the world. How do you climb inside everyday with these amateurs?"

His eyes never left the floor as he mumbled, "I am immortal. I am immortal. I am imm ..."

"It's all right, Jim," said his supervisor softly. "You've only got 18 more combat missions before R and R."

My son inserted the key in the glove compartment door and shouted, "Is this where I put the key? I know how to drive. I just have to log some hours."

As the car took off I will never forget Mr. Willard's stricken face if I live to be a thousand and his whimpering, "I am immortal. I feel a little sick, but I am immortal ..."

Marvelous for any season, any day, any hour in linen, double knits, jersey, blends.

Printed Pattern A621 is available in misses' sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18. Size 12 (bust 34) requires 2½ yards 39-inch fabric.

STAN GORMAN painted 'Progress,' left, to show that modes of travel and clothing may change over the years but job responsibilities remain much the same for Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies.

LONG BEACH artist Earnie D. Kollar chose to illustrate 'Training for Rescue,' right, for his contribution to 'The Badge and the Brush' art show.

'Badge and the Brush': law officers on duty

arts

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

As a member of Long Beach State University art faculty and a professional illustrator, Earnie D. Kollar finds his days busy and interesting.

He added another adjective—"exciting!"—when he rode with deputies from the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department on patrol. His comment, "I never realized it would be like that!" is typical of the response of 25 artists who saw for themselves what the deputies do as a matter of course.

What they experienced may be seen in the second annual Sheriff's Documentary Art Exhibit, titled "The Badge and the Brush" now at the California Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park, Los Angeles. The show will continue through Sept. 1. Most of the artists, including Kollar, are members of the Society of Illustrators of Los Angeles. Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess initiated this documentary art program in April, 1973. Similar to the United States Air Force project of the past 20 years, its purpose is to portray a professional law enforcement organization as objectively as possible.

The artists took along cameras to record events, then sketched or painted the scenes. Some elected to work from historical photographs. Ron McKee painted Sheriff Will A. White posing with Teddy Roosevelt and his famous Teddy's Terrors in 1904; Hank Lozano interpreted "Pioneer Scouts, 1927;" Neil Boyle chose to paint Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, the first woman peace officer in Los Angeles County. There are other subjects from the past, but the majority are contemporary events evoking the excitement, fear, boredom, agony and happiness that are part of the deputies' work day.

Admission to this exhibit is free; hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

NEXT SUNDAY from noon to 6 p.m., members of Long Beach Art Association will take part in a "Summer Fiesta of Art" at 5661½ The Toledo, just west of the Naples fountain. The show is being coordinated by The Whole in the Wall Gallery for the benefit of LBAA which is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year. There will be work in all media on display and donations from sales will be used by the association to help maintain its gallery at 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

THE CALL is out for artists and craftsmen of Seal Beach to exhibit their work next Sunday in Seal Beach's Eisenhower Park. The show is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. At 10 o'clock, Mrs. Fay Wright, Carlos Avilla and Mike Daniels, all of Seal Beach, will judge entries. Fee for exhibitors is $2 for adults, $1 for children.

"RECENT WORKS" by Dr. Donald L. Huntsman, photographer, curator and lecturer, will be shown at Light Impressions Photographic Art Gallery, 217 S. Sepulveda, Manhattan Beach, from Friday through Aug. 20. Hours are noon to 6 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays.

IF YOU'VE tried to get tickets to the Laguna Festival of Arts and have received the usual "Sold out" answer, take heart. Members of Long Beach Museum Association will welcome you on one of their two bus trips, either this Thursday or Aug. 22. The bus will leave promptly at 6:30 p.m. from Los Altos Shopping Center at Bellflower and Stearns. The $15 fee includes transportation to and from the entrance to the pageant, a catered box supper, top priced seats for the pageant and about 45 minutes to view the art exhibit on the festival grounds.

To make reservations, make checks payable to the Museum Association of LBMA and mail them to Mrs. Leo Vander Lans, 1241 Hackett Ave., Long Beach, 90815. Tickets will be distributed on the bus.

Starlights to have 'Fantastic Finale'

What do you do for the third and final Starlight Serenade of the summer?

How can you follow the opening concert when Henry Brandon conducted Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in a program of pops music? And the second program with the Gentlemen's Agreement Barbershop Quartet augmented by the Combined Barbershop Chorus from the Long Beach Chapter and the Downey Chapter of SPEBSQSA?

That was the problem confronting Jack Palacios, associate conductor of the Long Beach Symphony.

His solution: Join forces with the Long Beach Municipal Band.

BAND DIRECTOR Everett Siegrist agreed, so for the first time the full 62-piece Long Beach Symphony and the 35-piece Long Beach Municipal Band will perform Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Recreation Park. Admission, as always, is free.

Long before the concert begins, picnickers will arrive, suppers in tow, to select choice sites at tables or on the lawn. Youngsters will frolic on the playground or in impromptu games.

Palacios will open "Fantastic Finale" with Glazunov's spirited "Carnival Overture." He will follow this with excerpts from "Prince Igor" by Borodin, including the Overture and Polovtsian Dances.

"This is delightful music," the conductor said. "It's also very familiar as the source of music for the light opera, 'Kismet.' Much of Borodin's music shows the influence of Russian folksongs and the Orient.

AFTER INTERMISSION, Siegrist will take the podium to conduct the symphony and band in excerpts from Lerner and Loewe's "My Fair Lady." Next will be Meredith Willson's rousing "76 Trombones."

Finale to the "Finale" will be the stirring "1812 Overture" in which Tchaikovsky depicts the Napoleonic wars. The Russian campaign is portrayed with the Marseillaise characterizing the French and Russina folksongs representing the defenders of Moscow. In the end, the victorious tolling of the Moscow bells drowns out the Marseillaise and there is the triumphant thunder of cannon. No longer is any national significance attached to the music — it endures on its own merits.

LBSU SUMMER OPERA

Double bill of satire, comedy

The Summer Session Opera Workshop at Long Beach State University will present two one-act operas Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater on campus. Both will be sung in English and will be accompanied by orchestra.

This will be the first presentation on the West Coast of "The Tenor" by Hugo Weisgall. The second work will be "The Night Bell" by Gaetano Donizetti. This opera first was presented in Naples, Italy, in 1836.

Dr. Hans Lampl is musical director of Opera Workshop; John Noschese is stage director. Sets are by Charles Johnson, costumes by Anne Johnson.

"The Tenor" is a satiric tragedy. Its dramatic action centers on Gerardo, a flamboyant tenor, who is at the peak of his career. On stage, he specializes in heroic characterizations and in his own life he acts out the heroic-romantic roles he creates in the theater. Reality catches up with him at last when he has to choose between his career and his love affair with the wife of a prominent townsman. Of course, he chooses his career. His paramour shoots herself. She falls on the threshold and The Tenor, carrying his suitcase containing his score of "Tristan," steps over her body as he leaves for another city.

Allan Johnson plays the title role. Others are James W. Edwards, Keith Peters Patricia Smith, Jill Joanne Goodsell, Lonna Arklin, Lee Vail and Ronald Wilcott.

"THE NIGHT BELL" is Donizetti's farcical story of an elderly Neopolitan apothecary, Don Annibale, who marries young and pretty Serafina, to the chagrin of her young admirer, Enrico. He plans revenge.

Three times, as the old man is ready for bed, Enrico rings the bell that an apothecary, by law, may not ignore. Each time Enrico appears in a different disguise and each time he demands emergency medication.

Dawn breaks before Don Annibale can join his bride. The bell rings for the last time to announce a coach which will drive the apothecary to Rome where his presence is needed to settle a will.

CHEF OF THE WEEK

Shainline open about burgers

By MILDRED K. FLANARY

Jack W. Shainline, today's chef of the week, is dean of student affairs at Long Beach State University.

Born in Pennsylvania, he graduated from Gettysburg College with an A.B. in psychology and history. Next came Columbia University in New York where he earned his M.A. in education-administration — higher education, student personnel services.

The years 1953-54 were devoted to special education programs: a counseling internship for drug addicts at New York Hospital and an internship at Kings County Veterans Hospital which included work in rehabilitation of orthopedics and the blind.

Shainline then returned to Columbia for his professional diploma in rehabilitation counseling.

HE JOINED the LBSU faculty in 1966 following teaching posts at Gettysburg College, a semester as teacher of psychology at Ventura College in California and service as dean of students at Cumberland County College, New Jersey.

At LBSU, Shainline has served as Social Security Administration vocational consultant, family, child and marriage counseling licensee and drug abuse consultant for Title III project. He is a member of the board of directors for Forty Niner and LBSU Foundations. He also has served on the board of directors and as vice chairman and secretary-treasurer of the Forty-Niner Shops, Inc.

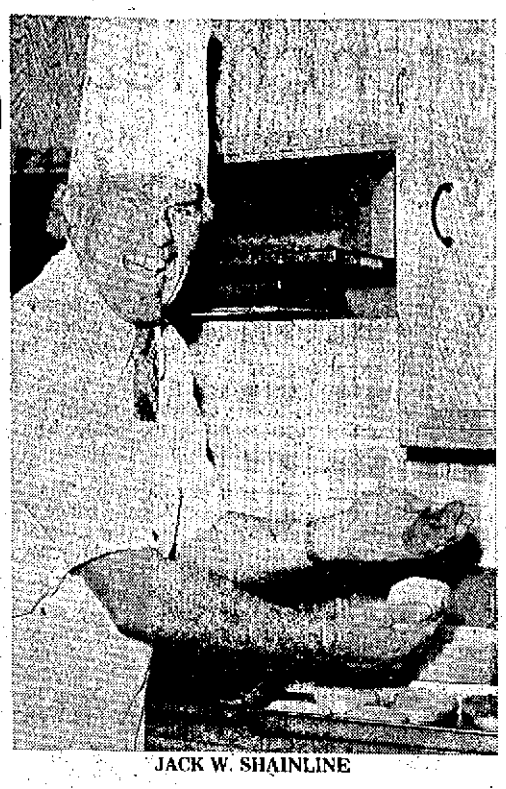

Off campus, Shainline has been president, Harbor Chapter, National Rehbilitation Association; is a member of the National Association of Student Personnel Administrators and of the International Society of General Semantics. Active in both the American and California Personnel and Guidance Associations, he belongs to their ethics and legislative committees and to the California Marriage Counselors Association.

Shainline also is active in the American Red Cross and in the Academy of Religion and Mental Health.

His recognitions include "Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities," the "Yearbook Dedication and Service Award, Gettysburg College, 1965." He pledged Phi Gamma Delta and Phi Kappa Phi fraternities.

A writer of note, he has done articles for numerous publications, including the New York Times Educational Section. His studies and research cover some 35 subjects, ranging from "The obligations of a college for exit interviews and droup-out counseling" to the "Counseling approach with the youthful drug addict." Shainline has also devoted much of his research to the subject of small residential colleges.

HIS PERSONAL interests are also numerous. Recipient of the Long Beach Human Relations Commission Award in 1973, he also is known for his work with handicapped persons, in police and university relations, veterans affairs and minority student education. He has served as an expert witness in the vocational rehabilitation field for the California Trial Lawyers Association.

Hobbywise, he swims daily and plays golf when he finds time.

Shainline and his wife, Connie, have two daughters and three sons. Leslie is presently in Los Angeles; Mike, and his wife, Ellen, are enroute to Puerto Rico where she has a teaching assignment; Jan will atfend Colorado State at Fort Collins this fall; Dennis is taking a training project at Buffums' Newport and Craig was graduated in June from Wilson High School.

Connie says "cooking is NOT his forte," but adds that he does a good job of tending the barbecue. Our chef has really prepared the open faced hamburgers and recommends them highly.

OPEN FACED HAMBURGERS

1 pound ground round
1 egg beaten
8 slices sour dough bread
8 slices cheese (optional)
Butter or margarine (room temperature)

Mix beaten egg into ground round; season to taste with garlic, salt, pepper, etc. Spread bread slices with meat mixture, making certain to completely cover surface portion of bread.

Spread butter or margarine over meat and broil 7 minutes.

Place slice of cheese on top and return to broiler just long enough to melt cheese.

The juices will be distributed naturally throughout the bread and will have a richer taste than with a regular hamburger. Serves 4.

DEAR ABBY

Latest thing on sniffing scene

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a radiologist. He's a wonderful husband and an excellent provider, but he has some peculiar ideas.

For example, when we go out for an evening, he orders a vodka martini with eight olives. If for some reason he doesn't get the eight olives, he cancels the order and asks me to leave with him, which is very embarrassing.

This is not the worst of it. If he gets the olives, one by one he puts them in his nose and sniffs out the juice. He claims it clears his sinuses.

I don't mind when he does this at home, but when he does it in public, I want to crawl into a hole.

He doesn't have any allergies or sinus trouble, so I can't see the sense of this. Should he find a psychiatrist?

RADIOLOGIST'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes, but he should find one who drinks martinis with a twist of lemon so they won't fight over the olives.

DEAR ABBY: What does a mother do when her 20-year-old daughter insists on going with a fellow who has no ambition or drive? She is pretty and smart and could do so much better. He is such a nothing. It just tears me apart to see her heading toward a marriage with him. I have talked my heart out, but it does no good.

They have gone steady since she was 17, and she won't even look at anybody else. How can I keep her from throwing her life away on this boy?

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: If she won't look at anyone else, she is obviously in love with him. Don't knock him, or try to tell her how much better she could do or she will feel compelled to defend him. And instead of talking her out of marrying him, she will talk herself into it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a pet peeve. There are parking places marked "For handicapped only" near some stores and office buildings as an accommodation for those who have difficulty getting around.

Although I am handicapped, I can still drive, but more often than not, those "reserved" parking places are taken by people who are not handicapped, but are too lazy to park elsewhere. I have seen them jump in and out of their cars while I hobble along on my crutches trying to hold some packages in my arms. If you think it's easy — try it sometime!

ANGRY

DEAR ANGRY: I don't blame you for being angry. Next time, speak up. You'll feel better, and it might penetrate.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you because I thought I had V.D. I never thought you'd answer my letter, but you did. After I got your letter, I took your advice and went to a clinic and got a blood test. I could hardly wait until I got the results.

Well, I called up the clinic and they told me the results were negative! Abby, I don't think I have ever been happier in my life.

I hope other people who suspect they have V.D. don't wait as long as I did to take a test. I am a married man, which made matters worse.

After I got the results, I promised myself that I would never let myself get into a spot like that again.

God bless you, Abby.

LUCKY IN N.J.

DEAR LUCKY: V. D. is still one of our most serious health problems. I hope this reminder will serve to jar others into acting. Those who can't afford a private physician can get FREE and confidential examinations and treatment through their county health departments. This includes minors.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Choosing the right fabric a material matter

By FRANCES DIETRICH

Fabric makes the fashion. Designers have known for years that you start with the perfect fabric to create the ultimate garment, which will flatter the wearer and make her happy.

The couturier has the advantage over the home sewer because he can take first choice of anything on the market; or have something specially created. But how do you select fabric when the budget is limited, time is limited and you're surrounded by a sea of fabric?

Here are guidelines to help make the right choice. Decide approximately how much money you can spend based on your budget plus the number of times you expect to wear the dress or outfit. For example, you could buy an inexpensive acetate taffeta for a party dress that will be worn only a few times. But, invest more money in better-quality fabric for a good basic dress.

SECONDLY, in relation to money, consider who is going to wear the garment. Low-grade chino or denim at a bargain price may not be a good buy for a child's pants that will get a lot of wear and abuse, but would be satisfactory for a young adult's sport coat which is a "fill-in" item in a wardrobe.

Evaluate the cost of upkeep. Remember that everything doesn't have to be washable to be economical. It will cost less per wearing to buy a high-quality woven wool for a classic coat that will require only seasonal dry-cleaning than a polyester doubleknit that may snag or pull, will not tailor well, and may have a shorter fashion life.

Study the silhouette on the pattern envelope to determine whether you need a soft, drapable fabric or one with body that can be controlled and shaped. Remember that your own build dictates whether you can add dimension with nubby, fuzzy fabric, or should select something with a flat surface.

WHEN THERE are a number of seams, curved seams or detail in the garment construction, focus on a solid color fabric or one with a small floral or geometric design. You can splurge on a flashy fabric when the dress has a minimum of seams.

If the sleeves are the set-in type, look for a resilient fabric. Permanent press woven fabric and knits with special finishes have yarns that are literally locked in place. This makes it difficult, if not impossible in some cases, to "ease" fabric into curved seams.

Fiber content is particularly important and tells you whether you want cotton's softness and breathability; a compromise of cotton and polyester; all-wool or a blend of polyester and wool; durable nylon tricot; texturized polyester, which provides more "give" in a woven cloth than filament polyester; or a blend of silk with polyester, which will give you a touch of silk's inimitable gloss.

Don't hesitate to test fabric before you buy. Take woven fabric between thumbs and forefingers and pull it crosswise and lengthwise. If the yarns shift easily, the fabric will ravel and pull at seams. Crush fabric in your hand to test for wrinkle-resistance. Look at the surface for evenness of print, irregularities of yarn, pulls in knits and "shading" in solid color fabric.

Good sports about gear

If you're planning to fly on vacation this summer but are hesitant about taking along your golf clubs or scuba gear — don't be.

That's the word from American Airlines.

American says its people and planes are geared to handle the wide range of sports gear — even bicycles — that travelers like to take with them on vacations. And the airline notes that some items are even flown for free.

There's no fee, for instance, on golf and fishing equipment. American allows each passenger one golf bag in addition to the two pieces of luggage he or she can take charge-free. The bag can contain up to 14 clubs, 12 balls and one pair of golf shoes.

The allowance per person on fishing gear is two rods, one reel, a net, a pair of fishing boots and certain other items (all must be in one package), plus one tackle box.

A surfboard can be flown for free, American said, if the surfer is traveling with just one piece of luggage. If he or she has two or more pieces, there is an excess baggage charge for the surfboard. The charge ranges from $4 to $10 depending on the length of the flight.

The same rules apply to scuba gear, and each diving buff is limited to one empty tank, one mask, one snorkel and certain other items.

As for bikes, American accepts both one-seaters and tandems.

It seems like nearly everyone is either going or coming from summer vacations all over the world. Many of those who aren't are planning for fall and winter trips or cruises into various parts of the world.

Particularly busy this summer season is Hawaii. Even with an extensive building program of hotel rooms throughout the islands reservations are running extremely heavy.

Here is a trip worth looking into. Try Hawaii just after Labor Day! The families and the youth have returned to school on the mainland. The weather is unbelievably beautiful. The hotels and resorts are uncrowded. All in all it is a perfect spot close at hand and modestly priced that will provide you with a vacation experience you'll long remember.

Atlas and Bixby Knolls have a number of very attractive packages to offer you at prices that make good sense at that time of the year. If you can't wait and wish to go now . . . we still have some great trips that are ready for you now. Hawaii is an experience we would like to make possible for you. French feast day awaits voyagers on I,P-T cruise

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

Ports of call are what make a cruise memorable. Especially if the lazy days at sea are punctuated with the excitement of frequent stopovers in exotic foreign anchorages.

One such day among many in the 17-day Thanksgiving season cruise to the Caribbean aboard the Royal Viking Sky, co-sponsored by the Independent, Press-Telegram and Long Beach area travel agents, comes on November 30.

Pointe-a-Pitre is the port of call on the Windward Island of Guadeloupe at the Atlantic fringe of the Caribbean. The name's give a clue to the national allegiance. It is not American, neither north nor south, nor British, Spanish, Portuguese or Dutch.

It is French, n'estce pas?

And what do the French do best? They cook, that's what. And though Thanksgiving Day will be celebrated with traditional American and international cuisine aboard the proud Royal Viking Lines ship, there will be plenty of leftover thanks to be given by Long Beach gourmets on the French West Indies island.

Not that leftovers are the order of the day. The women cooks of Guadeloupe start celebrating Thanksgiving in their own French way on a Saturday in August. The Saturday is supposed to be the one closest to August 10, the feast day of St. Laurent, patron saint of cooks. This year the date is right on target.

AND HOW DOES Madame celebrate the Fete des Cuisinieres, an elaborate festival devoted entirely to the joy of cooking? She puts away her pots and pans, bids adieu to the kitchen and heads for a busman's holiday in Guadeloupe's main city, Pointe-a-Pitre.

There is a parade, to the beat of the beguine, which was born in the French West Indies, and much primping in Creole costume and singing and dancing. But most of all, there is cooking.

Highlight of the festival is a five-hour feast of Creole specialties prepared by the women, some boasting more than half a century of culinary expertise. Many are owners of the nearly 100 little restaurants which dot the island and bear their names - Chez Rosette, Chez Odette, Chez Yvette, Chez Violette, etcetera, etcetera.

Eventually the noisy procession of professional cooks makes its way to the Palais de la Mutualitie for the fixing of the meal. Shortly after noon, the Palais doors open to reveal the result. On the main table, the battered parade figure of St. Laurent sits surrounded by masses of flowers, platters of seafood, spicy sausages, grilled clams, rabbits marinated in wine and loaves of bread baked in the form of fishes.

All these dishes and more will await the reawakened palates of the I,P-T cruise party two days after their Thanksgiving dinners aboard the all-first-class Royal Viking Sky, afloat in the Caribbean. There also will be other attractions for the 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. stop at Pointe-a-Pitre; not the least of which are sun, sand and surf.

For those who wish to seek out the inland beauty of the French West Indies, there is Guadeloupe Island's primeval rainforest, which contains natural freshwater swimming pools in streams plunging in waterfalls from heights as much as 300 feet. The famed Chutes du Carbet is one such idyllic scene.

ALONG THE WAY to the interior is the inevitable stop for lunch at one of the tiny emporiums presided over by the cooks of the Fete des Cuisinieres - Madame Mimi, Kiki, Marie-Louise, et al.

GAL-IVANTING

Bridging the age gap, Romanian- style

By CHORAL PEPPER

I went to Romania to get young and beautiful and came back the same old me.

It isn't that Dr. Ana Aslan's controversial Gerovital H3 youth treatment doesn't work. It's just that the results are not immediate. To retard the aging process, you have to wait long enough to age.

However, always one to believe a little bit in everything, I fully expect to enjoy a future of everlasting youth. As many a psychologist has said, believing is seeing.

There is more reason to go to Romania than for everlasting youth. This is a country of extraordinary scenic beauty. A bonus to the Gerovital treatment is that its clinics are established at all of the best Black Sea and mountain resorts, in addition to several in and around Bucharest, the capitol city.

The treatment is not confining. After a preliminary physical examination, which takes two or three days, you need only report for a daily injection. This can be obtained in the various clinics as you move about the country.

Romania is no place for a traveler who goes around saying that he doesn't want to be treated like a tourist. A tourist here is the only thing you would want to be.

The hard-working, grumbling Communist population is never seen in fine restaurants except when accompanying the German, French, Spanish, Scandanavian and South American visitors who come by plane-loads to try to recapture their youth.

NORTH AMERICANS ARE late-comers to the scene. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is presently tallying final tests. If results come through as generally expected, Gerovital H3 treatment will be legalized in this country by next year. In the meantime, you have to go to Romania if you want to give it a try.

I had expected to be mingling with the aged, the infirm and possibly a hopeful sex maniac or so, but the guests at the Nord and Park Hotels in Bucharest were like myself, more interested in the prophylactic, or preventative aspect of the treatment than in seeking a cure for a specific ailment.

We who concerned ourselves more with bridging the age gap struck up friendly conversations while waiting each morning for the injection. These eventually led to happy nights imbibing fine Romanian wine, dancing and listening to folk music.

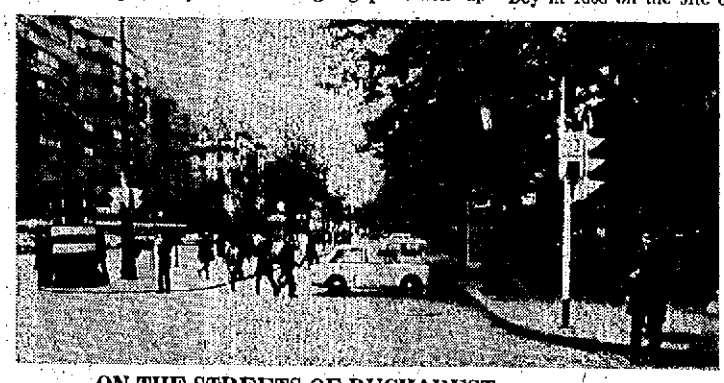

For dining, our favorite place was Bucur, a grand former residence of the family for whom Bucharest was named. Its five rooms and wine cellar are elaborately decorated in princely hunting lodge styles reminiscent of the country's various sectors.

ANOTHER INTERESTING restaurant is Hanul Manue, an historic inn originally built by Manu Bey in 1808 on the site of an old market place where merchants and farmers set up their daily stalls.

When the Inn was restored in 1971, ancient documents were followed exactly except for a few modern conveniences, like bathrooms, added to accommodate today's guests.

One bit of advice I would give to anyone contemplating this trip is to join a Ring International tour, available through local travel agents. These tours, packaged in conjunction with SAS and the cooperation of the National Romanian Tourist Office, will save you money and endless delays.

Few Romanians speak English. The Americans we met who travelled independently were not properly briefed in regard to treatment schedules and encountered incredible frustrations. Those who arrived with the tour groups received preferential treatment every step of the way.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Big wheels in Paris

By STAN DELAPLANE
Paris

Every afternoon (and all day weekends) the motorcycle kids get together at the corner where Rue Quentin Bouchard enters the Champs Elysees, just below the Arc de Triomphe.

No hippies. No Hell's Angels. These youngsters run 8 to 17 years. They are dressed to the nines in rally type outfits that cost up to a thousand dollars. Their bikes are chromed and polished to reflect the Paris sun. Mainly Japanese: Hondas, Yamatos, Suzukis.

Little bikes for little kids — I saw one 8-year-old girl doing figure-eights you couldn't believe. Priced the clothing at a bike shop nearby: Black boots with chain ornaments, $100. Decorated helmets, $70. Leather trousers, $150. Leather jackets the same. Gloves $30.

They stand around rapping and admiring each other. Occasionally firing up the cycle and doing aerobatic riding over curbs and on the sidewalks.

Across the street, Drug West Creperies sells the best crepes in Paris. They fold them into cones or into three-pockets like Mexican tortillas. (The Sonora fold.)

Each pocket holds something: chopped lamb, mint jelly, salad. Lots of dessert crepes too. Price $1.50 to $5 and they're worth every franc.

Absolute MUST in this area, a block away, is the Renault auto agency. Go above the model exhibit to the mezzanine where there's a restaurant. The booths are antique automobile bodies. The lighting is from old-style auto lamps. Fenders and wheels are used for ornaments. And the food is excellent.

On the second floor there's a collection of restored antique Renaults dating back to 1898. Includes their first racing cars.

"How do we get into China? is it possible?"

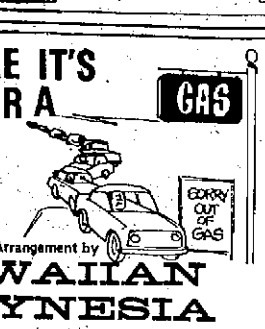

About like getting the camel through the needle's eye. You can apply in Ottawa, a People's Republic office there. In Hong Kong there's an office. If you write to either one, they won't answer.

If you walk in, they say: "Who invited you?" You say: "I don't KNOW anyone. But if I could get in, I'd meet somebody who'd invite me." They say: "You must be invited first." (The cart goes before the horse in China.) I've asked a dozen times. Same deal. I even carried a book, "The Sayings of Chairman Mao".

They DO sometimes take tour groups on intellectual pursuits: Doctors, students. Canadians seem to get on tours without problems. The American walk-in is 86 — out.

PENNYWISE TRAVELER

Looking at the 'fly by nights'

By JANE MORSE

Although family fares, youth fares and most other discount fares have now gone to some graveyard in the sky, there are still a few ways left to shave 20% to 33% from the price of many U.S. air tickets without booking months ahead or traveling in a group.

However, unless you're in the military (which still gets an automatic 25% off what we continue to call "economy" fares), the remaining "specials" are elusive little rascals.

Look hard and you may find a few cut-rate promotional fares between major cities and resort areas — but look harder, because they probably have expiration dates attached. What this means is that you could be hit with an increase at the airport no matter how certain the seller is that the rules and prices will be continued.

ALSO bear in mind that shopping is still essential if you're after rock-bottom prices. The complexities of air fares, especially when your destination is not on a heavily traveled route, raise the distinct possiblity that any two airline clerks will quote different rates for the same trip.

Inexperience, inadequate training or sheer laziness on the part of some clerks can hit you where it hurts, so it isn't a bad idea to check with two or three before making your commitment.

Then, too, the more tariff rules and exceptions there are, the less likely any individual is to have an accurate gauge on the big picture. Not only is plenty of misinformation passed around but a fare one airline has never heard of can be a box-office smash with another.

For instance, Continental has pioneered "Thrift" class (10% less than economy) in a few cities.

The best and biggest discounts aren't around in all places either, but there are two kinds in particular it pays to look for, namely:

FLY - BY - NIGHT FARES—There are worse ways to go, especially when "after dinner" fares are reduced by at least 20%, sometimes 25%. They commence in one or two cities as early as 7:45 p.m., but a majority start after 10 p.m. — and continue to include "early bird" takeoffs up to 6 a.m. or so.

For the penny-wise, there are two things to remember: Not all airlines have designated their night flights as lower fare flights, and you won't get a reduction if your day flight doesn't take off until night.

If you're ticketed on a full-fare flight that's delayed past 9 p.m., though you'd do well to see if there's a night flight alternative leaving from the same aiport. You can then turn in your ticket for the first flight and save by switching.

Self-imposed delays aren't the worst idea in the world, either, when re-ticketing to a night flight would pay for a nice gluttonous go at everything from oysters to cognac in some eater's paradise.

You'll find most night flights operating on transcontinental routes and to and from cities east of the Mississippi. The carriers with the largest supply are American, TWA, Eastern, Delta and National.

travel

West of the Mississippi it's a new and smaller ball game called "standby." Anyone can play, kids or adults, but the few planes involved usually move in the creepy-crawling hours between midnight and 3 or 4 a.m.

Standby, of course, means take a chance, go to the airport without a reservation and hope the airline has space for you after the full-fare payers have boarded. The good part is that except in major holiday periods, they almost always do.

The best part is that when they do you travel for 30% less than the economy rate. Continental, United, Western and Frontier are the carriers most likely to provide.

SPEND-AND-SAVE FARES — Alias "individual tour basing fares," alias IT and ITX fares. The name is not as important as the price, which is roughly 20% to 33% off economy fares if you also buy an "advertised air tour," that is, ground arrangements that meet a specified minimum price. This generally must include two nights' lodging plus sightseeing, a rental car or some kind of entertainment

The coast-to-coast traveler, for instance, can buy the $374 New York-California day coach round trip, or a $261 ITX round trip plus a ground package of at least $65 and still pocket a little change.

You'll find similar possibilities mainly between major cities long distances apart, but there are some short-distance ITX fares, too. Ask — and then ask again. An airline clerk recently told us no ITX fare existed on a particular route; his supervisor told us otherwise.

The big disadvantage of ITX arrangements is that there are "blackout periods" (generally holidays, Friday and Sunday afternoons, sometimes all weekend) when the ticket can't be used. For the most part, you're also required to stay at least six days and not more than 30 and can't use one company's ticket to travel with another line.

To compensate, though, there's often a king-size ITX advantage: Stopovers are permitted almost anywhere along the airline's route for $10 or less apiece.

Some ITX fares and all night fares also have a little extra something for the family — specifically, a one-third discount for kids off the already reduced rate. And that, for lots of people, is the only way to go.

Scuba tours

UTA French Airlines is collaborating with Diving Adventures of Corona del Mar on two new scuba diving tours to Tahiti.

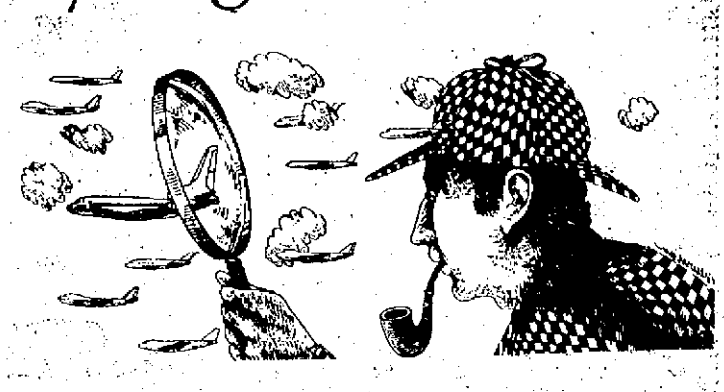

The tours offer one week, two weeks or longer on the legendary island of Moorea. All diving equipment is provided, including tanks, fins, mask, snorkel, weight belt, boat and guide.

Diving Adventures arranges optional excursions to Tetiaroa. While diving is limited to experienced, accredited divers, these tours also welcome non-divers at the same rates.

These programs, featuring the Moana Hotel in Moorea, are offered on both a standard and deluxe basis. The Moana provides American plan (all meals) or modified American plan (two meals daily).

The lagoon and garden bungalows are fully carpeted and equipped with telephone, refrigerator, coffee maker, and piped-in music.

Further information may be obtained from Diving Adventures, 2435 East Coast Highway, Corona del Mar, Ca. 92625 or from UTA French Airlines, One Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles.

Match race or mismatch?

So called match of century between Chris Evert and Miss Musket at Hollywood Park Saturday appeared to be mismatch at finish with Chris Evert whipping eased-up Miss Musket (upper right) by 50 lengths. Chris Evert wins $350,000 fiasco

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

The "Richest Match Race of the Century" turned into the biggest fiasco of the century Saturday at Hollywood Park as underdog Chris Evert breezed to a whopping 50-length victory over Miss Musket in the $350,000 winner-take-all confrontation before 47,900 booing fans.

Miss Musket, who was off stride throughout, made a race of it for only five furlongs of the mile and one-quarter test, but then she chucked the whole thing and was so badly beaten that jockey Laffit Pincay eased her to a canter the final half mile. When Miss Musket finally staggered across the finish line, the crowd erupted in a chorus of boos reminiscent of the Dodger days in Brooklyn.

Even though Miss Musket broke on top, Chris Evert (who paid $3.40) quickly zoomed into the lead as Pincay's filly swerved toward a temporary barrier on the inside. Jockey Jorge Velasquez took advantage of the momentary lapse and shot Chris Evert to the front where she remained the rest of the chase.

Miss Musket, lugging out badly the whole trip, nevertheless made a serious move to overtake Chris Evert at the five-eighth pole on the backstretch and pulled almost even with the leader. Velasquez, however, applied the whip a few times and the Eastern invader responded as though shot from a cannon.

From a competitive standpoint, the race was over as Pincay gave up fighting the lost cause with his reluctant filly and eased her to battle another day.

Miss Musket, whom many thought might have become lame during the race, cooled out perfectly in the receiving barn and the vets reported nothing appeared physically wrong with her.

Happiest of the winning clan was owner Carl Rosen, who had put up $100,000 against a similar sum by rival owner Aaron U. Jones (Hollywood Park added the final $150,000).

"Oh, boy," chuckled the Boston industrialist. "They thought we couldn't get the lead, huh? Reading newspaper accounts of pre-race activities, I thought I had brought the wrong horse out here.

"Everybody was writing and talking about the workouts of Miss Musket, but I told them 'Wait until the race.' Workouts don't mean that much to my trainer and he proved that today.

"I had pre-race fear in my heart of what might happen in the race, but now my heart goes out to those other people. I know how badly they must feel. Me? I have a great feeling of pride. My motivation wasn't the $100,000; it was to help racing and prove I had the country's best filly."

Trainer Joe Trovato, 37-year-old Brooklyn native, was more outspoken.

"Was I confident?" he asked in answer to a question. "Sure, and why not? I had the best horse. I

52,975 see Dodgers fall, 5-2

Sutton loses again

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

At long last, Don Sutton has found his fast ball.

He has also found, claim some of the Philadelphia Phillies, his sandpaper.

With a throng of 52,975 on hand at Dodger Stadium Saturday night, Sutton displayed something which hasn't been seen in sometime—his old self.

He pitched a no-hitter for five innings, a one-hitter for six, a three-hitter for seven—but still he lost, 5-2, when Mike Marshall failed to protect a one-run lead in the eighth inning.

"He pitched well enough to win," manager Walter Alston said of Sutton whose drought now is more than two months old.

"I thought Don pitched very well," added Danny Ozark, the Phillies' pilot and Alston's one-time coach. "I didn't see any difference in the way he pitched tonight and the way he pitched last year."

Neither can some of Ozark's players, which is where the sandpaper comes in.

"A lot of balls were scuffed up," charged Tommy Hutton, a one-time teammate of Sutton's. "We had a couple in the dugout and they had definitely been roughed up."

DODGER OF DAY

JOE FERGUSON doubled home Dodgers' only runs in 5-2 loss to Phillies.

It's hardly a new argument. But it's certainly strange that no one was complaining in Sutton's previous 13 starts when he had difficulty lasting five innings.

The umpires threw out several baseballs during the evening but there were no warnings.

Ozark said only that "I know the balls get scuffed up a lot on this infield."

It all must be heartening for Sutton that the enemy is beginning again to squawk about the baseballs he throws.

But Sutton who left the game in the top of the eighth with a 2-1 lead and runners at first and third, was nowhere around when the game was over.

He did, however, stay around long enough to see Marshall surrender a single to Dave Cash that scored the tying run as well as witness Marshall's throwing error on a sacrifice bunt by Larry Bowa which enabled the tie-breaking run to score.

Even with the loss, Sutton's sixth in a row—he hasn't won since shutting out Houston May 14, 1-0—the general feeling is that he has regained his old form.

"It was just a confidence thing, I'm sure of that," said Ozark who has seen Sutton at his best as well as his worst., "This game should certainly make him a good pitcher his next time out. His control was good."

Sutton didn't walk a batter, the first time all season he's accomplished

Angels split, Ryan's flame under control

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

BALTIMORE—Nolan Ryan conceded earlier this week that he did not deserve to be selected to the American League All-Star team.

Saturday night, however, Ryan pitched like he definitely belonged.

This might have also been the birth of the new Nolan Ryan—no longer frighteningly overpowering but instead a poised knowledgeable craftsman.

Ryan was pure pitcher—not a thrower—as he dispatched Baltimore on five hits as the Angels won the opener of a twi-night doubleheader, 2-0.

Baltimore avoided a sweep in the nightcap just when one looked imminent.

Frank Robinson snapped a 1-1 tie with a solo home run in the ninth inning of the second game but the Birds rebounded with four—the last three coming on Mark Belanger's three-run shot off reliever Dave Sells—to pull it out, 5-2.

Ryan indicated he can still bring it when the occasion dictates and he struck out eight Orioles while walking only one—a remarkably low total for him.

The eight strikeouts gave Ryan, the major league leader, a total of 201 and with at least 14 starts remaining he is well on the way to another 300-strikeout season. If he achieves that plateau, he will become the first pitcher in history to do so for three consecutive seasons.

In the afterglow of his 12th victory—almost one-third of the Angel total—Ryan said he got by on guile and cunning as much as sheer talent.

"I think Baltimore was expecting more than I had," Ryan remarked. "My stuff was okay but I didn't have good velocity."

"I thought he was sick when I saw him warming up," observed broadcaster Don Drysdale. "He didn't seem to have any movement to his pitches at all. I guess he got better in a hurry though."

Only the Orioles looked pallid in the opener. They could never manage more than one hit in any inning and the base on balls, usually a Ryan tormentor, was practically non-existent.

He issued only one—to Don Baylor leading off the eighth—to match his career low. But he no longer has a standing bet with the resident manager that he will receive $100 if he fashions a walkless complete game.

"After two managers (Del Rice and Bobby Winkles) I figured I'd give up on it," Ryan said.

Ryan's second shutout of the season—and one which guaranteed the Angels of their first winning road trip since a three-day invasion of Chicago to open the season—was preserved by some deft fielding, especially by third baseman Dave Chalk who made at least four Brooks Robinson-type plays.

"Davie saved several hits and maybe a couple of runs," Ryan said, "but that's what you need to shutout somebody."

The Angels managed a run against loser Wayne Garland in the fourth when Frank Robinson was hit in the head with a knuckleball and Joe Lahoud singled Robbie to third. Pup Doherty got the

WUNNERFUL GOLF DAY FOR WELK

ESCONDIDO (AP) — It was a 'wunnerful' day for Lawrence Welk's golf game Saturday when the 71-year-old bandleader decided to play on his own par-three course.

While Welk played, the rest of his television show crew taped part of the opening fall program.

When Welk reached the 145-yard 18th hole, the cast, which had been performing a production number on the fairway, stepped aside to let their boss play through.

Welk hit an iron shot 18 inches from the cup and the ball rolled in for a hole-in-one.

A spokesman said it was Welk's third career ace.

A.L. All-Stars underwhelmed

CHICAGO (AP) — You can't please everyone all the time and sometimes you can't please anyone.

Catcher Ed Herrmann of the Chicago White Sox doesn't want to play in the All-Star game and will not.

Pitcher Wilbur Wood of the White Sox will go to the All-Star game but he's upset about the gentlemen's agreement among American League managers not to use All-Star pitchers in games today.

Manager Chuck Tanner of the White Sox is bitter that Ken Henderson and Jorge Orta weren't selected to the team.

The Milwaukee Brewers can't understand how Johnny Briggs was not selected to the team. Representing Milwaukee will be Darrell Porter who said, "It not only surprised me but everybody on the ball club."

Herrmann flatly refused to play in the game after he had been selected by All-Star manager Dick Williams. He will be replaced by Jim Sundberg of Texas.

"I promised my wife and kids I would go home (to California) and spend the All-Star break with them," said Herrmann. "That's all there is to it. Also, I've been playing on a bad ankle which I've hit with batted balls five times in the last month. I need the rest."

Asked if he might have played if he had been voted in as the catcher rather than being a late selection, Herrmann said, "Yes, I probably would under those circumstances. There are others who are not playing because of injuries so why should I."

Wood was incensed over the agreement not to use All-Star pitchers today. As a result, he worked Saturday with only two days rest instead of taking his regular turn Sunday.

"I don't mind because I have a reputation of working with two days rest," said Wood. "But what is the objective of the American League races? To win a division or to win the All-Star game? Why should the Sox or any other club be deprived of using a pitcher on Sunday.

"What if a team should lose its division by one game because a pitcher was not used or taken out of rotation or pitched ahead of time because of the All-Star game? It's unfair to the pitchers and the clubs involved.

"What if a pitcher wins 19 games instead of 20 because of that decision?" said Wood. "Yeah, they'll say it doesn't make any difference but it does. There's a difference between a man batting .299 or .300. It's all so ridiculous."

Jim Colborn of the Brewers said, "The All-Star game is losing its credibility because the team representing the American League is not the best."

Garvey can't believe write-in total

From unknown to All-Star

"Really," the polite young man with the pleasant smile was saying, "this is incredible. It's hardto believe."

A year ago, Steve Garvey, a failure as a third baseman, began the season as a pinch-hitter. He didn't know if he had a future with the Dodgers.

Garvey, 25, is living proof that America is the land of opportunity. He got a chance at a second position with the Dodgers. As a result, he will be the National League's starting first baseman in Tuesday's All-Star game in Pittsburgh.

Garvey began this season as a virtual unknown. In fact, he wasn't even listed on the All-Star ballot. Since computerized balloting was introduced in 1969, only one other write-in player has been picked. Rico Carty of Atlanta was written onto the National League starting roster in 1970.

"I guess this all goes to show that a player should never lose confidence in himself," said Garvey. "When last season started, I didn't know if I fit in with the Dodgers. But I had some success as a pinch-hitter, I got into the lineup and it's all turned out better than I could have dreamed.

"It just goes to show you how many high points and how many low points there are in this game."

The former Michigan State football player—the Dodgers' opening day third baseman in 1970 and 1971—received 1,082,489 write-in votes to win his starting All-Star berth.

"That's what's really incredible," he said. "I find it hard to believe that that many people took time out to fill my name in. It's a lot easier to punch out a name on the card than write one in. It's very flattering"

By July 17, Garvey was hitting .308 and was second in the National League with 65 RBI. He had 15 home runs.

"This season has been a culmination of all my other years up here," he explained. "It's the blending together of my natural ability and experience.

"I've backed away from the plate some and this has allowed me to handle the inside pitch better. I've also cut down on my stride and this has given me quicker hands."

Garvey has only one goal this season—the pennant in the National League West.

"I don't think you can think personal goals," he remarked. "Really, I mean that. If I can got the rest of the season and get only one more home run and one more RBI and we win the pennant, I'll be happy."

Despite the presence of the Cincinnati Reds, Garvey is confident about his team's chances.

"Of course, I wouldn't want to pay this game if I didn't think I couldn't go out and give 110 per cent and win," he added.

"Cincinnati caught us last year but we're much more mature this time around. I think the biggest thing we have going for us is our consistency. Plus Jimmy Wynn and Mike Marshall."

Wynn and Marshall, also All-Star selections, were acquired during the off-season in trades.

Will Garvey be nervous at Pittsburgh?

"Yes, I imagine I'll be a little nervous," he smiled. It's quite an honor, you know."

CURING HOOKWORM

I hope it never happens, but if you ever start hooking your short irons, you have two choices: (1) consider bowling, or (2) open up your stance.

A golfer can get away with a hook off the tee sometimes. But when he puts a wicked curve on a 9-iron or wedge, it means a trip to whatever hazard is around the green — bunkers or ponds or both.

Since my stance is always open, hooking short irons isn't a worry. It won't be one of yours if you'll open up a little bit. Turn a few degrees toward the hole on shots that demand a 7-iron to a wedge.

HOOKING short irons often is caused by failure to turn the left hip out of the way on the downswing. The backswing for lofted clubs is shorter, and there's less time to get your left side clear. So you're "cheating" a little to your advantage by opening up a mite.

If hooks with short irons persist, have your pro check your clubs. They could be too flat. This means the heal of the club catches the turf before the sweet spot strikes the ball, causing a hook.

Hometown hero Karl tied for B.C. Open lead

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) —Hometown hero Richie Karl, who grew up just across the street from the golf course, charged into a share of the lead Saturday with a 68 in the third round of the $150,000 B.C. Open.

Karl, now an assistant pro at the host En Joie Golf Club when he isn't playing the tour, had a 205 total, eight under par. He was tied for the top spot with Curtis Sifford.

Sifford, a 32-year-old nephew of old pro Charley Sifford and the second-round leader, scrambled to a one-under 70 in the mild, breezy weather.

"This is my bad round," said Sifford, one of the few blacks on the pro golf tour. "I got it out of the way. I got my choking round out of the way."

Neither Karl nor Sifford has ever won on the tour.

Karl, 29, has played part time on the tour for four years but has not yet come close to winning. For his 10 previous events this season—only one since March—he has an official money winning total of $256.38.

Karl has played this 6,804-yard layout since he was 6 years old—"It's a good neighborhood to grow up in and playing golf, well, your mother always knew where you were"—and is seeking to become the first host pro to win a tour title since Earl Stewart captured the Dallas Open in 1960.

The pressure of playing before the hometown gallery doesn't bother him, he said. "There is no pressure," Karl said.

"I grew up across the street. If I don't know the golf course, who does? I have made up my mind to play the course, not the gallery."

Jessen in lead; Laura sags

LA GRANGE, Ill. (AP) — Ruth Jessen, a semi-retired pro who has played only four competitive rounds in three months, surged from the pack with a one-under-par 71 to grab the 54-hole lead by a stroke Saturday in the wide-open U.S. Women's Open Golf Tournament.

Miss Jessen, competing only because of a $1,000 sponsorship from her Pinetop Country Club near Phoenix, Ariz., popped into the lead from four strokes off the pace as disaster hit the trio of 36-hole leaders.

Of the halfway pacesetters, Carol Mann faltered for a 77, amateur Debby Massey slumped to an 80 and Kathy Ahern ballooned to an 81.

Thus Miss Jessen, a 19-season pro whose best previous Open performance was runnerup in the 1964 championship, moved into today's final round with a three-over-par total of 219, a stroke ahead of JoAnne Carner, Sandra Spuzich, and Sandra Haynie.

Laura Baugh of Long Beach struggled home with a 77 for 232, 13 strokes off the pace.

Mrs. Carner, the year's No. 2 moneywinner, also shot a one-under-par 71, while Miss Spuzich matched par 72 on the tricky La Grange Country Club course, and Miss Haynie scored 74 to create the three-way deadlock for second place at 220.

Miss Jessen, who said that even a potential Open championship would not lure her from her golf teaching job, said, "I hadn't even planned on playing here. But, the kind people at Pinetop, where I teach, insisted that I file an entry and then surprised me with a $1,000 check to send me here.

"I've been a pro 19 years and nothing ever happened to me like that.

"I know I'll be awfully nervous Sunday but it will be fun — it's always fun playing well in this tournament."

Concannon to Pack for draft choice

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers have acquired quarterback Jack Concannon from the Dallas Cowboys for an undisclosed future draft choice, Coach Dan Devine announced Saturday.

Concannon, 31, has nine years experience in the National Football League and was a starter with the Philadelphia Eagles and Chicago Bears before going to Dallas in 1972.

Intrepid falls to Courageous

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The aluminum yacht Courageous, taking advantage of light winds, triumphed decisively Saturday against the Intrepid in the U.S. observation trials for the America's Cup.

Courageous, seeking to oust defending champion Intrepid from the Sept. 10 America's Cup racing series, defeated its wooden opponent by 4 minutes and 32 seconds in an eight-mile race on Rhode Island Sound.

The victory was the second by Courageous in four races with Intrepid during the observation trials staged by the New York Yacht Club to determine the fastest U.S. boat.

The club's race committee shortened the latest competition from 12 miles due to the light winds, which forced cancellation of a second race on a clear day with calm seas.

Courageous is 5-2 in the observation trials and Intrepid is 5-3.

Intrepid leads with an overall record of 10 victories and five defeats in the preliminary and observation trials. Courageous hold a 9-4 mark in the total competition and Valiant is 1-9.

NFL pre-season opens this week

By Associated Press

With or without their striking veterans, National Football League teams move toward their full-scale exhibition season this week with at least two meetings on the schedule.

The highlight of the week is on Saturday, when the St. Louis Cardinals and Buffalo Bills meet in Canton, Ohio, in the annual Hall of Fame game. The game, which would have followed by one day the now-cancelled College All-Star classic, is going ahead even though both clubs will field teams of rookies and free agents.

The first paid "exhibition" of the season was Friday night in Washington, where a crowd of 14,207 showed up at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium to watch the Redskins in a "controlled rookie scrimmage." Quarterback Joe Theismann, the former Notre Dame standout who signed with Washington after playing in Canada, completed 15 of 35 passes for 209 yards and one touchdown.

The Houston Oilers, who scrimmaged in a prison last week, were to meet a semi-pro team in San Antonio on Saturday night.

Thursday night, rookies and free agents representing the Green Bay Packers and Chicago Bears will meet at Lambeau Field in Green Bay. Neither the Bears nor the Packers have many veterans in camp, the most notable being Green Bay linebackers Jim Carter and Larry Hefner.

The Hall of Fame game in Canton is important because it is the first official exhibition game, and also because it will be carried nationwide by ABC-TV, which has already lost the All-Star game.

Each network contracted with the NFL to carry three exhibition games. A league spokesman said earlier than the networks did not pay as much for exhibitions as they do regular season games; but it remains to be seen if they will be satisfied with games played by rookies and free agents.

The Bills have 46 rookies and free agents in camp, but no veterans. On Saturday, 15 veterans, led by guard and player representative Reggie McKenzie, walked a picket line outside the Bills' camp.

The Cardinals also have a squad of 46, and it includes only two vets, linebacker Larry Stallings and defensive tackle Bonnie Sloan.

The National Football League claimed there were 104 veterans in the 26 NFL training camps as of the weekend, but many of them are not regulars. Teams with the most veterans in camp are the Cincinnati Bengals with 17 and Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins with 14.

Among the most notable veterans in NFL camps are Jake Scott, Jim Mandich, Howard Twilley, Jim Langer and Earl Morrall of the Dolphins; Bob Johnson, Al Beauchamp, Bob Trumpy and Horst Muhlmann of Cincinnati; Tommy Nobis of Atlanta; John Unitas of San Diego, and Ralph Neely of Dallas.

Jacklin holds 10-stroke lead

MALMOE, Sweden (AP) — Tony Jacklin shot a 69 Saturday and boosted himself into a comfortable 10-stroke lead after the third round of the Scandanavian Enterprise Open.

Jacklin led Britain's Sam Torrance, who had a 214 total and Jean Garialde who had 217.

Left-handed New Zealander Bob Charles, who won the Scandanavian tournament last year, shot a 78 Saturday and fell to fifth place at 219.

The closest American to Jacklin after the third round at the Bokskogen Course, was Gay Brewer who was in 17th place—18 strokes behind.

Peter Oosterhuis, runnerup to Gary Player in the recent British Open, had trouble with the wind and shot a third-round 74 to join a group of players tied at 220.

Legion tourney resumes today at Blair Field

Leo LaSala cracked a two-run single and Charles Zopfi then scored the winning run on a passed ball to cap El Segundo's comeback.

Two games are scheduled today at Blair. North Torrance opposes Whittier Golds at 11 a.m. while El Segundo and South Torrance mix at 1:30.

Gonzales retains WBC flyweight title

LIGNANO SABBIADORO, Italy (UPI)—Venezuela's Betulio Gonzales retained his World Boxing Council flyweight title Saturday on a 10th-round technical knockout over Italian challenger Franco Udella.

It was the 24-year-old Venezuelan's 38th win in 44 professional fights and his 19th fight ending before the limit. He has lost four and drawn two.

Nashville won by Yarborough

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cale Yarborough outdueled Bobby Allison to win the Nashville 420 Grand National race Saturday night and record his eighth victory this season.

Yarborough, of Timmonsville, S.C., beat Allison by about four car lengths. But Allison zoomed into victory lane ahead of him and protested vehemently that the victory should have been his, apparently claiming he was a lap ahead.

Yarborough was involved in a similar incident last week at Bristol, when Buddy Baker made the same contention.

Richard Petty led much of the race but dropped out on lap 351 when he hit a Dean Dalton, who had spun out. Yarborough hit the wall during thesame incident but continued on.

Bob Unser captures Mich. pole

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (UPI)—Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., led a field of 24 cars that qualified Saturday for the Indy event in today's twin 200s at Michigan International Speedway.

Unser was timed at 196.240, followed by A.J. Foyt of Houston, Tex., at 195.652; Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa. and Johnny Rutherford of Fort Worth, Tex., both with 194.437.

Unser's brother, Al, at 194.230 and Tom Sneva of Washington, at 192.874, filled out the first three rows.

Average for the qualifying field was 188.241.

Among other top qualifiers was Salt Walther of Indianapolis, Ind. and Wally Dallenbach of Denver, Colo., who had to make a complete engine change following practice but finished in time to qualify.

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Utah Stars Saturday gave coach Joe Mullaney permission to talk with Mike Storen, new owner of the Memphis Tams, about switching teams should the Stars fold or be sold to an owner who wants a new coach.

Stars owner Bill Daniels has given a group of local buyers until Aug. 1 to come up with his $3 million asking price.

that, and was in a brilliant duel with the Phillies' Dick Rutven for five innings.

The Dodgers, without a hit themselves until the fourth and only one hit through five innings, finally got to Ruthven in the sixth.

Sutton led off the inning with a line drive single to center. Dave Lopes then hit a hard smash back at the mound. Ruthven got it on his pitching hand but was able to throw out Sutton at second. Lopes stole second and Ruthven walked Bill Buckner before leaving because of the bruised hand.

Jimmy Wynn was the first to face the Phils' Jesus Hernaiz. He grounded out, but advanced the runners to second and third, and Joe Ferguson drove them home with a double down the leftfieield line.

Philadelphiaimmediately got one run back when Willie Montanez doubled with one out in the seventh and Del Unser singled him home.

In the eighth inning, after Hutton and pinch hitter Tony Taylor singled, Marshall replaced Sutton.

"Sutton hasn't gone that far in quite a while and the way Marshall has been pitching you're tempted to go with him every day," Alston said, explaining the move.

But Cash singled to left, scoring the tying run. Then Bowa bunted back to the mound. Marshall elected to go to third and threw wild, letting in the go-ahead run. In all, the Phils scored four runs and it left Sutton with his eighth defeat in 14 decisions.

It also kept the Phillies 1½ games in front in the National League's Eastern Division while the Dodgers' lead in the West remained at 6½.

Ozark was asked about playing against his former team and what pressures it generates.

"The only thing I want to do," Ozark replied with a gesture toward the Dodgers' clubhouse, "is to meet the Dodgers in the playoffs in October.

L.B. Lancer sprinters capture Aurora crown

Despite running without starting blocks, the Long Beach Lancers Track Club, coached by Dickie Smith, dominated the sprinting events to capture the team title in the Junior AAU Aurora Games at Compton College Saturday.

Eight-year-old Dennis Price paced the nine-and-under competitors, grabbing seconds in the 50 (6.7) and 100 (12.5) dashes and running legs on the Lancers' winning 440 (56.4) and 880 medley (2:15.0) relays. Tyrone Townsend won the 440 and 880 and also ran relay legs.

In the 14-15 division, Jim Clinton enjoyed a banner day, winning the 180-yard low hurdles (23.3) finishing second in the 100 (10.3) and long jump (18-9) and running third in the 220 (23.6).

Coaches James Townsend and Willie Scroggins took three athletes in the 14-15 bracket to a national invitational at Reno, Nev. and all placed highly. Duane Evans, a 15-year-old from Arizona, blazed 9.4 to win the 100 while Chris Neal sprinted to a 9.8 clocking and placed fifth. Anthony Van placed second in the 440 with a fine time of 51.9.

McGuire, O'Connor vie for PGA title

Paul McGuire of San Gabriel CC faces Ron O'Connor of Desert Aire CC in Palmdale at Mission Viejo today to determine the Southern California PGA champion in this, the 50th anniversary tournament.

Tee-off for the 36-hole finale is 7:30 a.m.

McGuire defeated former National PGA champion Jerry Barber, 1-up, in Saturday's semifinals while O'Connor was decisioning Paul Scodeller of El Niguel, 1-up, in 19 holes.

In the morning's quarterfinal matches, McGuire defeated Quail Lake's Dennie Meyer, 2-1, while O'Connor handled El Niguel's Rick Divel, 7-6.

Barber had reached the semis by dispatching his son, Tom Barber, 3-2.

It was the first time father and son had ever met in PGA competition. The elder Barber, a former Tournament of Champions and SoCal PGA titlist, is head professional at Griffith Park and son Tom is his assistant.

Following today's championship round, Recreation Park's George Lake, the acknowledged patriarch of this tournament, will host a clinic featuring two-time SoCal PGA champion Jimmy Powell plus Howard Smith, Scodeller, Dick Goeckner, Eddie Merrins and Art Henderson.

Four remedies would prevent future problems

Stangeland offers new views on 49er tragedy

Former Long Beach State football coach Jim Stangeland, one of the people deeply concerned about the crucifying probation slapped on the 49ers by the NCAA, comes forth today with personal solutions in four areas that he believes would prevent future tragedies similar to the one suffered by his old school.

The four remedies proposed by Stangeland:

1. A completely new NCAA investigation procedure.

2. College presidents rigidly running their athletic departments.

3. Eliminating the economic inequity in scholarships.

4. In the case of Long Beach State and other schools faced with athletic bankruptcy—a paid organization to sell season tickets.

"After many months away from coaching, I have been able to look at the over-all athletic situation both locally and nationally in an objective manner, and I believe deep in my heart that if improvement was made in those four areas, college athletic problems would not have to suffer further indignities like those we experienced at Long Beach State," said Stangeland, who's now in the real estate business in Long Beach.

STANGELAND THEN BROKE DOWN his feelings in each area.

"The manner in which the NCAA investigated Long Beach State was unprofessional," he stated. "The whole football investigation began on a cheap note in 1972. It was a classic example of the NCAA's arrogance toward small schools.

"One of the investigators called players out of my practice a few days before a major game to interrogate them. Can you imagine them doing that to Woody Hayes or Paul Bryant? Hell, no!

"Not only did the NCAA investigator have the audacity to behave that brazenly for openers, but he succeeded in ruining team morale for good by telling the kids their scholarships were poorer than other schools and they deserved better.

"Can you imagine a man supposed to be an investigator undermining kids by telling them their scholarships were second-rate?"

"FOR THESE AND OTHER REASONS I think the NCAA investigatng committee should be composed of former FBI agents, and there's a lot of them around, to get away from the present second-rate operation," continued Stangeland. "Let's investigate with experts who are taught to deal with facts.

"People with know-how would have made a credibility check of both coaches and athletes, and then the NCAA would have had professional- gathered evidence based on fact, not opinion or rumor. This is what the NCAA was not geared to do when it swarmed all over Long Beach State.

"It's unbelievable that the NCAA could talk to four or five unreliable and disgruntled persons, then make decisions based on undocumented evidence."

STANGELAND THEN RAPPED the way the charges against Long Beach State read when released, feeling that could have been corrected "with professionals running the investigation".

"There were no names listed in the charges printed in the newspapers— neither mine, Jerry Tarkanian's nor anybody's," steamed Stangeland. "A sharp lawyer apparently advised them to go with no names because most of their charges didn't hold water.

"I had 10 different assistant coaches during my five seasons at Long Beach State, but when the charges listed 'an assistant football coach,' the finger pointed to all of them, not just one. They all wondered, 'Is the NCAA talking about me?'

"The NCAA indicted everybody by innuendo. No names! All my assistants could sue the NCAA for those innuendos. One of them, Keith Cordes, now is an FBI agent himself, and he was incensed when he read the charges.

"If it had operated efficiently, the NCAA would have sat down with the university president and a conference committee before releasing the story. Then if there was proper evidence, the president could cut the down the coaches. The NCAA never came face-to-face with Tark or myself."

THAT BROUGHT STANGELAND to area No. 2.

"College presidents have got to run their athletic departments. If the occasion demands, they must discipline their coaches before the NCAA steps in. The president must be alert not to get trapped with the bowls, national TV and the general hoopla of a major program.

"At USC the former president (Dr. Norman Topping) ran his athletic department with an iron hand. I don't say he was a tyrant, but he knew what was going on all the time and with coach John McKay's full cooperation, a tight ship was run at all times.

"I'm not implying there was any hanky-panky by the Long Beach State coaches, but I'm saying that the president take charge and immediately go into action with his coaches if there's even the least bit of smoke. Keep your house clean and stay on top of the program with the athletic director and administrative aides.

"College presidents do that with their professors; they should do the same with their coaches."

IN AREA NO. 3, STANGELAND SAID, "We were too poor at Long Beach State even to defend ourselves when the NCAA accusations started flying. Only one person, Glenn McDonald, went to court on the issue and came face-to-face with the NCAA—and he was acquitted, which shows what can be done if the NCAA is taken to court.

"They tried to strip Glenn of his eligibility. They embarrassed him publicly. This is unforgiveable because the NCAA was wrong.

"The economic dilemma at Long Beach State was a serious problem. When I first became head coach, our partial scholarships were around $150. Through super efforts of the Touchdown Club and then the 49er Foundation, we were able to raise them to $1,300, which still was below the NCAA limit of $1,700.

"A cardinal sin with the NCAA is taking unfair advantage of other schools by exceeding scholarship aid. We weren't even close to taking this unfair advantage because our kids weren't receiving enough scholarship money—and the NCAA knew of our deficit right away when it started its investigation.

"But this scholarship and economic dilemma must and can be eliminated."

THAT LED INTO area No. 4.

"I recommend for Long Beach State and other schools with financial problems a sophisticated, year-round season ticket sale operation.

"Lack of gate receipts was our major problem. The operation I suggest could be an agency geared to programs like the pros. Put the people on commission and give them an incentive to sell tickets year-round.

"Athletics is a business and has to be run like one. If I could spare the time from real estate, I'd start such an agency and guarantee the university a respectable athletic budget. A sale of 10,000 season tickets in both football and basketball would gross a half-million dollars.

"A professional agency commission of 20 per cent would be $100,000. What's wrong with a top professional ticket promoter earning $100,000 if the Long Beach State athletic department is going to gross $400,000. I'm being realistic—something like this has to be done in the college athletic business.

"Ohio State can net $250,000 or more per football game, but there are a lot of schools not like Ohio State which must sell season tickets through an organized agency 12 months a year.

"If the 49ers are to survive, it must be at the gate. They have the boosters and the student body to do the job. I'm sure it will be done. But when?"

SPORTS HOT LINE

Q. Although every hockey fan knows the term "hat trick" means three goals in a game by one player, I've never been able to find a sports buff who could explain the derivation of the term. Can you?—Jim Steiner, Torrance, Calif.

A. It originated in England in the late 1880's. When a bowler struck the wicket on three successive tries, his manager would award him a new hat. The term was picked up and popularized in soccer, then hockey. Long ago at amateur games in Canada, fans would pass the hat and contribute money and sometimes watches to the hero who had scored three times.

Q. Lance Rentzel is supposedly writing books now. Is he making it on his notoriety as a football player, or as a writer?—Tom Kelleher, Modesto, Calif.

A. Rentzel has completed a novel based on life with the Dallas Cowboys and the L.A. Rams. He showed it to his friends, Joseph Wambaugh ("The Blue Knight") and Jacqueline Susann ("Once Is Not Enough") and they were not overwhelmed so perhaps he wrote it himself. Identity of the ghost who handled Rentzel's autobiographical first book, "When All The Laughter Died in Sorrow," is one of publishing's best-kept secrets. Rentzel said he had no help, but the book has errors of time and incident which he would never have made.

Q. See if you can find a jockey or trainer who can answer this: How, when, why does a horse change "leads" in a race?—John C. Anderson, Harwood Heights, Ill.

A. By "lead changes" you're talking about the leading foot as a horse strides. Most horses are right-footed and run with a right-lead on the straightaway, but they have to change to a leftfoot lead on the turns. The jock changes leads in various ways, according to the horse, but most often by leaning to that side. Sometimes a horse will refuse to change leads coming out of a turn and will drift out. This happened this season at Santa Anita when Laffit Pincay had a filly in front of the field coming out of the last turn. She drifted out and lost the race, and the trainer asked Pincay why he hadn't tried to change leads. Pincay explained: "When I tried it on her in workouts, she stopped cold."

Q. Why did Cincinnati have to flip with Pittsburgh, Washington and Dallas to decide the order of draft picks in the college draft? They had the same won-loss records but so did Miami, Minnesota and L.A. and they didn't flip.—J.M., Dayton.

A. Regardless of won-loss records, the Super Bowl winner drafts last and the loser drafts next-to-last, so L.A. drafted 24th, Minnesota 25th and Miami 26th.

Welcome to Super Bowl, but don't drink water, senor

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Faced with the gravest and most acrimonious labor dispute their industry has ever encountered, owners in the National Football League have made a package offer that would enable a five-year veteran earning $30,000 a year to increase his preseason pay from $2,900 to $3,000.

Although the package included several other concessions, it brought a hoot of derision from Ed Garvey, the players' union leader, who has insisted all along that the players were fighting for freedom, with financial considerations secondary. "The freedom issues are money issues and a buck is a buck no matter how you spend it," was the mysterious response of the owners' labor counsel, Theodore Kheel.

This may be the darkest hour professional football has known since the new-born Green Bay Packers, undefeated in their first 10 games, kissed one off to the Beloit Fairies through the foul misdeasance—all of us in Green Bay agreed — of a referee named Baldy Zabel.

Still, there may just possibly be a flicker of light showing at the end of the tunnel. At least Pete Rozelle is now in possession of an offer that would, he is assured, enable the league to recover in a few hours a substantial part of the $4 million which the owners said the proffered package would cost them.

MIGUEL GUARJARDO OF the Mexican National Tourist Council has invited the commissioner to transfer next winter's Super Bowl IX from New Orleans to Mexico City, promising that his organization would post a $1 million bond to guarantee a sellout of magnificent Aztec Arena at $25 tops.

Guarjardo says the 105,000-seat facility could be scaled to produce at least $1 million more than the league could squeeze out of 81,000 at $15 tops in old Tulane Stadium. It is now conceded by all that New Orleans will default on its promise to have that zillion-dollar domed stadium completed in time.

If Mexico strikes some as an unlikely source for such a proposal, the A.C. Nielsen Co. could correct that impression. Mexicans dig American football, giving it no worse than a second-place tie with beisbol.

Neither, of course, stirs the populace as soccer does. During the 1968 Olympics, three Mexicans were stabbed to death for saying they didn't think Mexico would win the gold medal, even though the home team was made up of professionals. (After a 4-1 defeat by France's amateurs, one of the martyrs is said to have nudged an angel in the ribs and said, "Who's looney now, senor?")

ANYWAY, THE SUPER BOWL gets one of the highest Nielsens scored by any sports show in Mexico. Curiously, the favorite team south of the border is not Dallas or Houston or San Diego or Los Angeles but the Miami Dolphins. Those Latin Yanquis, Manny Fernandez and Nick Buonoconti, may be the greatest idols down there since Manolete and Armillita opened the new bullring 30-odd years ago.

Apart from the loot, Guarjardo mentioned other advantages Mexico City enjoys over New Orleans. The weather at Super Bowl time is incomparably better, hotel accommodations are plentiful and superior, and transportation by air is excellent.

Guarjardo did mention the possibility that if the players' strike delayed the opening of the season, the Super Bowl might be played later than Jan. 12, the scheduled date. In that event, a creature as powerful as Pete Rozelle might get a room in New Orleans, but lesser mortals would have to take pot luck in Baton Rouge.

Suppose the game were postponed a week to Jan. 19. That day 10,000 members of the National Rural

RED SMITH

Electric Cooperatives will be in convention, swarming through the Roosevelt, the Monteleone, the Sonestra, the Marriott. A week later New Orleans will be host to the National Sand and Gravel and National Ready-Mix Concrete Assns., and two days after that delegates will check in for the National Asphalt Pavements Associations.

THE START OF FEBRUARY brings the New Orleans International Boat Show and 13,000 members of the Assn. of Southern Agricultural Workers, to be followed Feb. 16 by the Golf Course Superintendents Assn., 5,000 strong. After that there might be a chance for the NFL to slip into town and get out safely, the only convention scheduled between Feb. 26 and March 1 is the American Cleft Palate Assn., which needs only 500 beds. However, that's getting pretty close to Mardi Gras when New Orleans would have no time for football.

Mexico City is dead serious about getting a place on the International Sports Scene. Not many towns have facilities to compare with those built for the Olympics.

The city has put out feelers for franchises in both the NFL and the National Basketball Assn., and Guarjardo's offer to Rozelle is no jest. If the heavyweight championship of the world can be decided in Kinshasha, Zaire, surely the National Football League can do better than New Orleans.

BUD TUCKER

Ray of Sunshine for Anaheim?

The community of Anaheim was established by sturdy German stock who came to settle full of hope and faith in their land, their maker and their fellow man.

The tastes of the settlers were modest and they did not lust for anything grand. A roll of sausage and a loaf of black bread and a stein of lager was enough to accompany the fat man who played the tuba on Saturday nights.

Unhappily, the settlement grew to a village and the town became a city and ambitions inflated accordingly.

In 1966, the generation in charge was sold a stadium and the taxpayers of Anaheim were placed on the hook for $20 million, give or take a million or so either way.

ENTRUSTED TO PAY for all this was the American League baseball side, the Angels who moved out from under the rental requirements of Walter O'Malley in Los Angeles. O'Malley, who was to become the last private citizen ever to build a sports stadium, did not make a big thing of it and refrained from sticking his nostrils into the affairs of the people of Anaheim.

But when asked, he was willing to share his experiences.

"What you get for $20 million," O'Malley said, "is a $20 million headache."

Anaheim endured a migraine, largely because the baseball team turned out to be less than artistic. People stayed away from the stadium in great numbers unless the attraction was high school football, Billy Graham or Fourth of July fireworks.

Baseball filled the seats with human beings on a few isolated occasions such as the major league All-Star game of 1967 which also served as a celebration of the ball park's first birthday.

GENERALLY speaking, though, Walter O'Malley was right and you would just as soon own a block of Edsel stock as a piece of Anaheim Stadium.

However, stadium officials the other night thought they recognized a tiny ray of sunshine in the arrival of Orange County's local football eleven. The Southern California Sun of the World Football League staged its home opener by defeating a team from Hawaii, 38-31.

This, described by many as Anaheim's finest hour, was celebrated by ticket takers in tuxedos, Hawaiian dancing girls, the fat guy with the tuba and 30,000 customers.

Of course, it is significant to note that Anaheim Stadium accommodates 42,000 for football and another of Walter O'Malley's early adages was violated.

"Never give your product away."

The Sun squandered considerable by placing the event on local television which was in complete disregard of the teachings of O'Malley. As a matter of fact, it was in striking contrast to the reasoning of those earlier established in the professional football business.

Anticipating a sellout, the Sun set up the TV program and took off in an entirely different direction than the betrayal of the fans angle. Indeed, the announcement stated that the opener was being televised as a gesture of appreciation to those citizens of Orange County and beyond who had supported the Sun by purchasing tickets.

This was a radical departure, to be sure, but it is not essential that anyone understand it. The important thing is the reaction.

The firm that runs the Sun figures what the hell, the whole thing was a gamble in the first place. Some of the rules are different and most of the uniforms so a policy deviation shouldn't be a big thing.

Of course, the Sun surely agonized the finish of the game on the theory Anaheim and Orange County will tolerate anything but another turkey.

Mike Garrett happy to be out of football

By JIM COUR
UPI Sports Writer

Mike Garrett was never supposed to be big enough to make it big.

At 5-9 and 185 pounds, the former Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Southern California had something to prove in pro football.

"I think I proved it, too," the soft-spoken Garrett said. "People were always saying I was too small and couldn't make

"Yes, I'm very happy with the way my career went."

At 30, the talented product of L.A. Roosevelt High School has called it quits after rushing for 5,481 yards in eight pro seasons at Kansas City and San Diego. He twice exceeded 1,000 yards rushing in a season and his 5,481 total ranked him ahead of such NFL greats as Ollie Matson, Hugh McElhenny, Dick Bass and Lenny Moore.

"I'm not going to miss football at all," Garrett said confidently. "Honestly, I was tired of it and I was ready to do something else."

Garrett gave up his bachelor's status last March 21. His wife, Sherry, has four children by a previous marriage.

"It was quite a transition after being single all my life," he admitted. "But getting married is probably the best thing I ever did. My wife is a tremendous person and I love her very much. I'm very happy now."

"When I played football, I was gone six months of the year. Now I can stay in one place and devote my life to my family and my work."

Garrett is working with a drug rehabilitation program in San Diego where he wound up his career with the Chargers. "We're trying to help kids 13 to 17 in trouble with the juvenile justice system," he said.

Signed out of college for a $300,000 bonus by the Kansas City Chiefs of the old AFL, away from the Rams, the former Trojan played in Super Bowls as a rookie in 1966 and again in 1967 when he had his first 1,000-yard rushing season.

In '67, the Chiefs upset Minnesota, 23-7.

"I can't really say this one thing or that one thing was more important in my career," he offered. "I did enjoy college ball the most, though. It was quite a thrill playing in the Coliseum at Los Angeles three years in a row for SC."

They won't have to hold any benefits for Garrett.

"I don't think any player can ever retire and feel he has it made for life," he remarked, "but I feel reasonably secure."

Garrett did report that his weight had shot up to 197 pounds.

Loses no-hitter in 9th

'Doc' calms Royals

NEW YORK (UPI)—George Medich came within three outs of pitching the second no-hitter in the major leagues in two days Saturday but settled for a two-hitter in helping New York to a 6-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday behind an 11-hit Yankee attack.

Medich, attempting to match the no-hit feat of Cleveland's Dick Bosman, who no-hitted Oakland Friday night, lost his bid when Fran Healy led off the Royals' ninth with a sharp single to centerfield. Medich also lost his shutout when Fred Patek followed with a double and Medich uncorked a wild pitch while facing Amos Otis, allowing Healy to score. Patek then scored on a groundout by Otis.

Medich, a 25-year old righthander who attends the University of Pittsburgh Medical School and eventually plans to become a surgeon, was attempting to hurl the first no-hitter by a Yankee pitcher in regular season play since Allie Reynolds accomplished the feat in 1951. He settled instead for his 12th win against seven losses and his fourth triumph in as many decisions this year against the Royals.

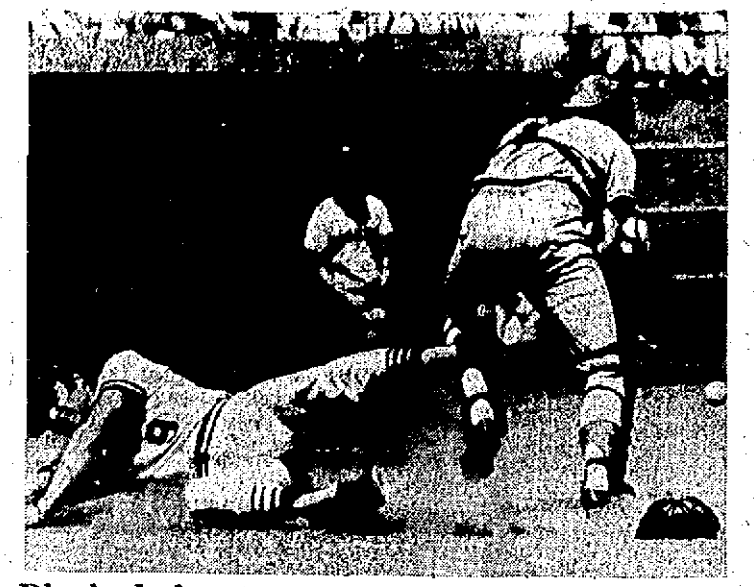

The Yankees routed Royals' starter Steve Busby, who no-hitted Milwaukee last month, with four runs before he could retire a batter in the second inning.

Cubs blast Reds, 11-6

CINCINNATI (AP) — George Mitterwald drove in two runs with an eighth-inning single and two more with home run in the ninth as the Chicago Cubs mauled Cincinnati's relief corps for nine runs in the final two innings Saturday night, crushing the Reds 11-6.

Cincinnati starter Clay Kirby pitched five hitless innings and took a 4-2 lead into the eighth but walked Billy Williams with one out and was replaced by Clay Carroll.

Jose Cardenal greeted Carroll with a double and Andre Thornton singled one run across and took second on the throw home.

After an intentional walk to Bill Madlock, rookie Will McEnaney replaced Carroll and fanned pinch-hitter Carmen Fanzone for the second out. Mitterwald, another pinch hitter, then greeted Pedro Borbon, the fourth pitcher of the inning, with a two-run bloop single and Don Kessinger's single brought the fourth run home.

The Cubs tagged Borbon for five more runs in the ninth.

Ellis collects 5 RBI in win

CLEVELAND (UPI)—John Ellis' fifth RBI of the game, a two-run single with two outs in the ninth inning Saturday, gave the Cleveland Indians a 10-9 victory over the Oakland A's.

After the A's took a 9-8 lead in the top of the ninth on a run-scoring single by Bert Campaneris, Rusty Torres led off the Indians' ninth with a single and took third when Frank Duffy sacrificed and pitcher Rollie Fingers' throw went past first baseman Joe Rudi and Duffy went to second. Fingers got George Hendrick on an infield fly and then struck out Charlie Spikes. Ellis then slapped 1-2 pitch into centerfield to score the winning run.

A crowd of 19,126 boosted the Indians attendance to 616,678, which exceeds last year's attendance by 11,605. They watched the Tribe jump out to a 6-0 lead and come back for their second consecutive triumph over the World Champions.

Ellis drilled a two-run homer in the second inning which bounced off centerfielder Bill North's glove over the centerfield fence. Cleveland then chased starter Ken Holtzman with four runs in the third on a two-run homer by Charlie Spikes and run-scoring doubles by Duffy and Bell.

Wood tames Brewers

CHICAGO (UPI)—Shortstop Bucky Dent smashed a tie-breaking single with two outs in the seventh inning Saturday to back the seven-hit pitching of Wilbur Wood and give the Chicago White Sox their sixth consecutive victory, 3-2, over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Wood, 16-11, faced only 31 batters and became the winningest pitcher in baseball so far this season by outdueling Milwaukee's Clyde Wright, now 8-12.

The White Sox trailed 2-1 in the sixth when Dick Allen cracked his 25th home run more than 400 feet into the upper deck in left field.

Aaron sets another record

Stargell sinks Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Willie Stargell greeted Atlanta reliever Danny Frisella with a leadoff home run in the 11th inning, enabling the Pittsburgh Pirates to defeat the Atlanta Braves 7-6 Saturday night for their seventh consecutive victory.

Hank Aaron set a major league record by playing in the 3,034th game of his baseball career. Ty Cobb held the old standard with 3,033.

The Braves tied the score on Ivan Murrell's pinch homer off Ramon Hernandez with two out in the eighth. It was only his second home run of the season and came after Marty Perez opened the inning with a double and Paul Casanova bunted a pop fly into a double play.

Pittsburgh had taken a 6-5 lead in the seventh when Frank Taveras was hit by a pitch, stole second and scored on Bob Robertson's pinch double.

The Pirates, who blew a four-run first-inning lead, gained a 5-5 deadlock in the third on Stargell's double and a single by Richie Zisk, who drove in two runs with a single in the first.

Bailey's homer shrinks Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Bob Bailey's ninth inning leadoff homer snapped a 1-1 tie and pitcher Dennis Blair drove in an insurance run with a sacrifice fly Saturday in leading the Montreal Expos to a 3-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Blair went the distance on a seven-hitter for his fifth victory in seven decisions while Ed Halicki, touched for six of Montreal's seven hits, suffered his second loss in as many decisions.

Ken Singleton's fifth inning single drove in Montreal's first run but Gary Matthews, with his 11th hit in his last 16 at-bats, got it back with a solo homer in the seventh.

Cards end losing streak at seven

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Tim McCarver's bases-loaded single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth scored two runs to bring the Cardinals from behind for a 6-5 triumph over Houston Saturday, snapping St. Louis' seven-game losing streak.

McCarver drove a Don Wilson pitch into the gap in right centerfield, scoring Jerry DaVanon and Bake McBride to highlight a three-run Cardinal rally in the last frame.

Pinchhitter Luis Melendez led off the inning with a triple and scored as Lou Brock grounded out. DaVanon then walked and McBride singled before Astro reliever Jim York got the second out of the inning. Wilson relieved and promptly walked Joe Torre, filling the bases and setting the stage for McCarver's game-winning blow.

The win was only the second for the Cardinals in their last 15 games.

ANGELS SPLIT—

run home with a sacrifice fly.

Robinson provided insurance in the ninth when he doubled home Chalk, who had opened with a single.

Ed Figueroa pitched out of delicate situations in the second game and the Angels appeared to be on the verge of a sweep when Robinson rocketed his 14th homer into the left-field seats against old nemesis Mike Cuellar who was pitching with two days rest.

But Baltimore rebounded in a hurry as Boog Powell opened the ninth with a single and Baylor sacrificed pinch-runner Enos Cabell to second. Brooks Robinson, who drove home Baltimore's first run with a second-inning single, then tied it with a line drive hit to right.

Another single by Elrod Hendricks—the 12th for the Birds—chased Hendricks and brought on Sells who was quickly victimized by Belanger's booming drive.

Burroughs slams 16th, Texas wins

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI)—Dave Nelson and Len Randle each hit a two-run double and Jeff Burroughs hit his 16th home run of the season Saturday night, allowing the Texas Rangers to coast to an 8-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Jim Bibby, pitching with only two days rest, gave up seven hits, three of them in the ninth inning when the Red Sox scored four runs, and boosted his record to 13-12.

The Rangers trailed 2-1 going into the third but moved in front for good on a three-run inning. Cesar Tovar and Burroughs singled, Tovar scored a fielder's choice with Mike Hargrove reaching first on the play. Burroughs and Hargrove then scored on Randle's double.

New York homers bury Padres, 10-2

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Consecutive bases-empty home runs by George Theodore, Rusty Staub and Cleon Jones highlighted a five-run outburst in the fifth inning Saturday night and the New York Mets went on to rip the San Diego Padres 10-2.

Theodore, Staub and Jones hit their homers with one out in the fifth off loser Lowell Palmer. Doubles by Jerry Grote and Don Hahn and a single by Wayne Garrett produced two more runs in the inning and made an easy winner of Jerry Koosman, who was behind 2-1 prior to the fifth.

Baseball's fans join in tearful goodbye to 'Diz'

WIGGINS, Miss. (AP)—Dizzy Dean was laid to rest Saturday on a country hillside following a simple ceremony which reflected none of the flamboyance that characterized him in life.

"He has left us, but he has not left us empty," said the Rev. Bill Taylor, pastor of the tiny Bond Baptist Church in Wiggins, little more than a pop fly from Dean's sprawling ranch-style home just north of Wiggins.

Jay Hanna Dean blazed into the limelight during the trying times of the early 1930s as a baseball pitcher of uncanny ability. But it was his gift of gab and uninhibited down-home humor that made him a fixture on the national scene for nearly half a century.

"Few men will be remembered as he will be, a man of kindness and goodwill," said the Rev. Taylor. "He was an institution it would have been been a tragedy to institutionalize.

"His speech didn't always follow the rules, but he was better understood than our best grammarian." The minister said Dean's dialogue with life was like "letters writ from the heart, not the head."

Dizzy's childlike tendency to blurt out whatever came to mind endeared him to millions, including many younger people whose only knowledge of his prior baseball greatness came from what they read and heard.

Sometimes they heard it from Diz himself as he entertained millions on televised games during the 1950s and 1960s with tales of how great he and other oldtimers were in their days.

But when Dizzy bragged, it wasn't like an ordinary braggart—and his fans loved him all the more for it.

In the end, it was mainly the residents of his adopted hometown—black and white—who made up the overflow crowd at his funeral.

There were some well known people, like country-rock star Roy Acuff, who used to team with Dean and sing his favorite song, "The Wabash Cannonball." Mississippi Gov. Bill Waller was there too, along with football coaches Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama and Johnny Vaught of Mississippi.

His pallbearers where men he drank coffee with and hunted with and golfed with and joked with. Above all, the ones he joked with. Men like Jack McHenry and Boyce Holleman and B. Havard Jr.

And, of course, his family, brother Paul and the two women in his life, one white and one black: his wife, Pat, and Lena Walls, the Deans' housekeeper and companion for 25 years.

The only people to say anything during the services at the church and cemetery were a singer and two local ministers.

But as Mrs. Dean was leaving her husband's grave, her words best reflected her husband's lifelong attitude toward the press and, through the press, to the public.

She turned to a cluster of newsmen and cameramen and said, "I want to thank you all for being here. It was nice of you to come."

We make them small because we want to, not because we have to.

Big car manufacturers are finally seeing the light.

All of a sudden, everybody is in the small car business.

This, however, is not because car manufacturers have a profound belief in the small car.

It's because they have a profound belief that it's no longer easy to sell big ones.

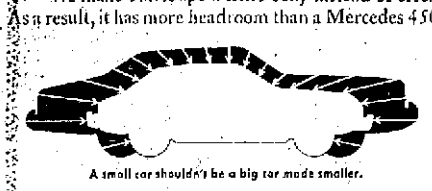

At Fiat, we've been making small cars for the last 70 years. Nobody twisted our arms to make them that way. We simply thought that small cars make more sense than big cars.

We also didn't have to hurry up and turn them out overnight. We've had years to think about them, and to improve them.

One of the happiest results of all these years is the Fiat 124.

Did you ever notice how American small cars look like miniature American big cars? The 124 looks nothing like them.

We make our coupe a little boxy instead of sleek. As a result, it has more headroom than a Mercedes 450 and a Rolls Royce.* This height, plus exceptionally large windows, keeps you from getting small car claustrophobia.

A small car shouldn't be a big car made smaller.

Through some ingenious engineering, we've given the 124 more legroom than not only every other small car, but most big ones. More, in fact, than a Lincoln Continental, a Cadillac Eldorado, and a Chrysler Imperial.*

In the backseat, there's room for two children. Even if they're 6'6".

And unlike many small cars, the 124 has a real trunk. It'll carry 7 pieces of luggage. In fact, the trunk is about twice as large as the trunk in a VW.

Driving the 124 isn't like driving other small cars, either. But to see the difference, you simply have to drive it.

The car has self-adjusting, power-assisted, four-wheel disc brakes. Radial tires that run $100 extra on most cars are standard equipment. Automatic transmission and air conditioning are available.

The Fiat 124 is not the kind of car that's whipped up overnight in a moment of panic. It's the natural result of a long evolutionary process.

And the difference shows.

Shrine workouts continue; South slight favorite

By PAUL McLEOD

The North and South will continue strenuous workouts under a burning sun this weekend in preparation for this Saturday's 23rd Shrine Football contest at the Rose Bowl.

With temperatures forecast in the mid-90's the North, under head coach Paul Womack, will work out twice-a-day at its training site at Whittier College. The South will follow a similar schedule practicing at Cal State Long Beach.

Womack worked his squad without pads, three times a day until Thursday. The 10-year Riverside High coach justified his move by contending that "conditioning will be the key to this game." Co-coaching the North is Taft High's Hal Lambert.

Under the direction of John Hangartner of Kennedy High (Buena Park) and Gardena High's Ralph Vidal the South is slightly favored over the North despite being outweighed by eight pounds-per-man.

Rick Costello of Neff High will probably start at quarterback for the Rebels. Costello completed 141 of 248 passes last fall for 2,196 yards and 24 touchdowns. His three-year totals were 393 completions in 751 attempts for 5,913 yards and 63 TD's, second leading passer in CIF history.

Dwight Ford of Bell High and Kevin Cole of Gardena will spearhead the ground attack. Ford runs the 100 yard dash in 9.6 and used that speed to rush for 1,651 yards during 1973. Cole led Gardena to the 1973 L.A. City championship with 1,606 yards rushing.

Santa Monica quarterback Dennis Thurman will open at flanker for the South—a move designated to add more speed and precision to the Rebel offense. Thurman plans to attend USC in the fall where he is expected to replace Lynn Swann.

Frank Manumaleuna of Banning High is scheduled to see action at both tight end and fullback. Manumaleuna was an all-L.A. City selection while garnering all-America honors in his three-years at Banning. He can also play defense if needed.

Tickets for the game are priced at $5.15 and $2.10 and are available in Long Beach at El Bekal Temple, 801 Elm Ave., between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. or by phone at 432-3407. Tickets can be purchased in Los Angeles at the Shrine Football Office, 655 W. Jefferson Blvd.

Reason for playing

RAMS ORDERED TO PICKET

The National Football League Players Assn., expressing "concern" with a decision by Ram veterans not to picket their training camp, will set up picket lines today, Ram player representative Tom Mack said Saturday.

Mack said an informal vote he conducted among the team's veterans, in which it was decided to boycott training camp but not set up picket lines, was overruled by the NFLPA.

"The union has expressed concern that people will misinterpret our not picketing and believe that we are not in full support of the union," Mack said. "In other words, I deviated from union policy without authority."

On Tuesday, a day before the squad's rookies and free agents reported to training camp here, Mack announced the outcome of a vote he conducted among a majority of the Rams' 44 veterans. He said the veterans felt picket lines drew media attention away from the real issues of the strike and focused attention to the picketing players themselves.

After three days of two-a-day drills, coach Chuck Knox cancelled today's workout.

Scheckter captures British Grand Prix

BRANDS HATCH, England (AP) — Jody Scheckter of South Africa, in a Tyrrell Ford, won the British Grand Prix Saturday as a luckless Ferrari, piloted by Nikki Lauda, which had led until five laps from the finish, dropped out with a puncture.

Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, in a Marlboro Texaco, finished second and took the lead in the world drivers' championship point standings.

In a race which did not become exciting until the closing stages, despite record-breaking speeds and a record crowd of 100,000, Lauda, of Austria, dominated until that fateful puncture.

Leading the championship before the race, he seemed set to go farther ahead. At one point, he had built a 12-second lead which he saw whittled away as he slowed on a flat tire.

Car after car passed him on thelast few laps.

Punctures were a feature of the race. They caused the downfall of many top drivers, including Ronnie Peterson of Sweden.

Scheckter's winning speed was 115.78 mph. He completed the 75-laps in one hour, 43 minutes, 2.2 seconds.

CHRIS EVERT BY A MILE—

played the race by ear; I didn't run it in the newspapers. I had a couple plans, depending on how my filly got out of the gate. So she got out fast and that was that.

"They said I brought my filly out here too early, that I wasn't working her right, and that I was too young. I guess they know now they were wrong on all counts."

Velasquez said he hit Chris Evert only a few times.

"I didn't need to do it any more," remarked the grinning Panamanian. "I looked back when I came into the stretch and couldn't find that other filly. I knew where she was until the half-mile pole and then she disappeared."

Pincay said he "didn't know what was the matter, but she (Miss Musket) didn't have it today. She broke okay, but tried to duck in a few strides out of the gate. When I tried to catch up on the inside, my filly wouldn't go up in there. I tried the other filly a couple times, but each time she pulled away from us. I whacked my filly once, but I could see she didn't have it today and I didn't push her."

Disappointed Charlie Whittingham, Miss Musket's trainer, allowed as how "I guess I better stay out of match races. I don't know what was the matter. Maybe she sulked, but I don't know today."

The $350,000 purse zoomed Chris Evert's lifetime earnings to $602,801, but she'll never have an easier, richer payday than Saturday.

Pincay struck out in the match race, but he slugged a grandslam home run in the $132,000 Hollywood Juvenile Championship for 2-year-olds when he steered Dimaggio to a nose victory over The Bagel Prince. George Navonod was third, three lengths behind. Favored Eastern import Bold Gun was ninth in the 12-horse field.

Dimaggio, an appropriately named Bold Hitter colt, paid $14.40.

The Bagel Prince's trainer, John Pappalardo, claimed a foul against Dimaggio, but it was disallowed when movies showed plenty of daylight between the two colts during the entire stretch drive.

Dimaggio's owner, John Valpredo, said when his colt last raced and lugged so badly, Pincay told him, "Put blinkers on him or I won't ride him back." So Dimaggio raced and won with blinkers Saturday.

Maybe that was an equipment change Miss Musket needed.

La Zanzara faces 6 at Hollypark

Aaron Jones' La Zanzara, second in the Santa Barbara, Long Beach and Vanity Handicaps this year, will be favored to capture her first stakes event in 1974 when she takes on six distance-loving grass specialists in this afternoon's $66,200 Beverly Hills Handicap at Hollywood Park.

The Beverly Hills highlights the final Sunday of racing at the Inglewood oval, and those in attendance will have a chance to win $76,000 in "Super Sweep" prize money. The fan, or fans selecting the most consecutive winners beginning with the first race will collect or share the $76,000.

Scheduled at a mile and three-eighths over the lakeside turf course, the Beverly Hills also attracted Dogtooth Violet, Ready Wit, That's Show Biz, Grasping and Hurry Countess. With seven starters and no declarations, the winner will take home a check for $39,200.

La Zanzara, a late-running Irish-bred daughter of the Herbager stallion Sea Hawk II, closed fastest of all in the recent $111,500 Vanity Handicap, won by her stablemate Tallahto.

Hollypark's traditional closing-day feature, the $100,000-added Sunset Handicap, attracted a dozen grass specialists, including Eastern ace Take Off, when the mile and one-half turf course marathon was drawn Saturday. Take Off, whose victories in the recent Edgemere and Bowling Green Handicaps have earned him top weight of 125 pounds for the Sunset, will be ridden by Ron Turcotte.

Big Whippendeal, who earlier this season captured the Century Handicap, blew out a half-mile in :49⅘ Saturday and then landed in post 11. His Sunset pilot, Laffit Pincay, was up for the drill. The remainder of the Sunset lineup, in post position order, is Scantling (Angel Santiago), Mr. Cockatoo (Wayne Harris), Strong Award (Jorge Tejeira), Yvetot (Heliodoro Gustines), Irish Stronghold (Chuck Baltazar), Greco II (Bill Shoemaker), Montmartre (Don Pierce), Pure Flight (Steve Valdez), El Rey (Alvaro Pineda) and War Heim (Fernando Toro).

RACING ROUNDUP

AQUEDUCT—True Knight came from last place to win the 88th running of the $114,800 Suburban Handicap by 1½ lengths in a furious stretch drive by jockey Angel Cordero Saturday. Plunk, shipped in from California, was second by a head over 7-5 favorite Forego. True Knight, a 5-year-old son of Chateaugay, added $68,880 to his lifetime earnings of $663,785. Carrying 127 pounds, he covered the 1¼-mile distance in 2:01 ⅖ and paid $10.20 to win.

LIBERTY BELL—Sherby came from off the pace to beat Better Arbitor by four lengths in the $58,450 Minuteman Handicap. Stonewalk, the 7-5 favorite, stumbled at the start and unseated jockey Miguel Rivera, who escaped unhurt. Ridden by Herb Hinojosa, Sherby returned $19.40 to win.

ARLINGTON PARK—Buffalo Lark defeated Royal Glint by a nose in the $45,550 Diplomat Way Handicap. Barclay Jet was third. Buffalo Lark earned $30,550 and paid $9.40 to win.

MONMOUTH—Northern Fling, under the urging of jockey Anthony Agnello, overtook Shane's Prince in the stretch for a three-quarter length victory in the $38,550 Longfellow Handicap. The winner covered the 1⅛-mile distance in 1:49⅗ and returned $10.40 to win.

ROOSEVELT RACEWAY—Italy's Dosson scored a major upset Saturday night by beating odds-on favorite Delmonica Hanover in the $50,000 Challenge Club Trot. The 5-year-old Italian trotter, who finished third to Delmonica Hanover in the $200,000 Roosevelt International Trot a week ago, went right to the front and was never headed. Delmonica Hanover finished second, three lengths behind the winner and a length ahead of Axius of France. Dosson returned $20.40 for win tickes.

For Smooth Coin, a 4-year-old daughter of Jet Smooth, the win was her fourth in seven starts this year and her 18th in her last 26 starts, increasing her earnings this year to $10,000 and the past two years to $32,000.

Smooth Coin, who gave trainer D. Wayne Lukas his 48th win of the summer meeting, raced the 440 yards in 22.05 seconds and paid $8.60 for the win.

Buddy Fee Dee finished second in the dash while I'm For You ran third. The favored entry of Vinewin and Osage Copy ran sixth and seventh in the eight-horse field.

The Bayou Bar gelding, who began his career four years ago here in a $1,600 claimer, turned in the fastest time of the meeting, clocking the 350 yards in 17.62.

Flight 109 returned $5.20, $2.60 and $2.20. Priss Kitten and Native Empress wound up in a deadheat for second.

No retirement for Whittingham

WHITTINGHAM
Keeping busy

No wonder Charlie Whittingham feels a bit uncomfortable. Of the five newly announced members of racing's Hall of Fame, he's the only one still on the same old job.

But the balding 61-year-old trainer has no plans to give up his intention of outlasting the lengthy career of "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, who didn't retire as a handler of thoroughbreds until he was 89.

"There's no chance for me to retire," said the 40-year veteran Whittingham. "I hope I have another 40 years."

Whittingham, one of the West's premier trainers and conditioner of oneof the most powerful stables in the country, was selected last week for induction into the National Museum of Racing in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 6.

His co-inductees include Secretariat, Damascus, Dark Mirage and former jockey Conn McCreary. All have quit the track.

But the way Whittingham is going, retirement for him should be a long way off.

His stable earned him a personal high of $1,865,385 in 1973 and Whittingham has been the nation's leading money winning trainer the last four years.

As the frontrunner again this year, he would be bidding for title No. 6 except for a 27-day strike at Santa Anita in 1969 which cost him that year's championship by $4,000.

The training great also has captured more than 200 stakes victories and close to 40 victories in $100,000 races—tops among all active thoroughbred conditioners.

"I like what I'm doing, so why should I quit?" Whittingham said. "Everybody I see who retires dies. I'll go on as long as my health is in good shape and so far I haven't had any trouble."

The ex-Marine, whose one-horse stable in 1934 has grown to a collection of 70 spread out at different tracks in the West, doesn't plan a rest after Hollywood Park ends its meeting Monday. He is going to start at Del Mar, which opens its meeting two days later. He also has some Eastern dates planned.

"This is a seven day a week job," Whittingham said.

Rich Del Mar meet opens this week

DEL MAR—Racing at the seaside Del Mar track opens Wednesday and more than 1,700 horses already have been approved to run for the $3.2 million purse schedule.

The 43-day meeting, with Tuesdays off, includes 25 stakes worth $705,000.

"Traditionally the horsemen came to Del Mar to rest up or freshen their horses," said racing secretary Peter Tunney. "Now the trainers send them to a farm or training center for a week or 10 days and use that stall for a horse they intend to run."

Del Mar has 1,650 permanent and 120 temporary stalls. Another 200 horses can be stabled this year at Pomona and their entires accepted at Del Mar.

"We're going to continue our basic philosophy of improving the quality of racing by using 2-year-olds and 3-year-olds," said Tunney.

Among the jockeys returning to the Southern California track will be Steve Valdez, 18, who took the riding crown last year, 61-45, over Alvaro Pineda. No jockey has won consecutive titles since Bill Shoemaker took five in succession between 1950-54. Others returning are John Ramirez, Howard Grant, Rudy Rosales, Jerry Lambert, Fernando Toro, Bill Mahorney and A.L. Diaz.

Albacore outlook gloomy along Southland coast

The heading over a release from the Southwest Fisheries Center of the National Marine Fisheries Center at La Jolla reads like this: "Albacore Fishing scattered along the U. S. West Coast."

That bulletin, labeled No. 74-4 and issued last Monday, may or may not add much to what I already have reported to you about the longfins. However, I have read and re-read the bulletin and have studied the accompanying map showing all the sea surface temperatures from Vancouver Island to the tip of Baja California.

The chart shows the sea temperatures for this year in solid lines, those for 1973 in dotted lines. There really isn't any need to compare the two because only one person caught an albacore on a sportfishing boat in 1973.

For the first two weeks this month there was a 60-degree current far, far off the Mendocino coast. It looped downward and over the old Showboat Bank southwest of San Diego, then upward to the coast near Point Conception. Another looped downard over the San Juan Seamount, then even farther north of Conception.

Why am I relating all this to you? Because this is the time of year when sportfishermen are so interested in the albacore runs, or lack of such, that they bombard me and the fishing landings for information.

THERE WAS ONE SIGNIFICANT paragraph in the 700-word report. It read: "Surface waters offshore western North America warmed at near-normal rates in the first half of July. Most offshore waters warmed by about 2 degrees F. except for a region between Monterey and Morro Bay, where temperatures dropped slightly from values during the last half of June."

That may or may not have been the reason why landing operators at Avila Beach and Morro Bay were watching the situation closely. My oldtime friend, Mac McClintock, who once was the general manager of the abandoned Pierpoint Landing, said this:

"With most of the sportfishermen drawing beads on the sporadic albacore which are showing their age-old tactics of hit and run in July, simmer down in August and then really reaise hell in September, the guy who wants his fishing NOW is getting it, but with rockfishing providing the action and with satisfying results." Mac was saying that after a satisfying trip for himself and wife, Millie, out of Port San Luis Sportfishing at Avila Beach.

Skip Sato, who operates that particular landing, said at the same time: "We used to tell the media when somebody caught a limit of big rockfish; now we tell them when somebody fails to get a limit."

Even so, the skippers out of that landing are watching the albacore very closely. Along with limits of rockfish. there are usually two or three salmon.

THERE MAY BE A CHANGE in the albacore reports after this weekend. In addition to the party boats out of the San Diego landings, there are scores of other boats, all privately owned, trying for albacore. The Tuna Clubs, here and at Avalon, and other game-fishing clubs of Southern California, were concluding their annual inter-club competition Saturday. Their reports should prove very interesting.

Despite bad weather at sea part of the time, most of the commercial fleet is concentrated 500 to 600 miles off the west coast of North America all the way from a point due west of Morro Bay to Vancouver Island.

The commercial fleet changed its position at times because of weather. Fair catches were being made off the Dumping Grounds of the Northwest. It would be most delightful to report that the fish were concentrated on the Dumping Grounds off San Diego, but it is beginning to appear that that will not occur this year.

The local situation at Long Beach, Seal Beach, San Pedro and Newport Beach, remains about the same, with fair to good catches of kelp and sand bass, some barracuda, an occasional halibut and the usual assortment of bottom fish. For the surf fishermen, there are occasional runs of corbina off the beaches from Sunset to Huntington.

OUTDOOR MINIS— If you are in the Bishop area Aug. 3 and 4, there is something besides fishing as an attraction. The Bishop Indian Athletic Assn. is sponsoring its annual All-Indian Rodeo at the Tri-County Fairgrounds. There will be a Saturday night performance and another on Sunday afternoon.

Mark Driscoll, Long Beach, and his partner, Marvin Snowbarger, San Jose, entered this year's Levi's Ride and Tie Race near Chiloquin, Ore., and finished seventh among 42 teams. It is the longest ride-and-tie race (33½ miles) in this country. It goes over stony roads, up and down steep grades, through forest land and ends at the Klamath County Fairgrounds in Klamath Falls.

San Gabriel Valley Hunters Unlimited has given the Department of Fish and Game a check for $125 to buy a copy of the Hunter Safety film, "Sweet Sunday's Gone," to be used in Hunter Safety classes in stressing the dangers in the mishandling of firearms.

It seems a bit unusual for a map company, such as Rand McNally, to publish a paperback, "Travel by Train," written by Edward J. Wojtas. but it's ready for the book stores at $1.95. It's a "natural" for people who never have been on trains, and a refresher for those who "remember when." It tells what to do and see in the U. S., Canada and Mexico.

Success in housing starts 'less than rousing'

NEW YORK (AP) — The Nixon administration's strategy in tackling the nation's housing problems has been to stimulate new housing starts by making available more mortgage money.

But government efforts have been restrained and the current state of the housing situation indicates success to date has been less than rousing.

President Nixon on May 10 announced plans to pump $10.3 billion into the nation's sagging mortgage market. But he has also pointed out that government efforts to stimulate housing won't be allowed to upset the tight money policy the government is attempting to use an anti-inflation weapon.

The $10.3 billion is coming from private money markets through issuance of Treasury notes, a form of government debt. Proceeds will be used to subsidize lower government-insured mortgage interest rates for the home buyer.

ABOUT $4 billion of the money was earmarked for the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, part of the Department of Housing and Urban Development, to advance funds to savings and loan institutions.

This, it is hoped, would lend a hand to the money-starved lending institutions which traditionally fork out 60 per cent of the nation's mortgage money.

Up to $3 billion was committed to the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. to buy as many as 100,000 home mortgages from savings and loan associations that originate those mortgages. The maximum size of such a mortgage purchase is $35,000 at an 8¾ per cent subsidized interest rate.

The third and most ambitious component of the Nixon strategy added $3.3 billion to the $6.6 billion already committed on Jan. 26 to the so-called Tandem Plan — a subsididy on mortgages aimed directly and exclusively at generating new homes.

THE TANDEM Plan, originated in 1969 and expanded during the current housing slump, is a home mortage purchase program involving the Government National Mortgage Association, another part of HUD known informally as Ginny Mae.

Ginny Mae agrees to buy FHA-insured mortgages on new homes from any approved FHA lender, usually a savings and loan institution or savings bank. The mortage, bearing a subsidized interest of 7¾ per cent, is then sold at periodic Ginny Mae auctions to private buyers. The current interest rate at the auction market is about 9.6 per cent.

The Tandem Plan is committed to subsidize up to 300,000 mortages this year, but because of the numerous tight money and inflation-related problems, it probably will fall far short of that goal. In fact, the nationwide total for FHA-inspected housing starts was only 24,400 units in the first quarter of 1974, or 7.6 per cent of all starts. That was down from a recent peak of 527,900 FHA-inspected starts for the full year in 1971, or 25.3 per cent of all housing starts that year.

THE KEY problem hampering FHA efforts to relieve the housing industry, according to Sheldon B. Lubar, assistant secretary of housing production and mortgage credit, is the soaring cost of an average home. The largest mortgage the FHA can insure at present is $33,000 — but the median price for a new home now is $41,000.

"With the FHA ceiling at $33,000," Lubar says, "there's no way we can finance a home, say, in New York."

A bill with administration backing now is being considered in Congress that would raise the maximum mortgage allowable for government subsidy to $38,000 for the Ginny Mae Tandem Plan. For all other FHA-insured mortgages, including both new and existing homes, the new ceiling would be $45,000.

There are other snags to over come, Ginny Mae President Woodward Kingman says. "Not enough consumers know about the Tandem Plan, and it's not easy for the lender to explain the program. In addition, the bankers and builders have the impression there's a lot of red tape involved."

AS A result, he says, lenders are shunning the program to the detriment of the mortgage seeker. As long as the Tandem Plan is hindered by lack of bank and builder enthusiasm, home buyers seeking government help from the FHA must settle for the higher general FHA mortgage rate which was just boosted to 9 per cent on July 8 — a full 1¼ per cent over the Ginny Mae subsidized rate.

One proposal before Congress that might relieve the "red tape" problem, Lubar says, would have banks assume 10 per cent of the insurance liability on FHA-insured loans, and would make the lender responsible for more of the paper work required for FHA-Ginny Mae mortgage rate subsidies. This, it is hoped, would bring the administrative mechanics of the programs closer to the bankers.

Mortgage subsidies primarily are aimed at middle-class home buyers. For the poor (those with $7,500 or less in income), the government has a program to subsidize the difference between the tenant's rent and 25 per cent of the recipient's income. The target for this program is 400,000 dwellings.

Buffalo! Yes, buffalo

Much to the surprise of a couple touring Southern California in their station wagon, a full-grown buffalo stood in the center of the freeway as if he were glued to it.

By the looks of him, points out the National Automobile Club, he was the last thing the couple wanted to charge. Frankly, however, they had no choice, had no way of escape, had no time to stop.

So the driver hit and killed the buffalo, severely damaged the station wagon.

Strange hazard

An unexpected hazard of the energy crisis struck a resident of Hampstead, a posh north London district, as he left a restaurant. He was knocked down by a hit-and-run roller skater.

$235.00* a month for a 3 bedroom 2 bath townhome.

And for the first year, your payments can be only $135.64 a month. That's right. $135.64. $135.64 for your brand new Larwin home. A payment so low you may be able to buy new furniture. Or pay off other bills. And start building equity immediately. Larwin has developed the "Great Take-Off" program that takes away the burden of high monthly house payments.

This is how it works: For example, on a $37,490 home, you would normally have to make a monthly house payment of $235.64.* However, under our "GTO" program, Larwin sends you a check for $100 every month for 12 full months. So your monthly payment is only $135.64. Of course, there are comparable savings on homes in other price ranges. But in order to qualify for Larwin's "Great Take-Off" program, you must take title to your new home by August 23, 1974.

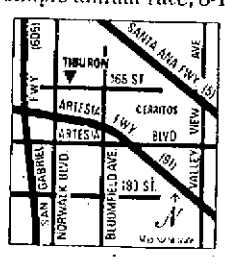

So if you're buried under high monthly payments, this can mean a new financial life. Visit a Larwin community today and talk to our sales representatives. Take off $100 a month from your house payment. And take off into a brand new life.

Now, VA and FHA buyers who purchase homes under this program will receive special benefits in the form of a 7-3/4% interest rate (8-1/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE). Loan maximums are $33,000 on 3 bedroom homes and cannot exceed $36,750 on homes of 4 bedrooms or more.

Typical Veteran Loan Comparison: (1) Regular VA loan. For a typical $37,490 home, $4,490 down payment. First trust deed of $33,000 paid in 354 equal monthly payments of $266.53 principal and interest at 9% simple interest, 9-3/4% APR. (2) Special VA loans. For a $37,490 home. $4,490 down payment. First trust deed of $33,000 paid in 354 equal monthly payments of $237.42 principal and interest at 7-3/4% simple annual rate, 8-1/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE.

The savings to buyer amounts to $29.11/month or $10,304.94 over the 354 month life of the loan.

*Typical Financing: Cash sales price $37,490. Down payment $7,590. First Trust Deed $29,990. Paid in 354 equal payments of $235.64 PI&I at 8-1/4% simple annual rate. 8-3/4% ANNUAL PERCENTAGE RATE No 2nd Trust Deed. From $37,490.

WHAT'S YOUR PROBLEM?

Free, clear house gives one great peace of mind

By DON G. CAMPBELL

"Free and clear" — it has a nice, satisfying sound to it and, in real estate, despite the obvious tax advantages in having interest payments on the mortgage as a deduction, there's still a great peace of mind in finally getting this particular "monkey" off your back, in having a really and truly paid-off house in your possession.

DEAR MR. CAMPBELL:

We would appreciate it very much if you would explain to us what the procedure is when one finishes paying for one's house through an out-of-city bank (but in the same state). Our payments are on a 4 per cent mortgage and the balance is small enough for us to pay it as we can see no gain, as far as taxes are concerned, in continuing it. Would we need to hire a lawyer, or do banks automatically send you all the papers, or what? Your answer would be deeply appreciated. Mrs. J.U. (Tucson, Ariz.)

ANSWER: About nine times out of 10 the bank will take care of this for you, but it's a good idea to know what you should expect from it, and how you can double-safeguard your physical ownership of the property. When you make your final payment, for instance, you will undoubtedly receive a formal receipt which can carry any of several notations: "satisfaction of lien," "satisfaction of judgment," or possibly, "satisfaction of mortgage."

At the time of the payoff, though, you should also insist that the bank send you the original mortgage and bond or note. With this in your physical possession, of course, it will be impossible for anyone to substantiate a claim on the mortgage — keep it in a secure place, such as a safe deposit box, however.

But there's another point to keep in mind: virtually every mortgage is recorded and the mere payment of the mortgage debt — and the surrender of the bond or note and mortgage by the mortgagee to the property owner — don't change the facts of the records in the recording office where the mortgage was originally filed.

You should make sure, then, that the mortgagee, on receiving final payment, not only signs the formal "satisfaction" piece already mentioned, but that it is recorded as well. The recording officer, upon receiving his copy of the "satisfaction" piece, marks the mortgage on his records as being cancelled or satisfied.

The "satisfaction" piece should include a detailed description of the mortgage — its date, amount, and the date and place where it was recorded and, if the bond or note and mortgage have ever been assigned, then these assignments should also be noted on the record so that there's a clean chain of ownership of the mortgage from the original lender down to the person executing the "satisfaction" piece.

And, when this is filed, the necessary fees paid, it's customary to write, or stamp, across the face of the mortgage (as copied in the recording books) a statement to the effect that the mortgage has been "cancelled or satisfied by satisfaction piece filed on such-and-such a date."

Complicated? Not really as much as it sounds, and the chances are good that the bank will probably handle it all for you as a matter of course. But, it is a good idea to follow through, personally, and make sure that none of these steps have been omitted and, if you're not absolutely satisfied in your own mind that the settlement is fool-proof, then the small legal fee involved in having a lawyer check it out is a very cheap form of insurance.

I am 31, married for five years. We have no children and I make $15,000 a year. My wife and I would like to purchase a three-family house costing $44,000 which requires approximately $10,000 down. This would leave a mortgage of $34,000 at 8¾ per cent for 20 years. I believe I can handle the monthly payments, but the problem is the downpayment would almost wipe out our liquid savings. I have adequate life insurance and about $11,000 in a savings bank at 5¼ per cent, $3,000 in U.S. savings bonds, and about 120 shares of common stock which we purchased for $5,000.

We're presently paying $55 a month toward a lot in Florida and it's about half paid off (total cost: $5,300). I also pay $100 a month into a mutual fund on a 15-year, $18,000 contractual plan. I'm also 50 per cent owner of a delicatessen with my brother-in-law and have a $6,000 passbook loan on this that is being paid off from the business. What do you suggest? Mr. S.M. (Jersey City, N.J.)

ANSWER: I don't see too much of a problem for you — you're quite obviously a good, solid, risk. I, too, wouldn't want to see you wipe out most of your liquid assests in making the downpayment on the house, and I see no reason for your having to do so.

The first thing that catches my eye is your comment that you have "adequate life insurance," although you don't specify how much or what type of life insurance it is. If it's a whole life policy with some loan value built up in it, this, of course, would be the cheapest

Unfortunately, the U.S. savings bonds can't be used for collateral, nor can the mutual fund shares unless you have physical possession of them — which you obviously don't have since you are buying them on a contractual plan, in which case the fund retains possession of them. (Incidentally, in an aside, you express concern over the fund. I wouldn't worry, if I were you. Its shares — like virtually all funds — are down, sharply, from a couple of years ago, but you should be relieved to know that your fund, over the longer term, has a good growth record.)

I don't think you should have any trouble borrowing the downpayment you need. You strike me as a very solid type — a very good risk for any lender.

Each Brentwood Park home has two full deluxe baths, and some models have two baths and a powder room. Custom quality wall-to-wall carpeting, tiled entries, walk-in wardrobes, and walled patios are standard. Soaring cathedral ceilings are found in several designs, while the extensive master suites emphasize privacy with their own baths and dressing areas.

CUSTOM FIREPLACES with loglighters, hand finished kitchen cabinetry, security locks on sliding glass doors, attached two-car garages with extra storage space add permanent value to the property. Bright, roomy kitchens carry a complete line of quality built-in appliances that includes range and hood, oven, disposal and automatic dishwasher.

The neighborhood of selective dwellings in serene surroundings is located on Lucas Street near 17012 Bloomfield Ave., Cerritos. Four decorated models are open daily from 10 a.m. at the address.

Exit the Artesia Freeway (91) at Bloomfield Avenue and drive north to the first street, Lucas, then turn right to the model complex.

New, low financing set at Westport Cerritos Villas

New low financing under VA terms is available as the final 60 homes at close-in Westport Cerritos Villas are introduced at a grand opening today by Westport Home Builders, Inc., Anaheim-based housing development firm.

The townhome villas with stylish exteriors and a long list of interior amenities can be purchased at 7¾% interest with VA financing, announced Merrill Pugmire, Westport's director of marketing.

Cal-Vet home, FHA loan guarantees and conventional financing also are available.

Revamped floor plans providing more room and conveniences within the townhomes has contributed to the sales success of Cerritos Villas, Pugmire said.

Along with an earlier development nearby which sold out in less than three years, Westport Cerritos Villas will contain 535 one and two-story townhomes. The last 60 on the market are available for immediate occupancy.

EXTERIORS of rough stucco and warm woods are enhanced by lush landscaping to give the development a village-like look. Included in the community is a recreation center with three swimming pools, two for children, a youngster's playground, clubhouse and sauna.

Within the villas homebuyers will find wall-to-wall carpeting, kitchens with luminous ceilings and a complete line of quality built-in appliances and a bonus in storage space. Attached garages provide easy access to the homes and have room enough for two cars.

Centrally located for easy shopping and family services, Westport Cerritos Villas are just off the Artesia Freeway and handy to employment centers of Long Beach, Lakewood, Los Angeles and northern Orange County.

THE WELL known Los Cerritos shopping mall with its major department stores is just minutes away.

Westport Home Builders, Inc., master planned the extensive residential development. A variety of floor plans are available for selection in the two and three-bedroom models. They are priced from $23,950 to $31,000.

To reach the villa townhomes, take the Artesia Freeway (91) and exit at Bloomfield Avenue or Norwalk Boulevard, then turn north to 166th Street. Models are open daily from 10 a.m. and are located on 166th between Bloomfield and Norwalk.

Steel firm will build in Watson

Coutinho, Caro & Co. (Pacific), Inc., international steel traders, have purchased an 11¼-acre site in the Watson/Alameda Industrial Park, in the Dominguez area, and is building a 128,000-square-foot mill depot and adjacent office facility.

Value of the land and buildings is almost $2,500,000, according to Wolfgang Grunewald, president and chief executive officer of the company. The buildings are expected to be completed in November.

The firm is part of the Coutinho, Caro & Co. group of companies, one of the largest steel trading organizations in the world, according to Grunewald. The parent company, founded in 1895, is headquartered in Hamburg, West Germany.

COUTINHO, Caro (Pacific) will warehouse several types of finished steel products for shipment to steel distributors on the West Coast, Grunewald said. It will employ 20 people. The company also has a steel fabricating plant in Compton.

Industrial planning for the facility, and architectural design, were directed by Peter Kudrave, AIA, of Theodore Barry & Associates, Los Angeles. Millie & Severson, of Long Beach, is the builder.

Both Coutinho, Caro and Watson Industrial Properties, the seller, were represented by Los Angeles industrial realtor Vincent Servin.

DAYA AGARWAL

Agarwal in new office

Daya S. Agarwal, broker-owner, has announced the opening of his Red Carpet, Realtors, office at 10824 E. Alondra Blvd., Cerritos.

The 2000-square-foot office is in the new College Square Shopping Center.

Agarwal is a registered professional engineer, in addition to holding a degree in business administration and management. He is an active member of the Rancho Los Cerritos Board of Realtors.

"Our location will enable us to serve the needs of both buyers and sellers in the Cerritos, Norwalk, and Bellflower areas. And, our plans include both an investment and business opportunity division," stated Agarwal.

Valuable 'vane

A grasshopper weathervane hammered out by Deacon Shem Drowne in 1742, when Faneuil Hall was built in Boston, is valued at $300,000.

Campus Valley Center started

Construction is under way on Campus Valley Center, The Irvine Company's seventh neighborhood center, located adjacent to the University of California, Irvine (UCI) and Irvine Town Center, according to Albert J. Auer, vice president of the development company's commericial division.

The 8.5-acre center will have 19 stores anchored by an Albertson Food Center, a larger-than-usual full service-store with a pharmacy, delicatessen, hot bakery, houseware department and outdoor living section.

The store will have 36,600 square feet, nearly 12,000 square feet more than the average Albertson market, Auer said.

Campus Valley Center, located at the intersection of Campus Drive and Zee Street near the Campus Fire Station, will have a total 66,650 square feet of buildings, including 14 mall stores, a bank, restaurant and fast food outlet, Auer said.

ALBERTSON'S and the mall shops are scheduled to open in December and the bank and restaurants shortly thereafter, he added.

The mall stores are expected to include a sporting goods store, cleaners, ice cream parlor, record shop, plant boutique, gift shop, liquor store, beauty salon and hobby shop.

The shopping mall will be situated to the rear of the site with the major Albertson's store located closest to Zee Street.

The restaurant will be located at the corner of Campus Drive and Verano Street and the bank at the corner of Campus Drive and Zee Street. The fast food outlet will be situated in the interior of the center.

Campus Valley Center will have a village character and mall stores will have their own architectural identity featuring a variety of storefronts and roof elevations. Each store will have a color coordinated awning extending over the landscaped mall walkway.

THE Irvine Company attempted to maintain the natural characteristics of the terrain in developing Campus Valley Center and designed structures about a natural swale which meanders easterly from campus Drive through the parking lot and shopping mall.

The swale will be widened in the interior of the center and will become a small patio park, adjoining the fast food outlet, and then continues easterly to bisect the shopping mall. A rustic wooden footbridge spans the landscaped swale at the shopping mall.

REALTOR OF THE WEEK

LEE LIVINGSTON

The opening of Lee Livingston Realty is the latest thrill in what for Lee has been a very happy career in sales.

For over twenty years he sold industrial equipment starting with the Star Machinery Co. in Seattle and later with the DeVilbiss Co. headquartered in Toledo, Ohio. His various territory assignments have included most of the West Coast and Alaska.

About four years ago after some extended trips through the South Pacific, Lee decided to "settle down" and call Long Beach home. Real Estate seemed to offer the opportunity to continue in sales without too much travelling. It has met all his expectations.

While Lee has enjoyed success in sales, some of his greatest satisfaction has come from his work with the Long Beach Board of Realtors, the Chamber of Commerce and the California Real Estate Association. Besides the pleasure of the company of the many fine people he's met in these organizations, Lee spends a little spare time with shooting hobbies. He maintains an active interest in national defense through a membership in the American Ordinance Association.

SOME OF the birds who come to eat at Toll's take time out to peer at intruder to their domain.

BIRDS SCAMPER for seed thrown on ground by the "birdman" of Long Beach.

Text by Carol Ivy

Hobby takes wing

George Toll's retirement years have been so busy he rarely has much time to himself. But when he does, he often spends it with his birds.

They're not HIS birds, exactly. But Toll prefers to think of them that way.

It was several years ago that he constructed the first feeder — for hummingbirds, Toll explained, sipping a tall, cool julep made from home-grown mint, in the shade of his lush backyard garden.

Gardening is another of Toll's hobbies and his expertise is reflected in the quality of the blossoms, greenery, vegetables and fruits that flourish around the manicured lawn. He is rightly proud of his perfect tuberous begonias — raised from bulbs — as well as hanging fuchsias, donkey tails and delicate pansies.

"My wife was ill at the time and I built the first feeder as entertainment for her." (Toll's wife, Lucille, who died in 1972, had been very active here in Democratic politics and community work).

"THE FEEDER was designed for hummingbirds and at first they were the only birds to feed there. But suddenly finches arrived and chased all the hummingbirds away. The finches have been here ever since.

"And there's real women's lib at work in the world of the finches," Toll teased, "because as soon as I noticed they'd chased the hummingbirds off, I began to note that the female finches would chase male finches away from the feeder.

"The finches are unable to hover in the air as hummingbirds can, to drink sugar water from the glass tube. So I rigged the box with the stick for the finches to perch on while feeding."

Then Toll got carried away and added a special device to the box feeder. He's rigged it so that when a bird jumps on the stick, it seesaws down to trigger a perfectly-weighted curtain at the front of the box. The curtain rises, revealing any one of dozens of humorous or thought-provoking signs Toll has lettered to surprise his guests.

SIGN TELLS all at watering hole for birds.

GEORGE TOLL fills one of several feeders in his backyard for his bird friends to use.

Simultaneously, a tiny light on a table in Toll's dining room flashes on and off as birds land on the stick.

THE DAY WE visited Toll, his birds were promoting "senior power," an issue the hand-that-feeds-them has been vitally concerned with for many years.

Raised on the Cheyenne River Indian Reservation in South Dakota, (he speaks the Sioux language), Toll went to work for the California State Employment Office (now Employment Development Department) here in 1937 and remained 30 years, 24 of which he served as head of the agency.

Fifteen years before he retired, Toll established a special department in the employment office to help find jobs for senior citizens.

A recent appointee to the newly-formed Long Beach City Commission on Aging, Toll has been a Rotary Club member for 28 years and serves as chairman of the Committee on Aging for United Way, Region III. He is a member of the boards of Los Angeles County Affiliated Committees on Aging; Retired Seniors Volunteer Program; Senior Opportunities and Services; and Meals on Wheels.

Additionally, Toll is president of Goodwill Industries of Long Beach and a member of the advisory committee to the Employment Development Department.

In 1964, he was elected president of the International Association of Personnel in Employment Security, a professional organization with members in the United States and Canada.

TOLL BECAME famous a year ago Christmas when KNBC television newscaster Ray Duncan came out with a camera crew to film the finches, as well as the more than 200 sparrows and mourning doves that nibble daily on wild birdseed Toll places in a homemade tin can feeder and scatters on the ground for baby birds.

"After we were on television," Toll laughed, "I had calls from people from all over the area who wanted to come by and see the birds. Only problem was, some people would drop in without telling me. There'd be days I'd arrive home and find several strangers relaxing in my backyard, watching the birds perform."

Toll's birds are not an inexpensive hobby. Each week, he purchases 50 pounds of birdseed and

MORMON MATRIARCH SPEAKS

Supports homemaker role

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Family Editor

NEW YORK — There you are, Mrs. John Doe — home all the time and happy. Much as you try, you just can't work up discontent over being a full-time wife and mother.

So ask yourself some questions:

—So what's wrong with you in this era of women's liberation?

—Should you go see a psychiatrist?

—Are you lazy and without ambition?

—Why don't you feel guilty being a parasite, living off your poor husband's earnings?

—What kind of example are you giving your children?

—How come all the pleadings of the leaders of the women's movement went in one of your ears and out the other?

You can put your mind at ease, Mrs. Doe. So advises Mrs. Belle S. Spafford.

Twice president of the National Council of Women of the United States and still on its board, Mrs. Spafford is leader of the worldwide women's organization of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints. For 30 years she has been president of the Mormon Church's Relief Society.

A GRANDMOTHER from Salt Lake City, Mrs. Spafford has held executive positions in the Mormon Church since 1935.

In an interview, she said that women in large numbers prefer the job of wife and homemaker.

"They prefer the gratification of motherhood, the privileges of wifehood, the position generally accorded the woman in the home by family members and the status conferred by society on the title, Mrs.

"Some activists have openly stated that one of their big problems is the indifference of the average married woman to their efforts in behalf of liberating her from her traditional status of housewife."

Mrs. Spafford expanded her thoughts in a speech at a dinner of the Lochinvar Club in New York. Members are from the Western United States who have achieved prominence in professional and business fields and now are based in the New York area.

"Working with women in many countries of the world convinces me that there is no task to which woman may put her hand so broad and inspiring, so filled with interest, so demanding of intelligence and capability, so rewarding as that of wife, mother and homemaker," she said.

"I regard this role as taking precedence over all others for women. In a well-ordered home, husband and wife approach their responsibilities as a joint endeavor.

"They cherish their children. In child rearing, I believe, there is no substitute for a caring mother."

BUT SOME OF THE things movement women agitate for deserve support, said Mrs. Spafford.

"For example, equal pay for equal work; nondiscrimination in hiring practices when a male and female are equally qualified and whose personal circumstances are comparatively equal in meeting job requirements."

But Mrs. Spafford is not in accord with those who believe that current problems and needs of women may best be met by adoption of a constitutional amendment on equal rights.

"I am of the opinion that major advances embodied in the proposed amendment could be achieved through regular channels of state and federal legislative action without raising questionable results," she said.

"By nature men and women differ physically, biologically and emotionally.

"The greatest good to the individual and society results where these differences are respected in the divisions of labor in the home, as well as in community life."

Mrs. Spafford said women should feel free to go into the market place and into community services on a paid or volunteer basis when her home and family circumstances allow her to do so without impairment to her family life.

MRS. SPAFFORD also made some prognostications.

—"I believe that without doubt many of the repressions and injustices which are troubling women today will be resolved. Gratefully this is already taking place.

—"Tomorrow we will hear less of woman's rights and more of her responsibilities and achievements.

—"Some things for which women are clamoring today will be in discard tomorrow.

—"I am convinced that the home will stand as it has stood during past generations as the cornerstone of a good society and a happy citizenry. While old activity patterns within the home may be modified by the impact of change outside the home, the enduring values which cannot be measured in terms of their monetary worth, their power for good, the need of the human being for them — peace, security, love, understanding — will not be sacrificed on the altar of new philosophies and new concepts."

What's on the inside

Policing the world of art

• Members of the Society of Illustrators rode with sheriff's deputies on patrol, then painted and sketched their experiences. Their documentary of law enforcement may be seen in "The Badge and the Brush" exhibit at California Museum of Science and Industry. See Page L/S-6 for details.

Thanksgiving in the Caribbean

• Pointe-a-Pitre in the Caribbean means beauty — scenic and mortal — to some voyagers, delicious creole cooking to others. For a view of Royal Viking Sky's forthcoming visit to that exotic port, see Herb Shannon's story on Page L/S-8.

True meaning of 'I'm 15 and a half'

• Beep! Honk! Screech! Erma Bombeck faces another roadblock on the road to domestic serenity — a new teen-age driver. For a chuckle or two, see At Wit's End, Page L/S-4.

Party guests suffered jet lag

• This party had a multitude of excuses for happening. It lasted from early morning to late evening and included a wedding where the couple arrived by helicopter. For details on this and other social goings on about town, see Socially Speaking on Page L/S-2.

MAKING friends with the animals are three of the Assistance League debs, Linda Wing, left, Dana Teele, petting Tara; and Beth Hoppe, holding Gidget.

Debs to make social bows

Six young women will make their social debut at 15th annual Presentation Ball of Assistance League of Long Beach Saturday in the Grand Salon of the Queen Mary.

"Reflections of Youth" is theme for the evening, which begins at 8:30 when the debs are introduced by William D. Hanna, senior vice president of Hanna-Barbera Productions.

A reception in the Windsor Room will precede the presentation. Following dinner, guests will dance to the music of the Joe Moshay Orchestra.

THE DEBUTANTES and their parents are:

Tracy Jane Crandall, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Nelson David Crandall; Elizabeth Mary Hoppe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Charles Hoppe; Joanne Ellen Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Malcolm Johnson Jr.; Judy Ann Proschaska, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Edward Prochaska; Dana Lynn Teele, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Earl Teele, and Linda Louise Wing, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth S. Wing Jr.

Mrs. Norman Scott is chairman of the ball, assisted by Mrs. Arch Van Palmer. Others helping with arrangements are Mmes. John W. Brooks, Thomas A. Comiskey, Dale G. Carey, Quentin Klenk, James P. Lynch, Harry Fulton, Mulford J. Crane, Gerard Rastello, Stanley V. Hamilton, Wayne B. Sharp, John R. Cockriel, Theodore J. Webb, B.J. Buchanan, Philip Hattery, Burt K. Marter, Charles Sweitzer, Sidney Peizer and Robert Ludlam. Mrs. Max E. Nichols is president.

ELROY the cat seems unimpressed with pulchritude as he is surrounded by debs, Joanne Johnson, left, Judy Prochaska and Tracy Crandall. They will make their social bows during annual ball Saturday aboard Queen Mary.

Good excuses for having a party

By CAROLYN McDOWELL

THE PARTY started at 8:30.

In the morning.

It didn't much matter when it started as many of the guests were suffering from jet lag anyhow.

Jack and Jeanette Haley were looking for an excuse to have a party in their Seal Beach Ocean front home.

They discovered that Allan Harbor, Don Stegen and Harold Sellers were having birthdays — that might be an excuse.

The Haleys had done some remodeling of the home they bought a year or so ago from Geraldine Sleeth. They thought they might invite her to a party so she could view the improvements.

They learned that one of Jack's employee's (Jack is Captain Jack of restaurant fame) was planning a wedding.

Then everyone remembered Bastille Day was coming up so — having found enough excuses — they invited 500 friends from all over to drop in.

Friends from all over were Timmy and Sally McElrath who dropped in from Africa; former Long Beacher, Del Smith, dropped in from Turkey; Sandy Rex Riddle flew over from Hawaii for the day and singer Herb Jeffries made it back from Europe just in time.

Gene Cuthbertson jetted in from New York and Frank Ciarelli rode his motorcycle over from Huntington Beach.

Jack closed his two restaurants for the first time in ten years (save for Christmas and Thanksgiving) so all his employes could be there.

Party progressed from the usual eye-openers to a vodka fountain aptly called "The Fountain of Youth."

In case you may be planning a party of this size, you might start with 100 half gallons of tequila, 100 gallons of wine, 30 gallons of vodka, 100 pounds each of chicken, ham and teriyaki brochette. Then you might whip up a little something for dessert.

John Coultrup probably won't come over and do the barbecuing for you as he volunteered to do for the Haleys.

At midday it was time for the wedding.

The about-to-be-weds, Art Landry and Marge Loveland, dropped in by helicopter right on schedule for the ceremony.

The ceremony was planned by the Haley youngsters, Sondra, Jack Jr. and Timothy and their friend, Mackie Webb.

The procession was heralded with an alpine horn and proceeded under a canopy of crossed oars.

Attending the couple were the host, Donna Dozier and Larry Ethridge.

Very good excuses for a very good party.

WEDDING BELLS will ring later this month for Cheryl London and Mike Mallet. Parents of the couple are Dick and Pat London and Andrew and Velma Mallet.

Cheryl has been honored with a series of showers given by family friends.

Agnes Howell and her daughter, Shirley Williams, entertained at a mother-daughter-grandmother luncheon in Agnes' home.

Nucleus of the group was long time friends of the bride's mother who have gotten together on a regular basis for more than 20 years.

Among those presenting a group gift of Farberware were Sandy O'Malley, Lynn Skeen, Mary Richardson, Loretta Mesa, Sandy Cummings and Janet Burrows.

Paula Irwin and Judy Rowan co-hosted a miscellaneous luncheon shower for Cheryl at Virginia Country Club.

Family members included Velma Mallet, Pat London, Chery'ls grandmothers, Agnes Graeber and Vernoy London and an aunt, Dorothy Jean Jahr.

Jean Stewart invited friends for a champagne brunch in her El Dorado Park Estates home.

GROUP FIVE of Children's Benefit League had a gala luncheon and fashion show in the garden of Olga Bower's home.

Pots of ivy centered tables for the 100 members and guests who came to see fashions from the Silver Thread and Hill Furs modeled by members.

Models were Fredene McNeill, Chris Troxell, Dolores Archibald and Jan Leland.

Hostesses were League President Jean McKelvie and group chairgal, June Harrison. Also June Harriman, June Steppe, Sharon Zastrow, Betty Holmes, Betty Newton, Jan Leland, Virginia Wood, Lu Bretting, and Marion Smith.

TRAVEL notes...

Margaret Conn and Jane Melom are talking about their adventures on a three week South American tour.

Imagine going to a country and finding it closed.

Argentinians were in mourning for their President Juan Peron and Jane and Margaret found all the businesses closed and hordes of people standing forlornlyin the streets.

And John and Sally Hunt and their daughters are anxious to show snapshots of their cross country trip.

A HAPPY BIRTHDAY party for Lena Mullen who celebrated 83 years at a party given by her daughter, Delores Williams.

And 94 years for Margaret Martin who celebrated with a trip to Canada. When she isn't traveling, she plays bridge most every day of the week.

THE NEW ETIQUETTE

That first dance

By MAUREEN REARDON

Q: At a large dinner party, who should the gentleman dance with first, second, third...wife, hostess, dinner partner?—Mrs. L. G., Miami Beach, Fla.

A: Lucky the man whose wife is both dinner partner and hostess. He doesn't have the problem of deciding which duty dance to dance first.

When the wife, hostess and dinner partner are three separate persons, it's more complicated...sort of like choosing between three dentists. We'll obviously rule out the hostess, since all the men in the room can't dance with her at once.

Presuming that the party you are talking about is a formal arrangement, then every wife will have a dinner partner to dance with her. Everybody could dance with their dinner partners. This circumvents the problem of men having to search out their wives. I assume that the room won't be full of touchy wives who feel neglected because they didn't get the first dance with their husbands.

Q: I am a middle-aged widow marrying a widower. We will have a small informal church wedding inviting close friends and relatives. My etiquette book says the invitation should be personal notes. I would like a sample wording of such a note. Also, we would like to include a "no gifts please" note. Would this be acceptable?—P.R., Fort Worth, Tex.

A: Your invitation might read something like this:

Dear Mary and Tom:

We're delighted to let you know that we'll be married October 12 at 11 a.m. at the First Methodist Church. It would help make our day if you could come to the ceremony, and to the wedding brunch at the Comstock Hotel. Please don't bring a gift...your good wishes are sufficient.

Pam and Joe

You will note that I recommend that the invitation be extended by both you and your fiance. The traditional way is to have the woman write, extend and accept all invitations. The start of a marriage is a good time to start eliminating this archaic custom.

Q: When a person's husband is deceased, is it proper to use the name "Mrs. John Smith?"—Mrs. F.W., Fort Wayne, Ind.

A: That's the customary way of doing it. The main alternative would be for Mrs. Smith to call herself "Mrs. Mary Smith." It's not a good alternative since that combination has generally come to mean that a woman is divorced. The woman could also call herself "Ms. Mary Smith" if she preferred. I like "Mrs. John Smith" better.

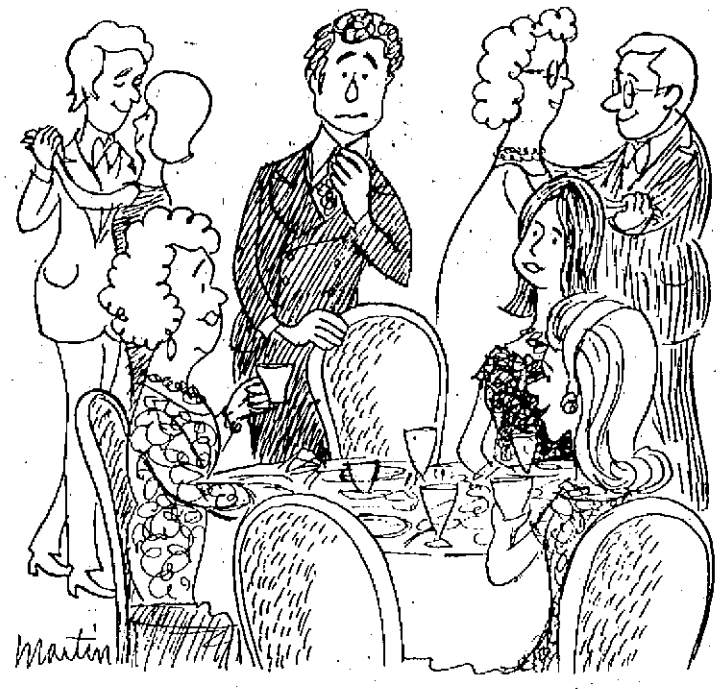

When to use the term "Mrs. John Smith" is another question. It's sensible for a woman to identify herself as "Mary Smith" in social conversation, since her name is, after all, "Mary" and not "John."

Business dealings are another matter. If all of the family's accounts are in her husband's name, for instance, she may find that she must identify herself as "Mrs. John Smith" to avoid the wrath of the computers.

Q: When two couples give a large dinner party and you and your husband are included, are you obligated to invite each of them to dinner, even though you only know the one couple? —L.G., Detroit, Mich.

A: Yes. If you accept someone's hospitality, you are obliged to extend hospitality to them in return. As a general rule, it's always better to extend an unnecessary invitation than to not extend a necessary one. When in doubt, invite.

READER'S COMMENT: Concerning your article on "the gusher"...an acquaintance of mine, having run through absolutely everything else, said, "Oh, Pat, I LOVE the way you've done your eyebrows. Especially the right one!"—P.H., Scottsdale, Ariz.

Evening of German entertainment

A one and a two and off they go across the floor in a polka. Getting in the spirit are Mr. and Mrs. Dick Boone, with musical accompaniment provided by Jim Gibson on the accordion. Mrs. Boone is chairman of the annual fund-raising event at St. Maria Goretti Church. The event, with the theme "Happiness is a Hofbrau," is scheduled Saturday from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the parish hall, 3954 Palo Verde Ave. Singing and dancing to the music of The Cavaliers in the old and new world tradition will occupy the evening, which includes a late supper served about 11. Tickets are $2.50 each with reservations taken by the Boones, 3683 Iroquois Ave., or Al Sviatek, 4936 Knoxville Ave., Lakewood.

five pounds of sugar, just to keep them chirping happily.

"And you know, I bought beet sugar once — because it's cheaper — and those crazy birds could tell the difference. They wouldn't touch it. I had to replace it with the sugar I'd always bought before."

THERE ALSO ARE two friendly blue jays who live in George Toll's apple tree. Until recently, when the female laid eggs, the male jay would take peanuts right out of Toll's mouth — shells and all — and bury them in the yard for recovery later.

"But now that they have babies on the way," Toll noted, "the jays won't come near anyone."

Toll admits he cannot distinguish one finch from another — excepting the males have red breasts and the females do not — or one mourning dove or sparrow from any other.

"But my wife knew them very well," he smiled, "and insisted she was able to distinguish individual birds. There was a dove she named Fulbright and a sparrow she dubbed Agnew," he chuckled.

The Aces on bridge

by IRA G. CORN JR. TEAM CAPTAIN

Dear Mr. Corn:

What is the correct score for making a vulnerable four spade game, doubled and redoubled? The opponents were not vulnerable. What would the penalty have been if the hand had gone down?

Needs Abacus
Montgomery, Aa.

Answer: The score for making the contract would be:

Trick Score	480
Bonus for Doubled Contract	50
Rubber Bonus	700
	1230

If declarer had gone down he would have lost twice the amount of a doubled vulnerable contract. For example:

	Vulnerable Doubled	Re-doubled
Down 1	200	400
Down 2	500	1000
Down 3	800	1600

Dear Mr. Corn:

We suffered a bad duplicate result with these hands. How should we have bid? These were the hands and our bidding:

West	East
♠ A 10 7 4 2	♠ 8 6 5
♥ K	♥ A J 9 4 2
♦ A Q J	♦ 7 5
♣ A Q 8 5	♣ J 7 4

South	West	North	East
1♠	Dbl.	Pass	2♥
Pass	2 NT	All Pass

Short Tricks
Tallahassee

Answer: West should have passed one spade instead of making a takeout double. A takeout double promises support for unbid suits in addition to high card strength. The probable reason for your poor result is that at the other tables North-South went set instead of East-West.

Driving her batty without license

By ERMA BOMBECK

Who is faster than a speeding bullet?
Able to race locomotives?
Leap tall buildings in a single bound?
A teenage driver, that's who.

I don't know if parents ever get over their children driving but I tried. For a couple of years after the second one had gotten his license, I had to be heavily sedated and blindfolded before I would get into a car. A few weeks ago when it appeared my vehicular DTs were under control, another child came to me and uttered the five words that strike terror in the hearts of parents everywhere, "I'm 15 and a half."

As I told my husband, "I can't go through it again. I'm young yet. I want to live. I want to see the sun set over McDonalds ... the bottoms of my copperware shine ... the bathroom scale stuck on 113 ... I want to dance and sing and laugh. Don't you understand? I can't go through another teen-age driver."

WE FOUND THE solution to our problems in the yellow pages ... a driver's school called the Kamikaze Driving Academy.

"Our teachers are all top men," said the director, "We get a lot of applicants for instructors, but we scoop the cream off the top. Had a bullfighter in here for a few weeks. Poor devil just couldn't take the pressure. A lot of veterans apply. They think they've conquered fear, but they can't hack it two days. Where's your son?"

He was in the car holding the cigaret lighter in the air and shouting, "Is this a spark plug?"

"I'm going to assign Mr. Willard to your son," he said. "He's a veteran of 153 missions and is credited with saving the lives of more than 200 pedestrians, 15 statues, eight fire hydrants, a dog asleep on the steps of a library and a boy scout who was being helped across the street by an old lady."

MR. WILLARD appeared in a green beret, a jump suit and parachute boots. "Mr. Willard," I said, my eyes glistening with tears, "I consider you the bravest man in the world. How do you climb inside everyday with these amateurs?"

His eyes never left the floor as he mumbled, "I am immortal. I am immortal. I am imm ..."

"It's all right, Jim," said his supervisor softly. "You've only got 18 more combat missions before R and R."

My son inserted the key in the glove compartment door and shouted, "Is this where I put the key? I know how to drive. I just have to log some hours."

As the car took off I will never forget Mr. Willard's stricken face if I live to be a thousand and his whimpering, "I am immortal. I feel a little sick, but I am immortal ..."

STAN GORMAN painted 'Progress,' left, to show that modes of travel and clothing may change over the years but job responsibilities remain much the same for Los Angeles County sheriff's deputies.

LONG BEACH artist Earnie D. Kollar chose to illustrate 'Training for Rescue,' right, for his contribution to 'The Badge and the Brush' art show.

'Badge and the Brush': law officers on duty

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

As a member of Long Beach State University art faculty and a professional illustrator, Earnie D. Kollar finds his days busy and interesting.

He added another adjective—"exciting!"—when he rode with deputies from the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department on patrol. His comment, "I never realized it would be like that!" is typical of the response of 25 artists who saw for themselves what the deputies do as a matter of course.

What they experienced may be seen in the second annual Sheriff's Documentary Art Exhibit, titled "The Badge and the Brush" now at the California Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park, Los Angeles. The show will continue through Sept. 1. Most of the artists, including Kollar, are members of the Society of Illustrators of Los Angeles. Sheriff Peter J. Pitchess initiated this documentary art program in April, 1973. Similar to the United States Air Force project of the past 20 years, its purpose is to portray a professional law enforcement organization as objectively as possible.

The artists took along cameras to record events, then sketched or painted the scenes. Some elected to work from historical photographs. Ron McKee painted Sheriff Will A. White posing with Teddy Roosevelt and his famous Teddy's Terrors in 1904; Hank Lozano interpreted "Pioneer Scouts, 1927;" Neil Boyle chose to paint Mrs. Alice Stebbins Wells, the first woman peace officer in Los Angeles County. There are other subjects from the past, but the majority are contemporary events evoking the excitement, fear, boredom, agony and happiness that are part of the deputies' work day.

Admission to this exhibit is free; hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

NEXT SUNDAY from noon to 6 p.m., members of Long Beach Art Association will take part in a "Summer Fiesta of Art" at 5661½ The Toledo, just west of the Naples fountain. The show is being coordinated by The Whole in the Wall Gallery for the benefit of LBAA which is celebrating its 50th anniversary this year. There will be work in all media on display and donations from sales will be used by the association to help maintain its gallery at 800 E. Ocean Blvd.

THE CALL is out for artists and craftsmen of Seal Beach to exhibit their work next Sunday in Seal Beach's Eisenhower Park. The show is scheduled from 9 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. At 10 o'clock, Mrs. Fay Wright, Carlos Avilla and Mike Daniels, all of Seal Beach, will judge entries. Fee for exhibitors is $2 for adults, $1 for children.

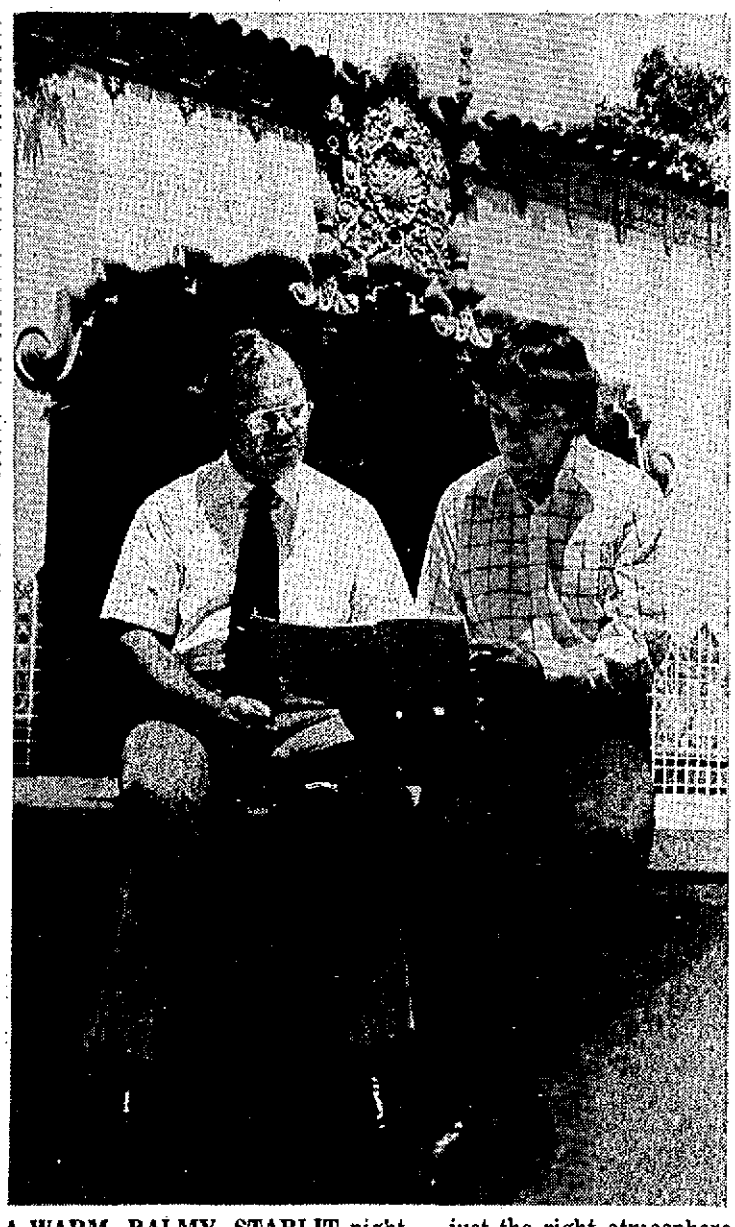

"RECENT WORKS" by Dr. Donald L. Huntsman, photographer, curator and lecturer, will be shown at Light Impressions Photographic Art Gallery, 217 S. Sepulveda, Manhattan Beach, from Friday through Aug. 20. Hours are noon to 6 p.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays.

IF YOU'VE tried to get tickets to the Laguna Festival of Arts and have received the usual "Sold out" answer, take heart. Members of Long Beach Museum Association will welcome you on one of their two bus trips, either this Thursday or Aug. 22. The bus will leave promptly at 6:30 p.m. from Los Altos Shopping Center at Bellflower and Stearns. The $15 fee includes transportation to and from the entrance to the pageant, a catered box supper, top priced seats for the pageant and about 45 minutes to view the art exhibit on the festival grounds.

To make reservations, make checks payable to the Museum Association of LBMA and mail them to Mrs. Leo Vander Lans, 1241 Hackett Ave., Long Beach, 90815. Tickets will be distributed on the bus.

Starlights to have 'Fantastic Finale'

What do you do for the third and final Starlight Serenade of the summer?

How can you follow the opening concert when Henry Brandon conducted Long Beach Symphony Orchestra in a program of pops music? And the second program with the Gentlemen's Agreement Barbershop Quartet augmented by the Combined Barbershop Chorus from the Long Beach Chapter and the Downey Chapter of SPEBSQSA?

That was the problem confronting Jack Palacios, associate conductor of the Long Beach Symphony.

His solution: Join forces with the Long Beach Municipal Band.

BAND DIRECTOR Everett Siegrist agreed, so for the first time the full 62-piece Long Beach Symphony and the 35-piece Long Beach Municipal Band will perform Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Recreation Park. Admission, as always, is free.

Long before the concert begins, picnickers will arrive, suppers in tow, to select choice sites at tables or on the lawn. Youngsters will frolic on the playground or in impromptu games.

Palacios will open "Fantastic Finale" with Glazunov's spirited "Carnival Overture." He will follow this with excerpts from "Prince Igor" by Borodin, including the Overture and Polovtsian Dances.

"This is delightful music," the conductor said. "It's also very familiar as the source of music for the light opera, 'Kismet.' Much of Borodin's music shows the influence of Russian folksongs and the Orient.

AFTER INTERMISSION, Siegrist will take the podium to conduct the symphony and band in excerpts from Lerner and Loewe's "My Fair Lady." Next will be Meredith Willson's rousing "76 Trombones."

Finale to the "Finale" will be the stirring "1812 Overture" in which Tchaikovsky depicts the Napoleonic wars. The Russian campaign is portrayed with the Marseillaise characterizing the French and Russina folksongs representing the defenders of Moscow. In the end, the victorious tolling of the Moscow bells drowns out the Marseillaise and there is the triumphant thunder of cannon. No longer is any national significance attached to the music — it endures on its own merits.

LBSU SUMMER OPERA

Double bill of satire, comedy

The Summer Session Opera Workshop at Long Beach State University will present two one-act operas Friday and Saturday at 8:30 p.m. in the Little Theater on campus. Both will be sung in English and will be accompanied by orchestra.

This will be the first presentation on the West Coast of "The Tenor" by Hugo Weisgall. The second work will be "The Night Bell" by Gaetano Donizetti. This opera first was presented in Naples, Italy, in 1836.

Dr. Hans Lampl is musical director of Opera Workshop; John Noschese is stage director. Sets are by Charles Johnson, costumes by Anne Johnson.

"The Tenor" is a satiric tragedy. Its dramatic action centers on Gerardo, a flamboyant tenor, who is at the peak of his career. On stage, he specializes in heroic characterizations and in his own life he acts out the heroic-romantic roles he creates in the theater. Reality catches up with him at last when he has to choose between his career and his love affair with the wife of a prominent townsman. Of course, he chooses his career. His paramour shoots herself. She falls on the threshold and The Tenor, carrying his suitcase containing his score of "Tristan," steps over her body as he leaves for another city.

Allan Johnson plays the title role. Others are James W. Edwards, Keith Peters Patricia Smith, Jill Joanne Goodsell, Lonna Arklin, Lee Vail and Ronald Wilcott.

"THE NIGHT BELL" is Donizetti's farcical story of an elderly Neopolitan apothecary, Don Annibale, who marries young and pretty Serafina, to the chagrin of her young admirer, Enrico. He plans revenge.

Three times, as the old man is ready for bed, Enrico rings the bell that an apothecary, by law, may not ignore. Each time Enrico appears in a different disguise and each time he demands emergency medication.

Dawn breaks before Don Annibale can join his bride. The bell rings for the last time to announce a coach which will drive the apothecary to Rome where his presence is needed to settle a will.

8 slices cheese (optional)
Butter or margarine (room temperature)

Mix beaten egg into ground round; season to taste with garlic, salt, pepper, etc. Spread bread slices with meat mixture, making certain to completely cover surface portion of bread.

Spread butter or margarine over meat and broil 7 minutes.

Place slice of cheese on top and return to broiler just long enough to melt cheese.

The juices will be distributed naturally throughout the bread and will have a richer taste than with a regular hamburger. Serves 4.

DEAR ABBY

Latest thing on sniffing scene

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a radiologist. He's a wonderful husband and an excellent provider, but he has some peculiar ideas.

For example, when we go out for an evening, he orders a vodka martini with eight olives. If for some reason he doesn't get the eight olives, he cancels the order and asks me to leave with him, which is very embarrassing.

This is not the worst of it. If he gets the olives, one by one he puts them in his nose and sniffs out the juice. He claims it clears his sinuses.

I don't mind when he does this at home, but when he does it in public, I want to crawl into a hole.

He doesn't have any allergies or sinus trouble, so I can't see the sense of this. Should he find a psychiatrist?

RADIOLOGIST'S WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Yes, but he should find one who drinks martinis with a twist of lemon so they won't fight over the olives.

DEAR ABBY: What does a mother do when her 20-year-old daughter insists on going with a fellow who has no ambition or drive? She is pretty and smart and could do so much better. He is such a nothing. It just tears me apart to see her heading toward a marriage with him. I have talked my heart out, but it does no good.

They have gone steady since she was 17, and she won't even look at anybody else. How can I keep her from throwing her life away on this boy?

HEARTBROKEN MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: If she won't look at anyone else, she is obviously in love with him. Don't knock him, or try to tell her how much better she could do or she will feel compelled to defend him. And instead of talking her out of marrying him, she will talk herself into it.

DEAR ABBY: I have a pet peeve. There are parking places marked "For handicapped only" near some stores and office buildings as an accommodation for those who have difficulty getting around.

Although I am handicapped, I can still drive, but more often than not, those "reserved" parking places are taken by people who are not handicapped, but are too lazy to park elsewhere. I have seen them jump in and out of their cars while I hobble along on my crutches trying to hold some packages in my arms. If you think it's easy — try it sometime!

ANGRY

DEAR ANGRY: I don't blame you for being angry. Next time, speak up. You'll feel better, and it might penetrate.

DEAR ABBY: I wrote to you because I thought I had V.D. I never thought you'd answer my letter, but you did. After I got your letter, I took your advice and went to a clinic and got a blood test. I could hardly wait until I got the results.

Well, I called up the clinic and they told me the results were negative! Abby, I don't think I have ever been happier in my life.

I hope other people who suspect they have V.D. don't wait as long as I did to take a test. I am a married man, which made matters worse.

After I got the results, I promised myself that I would never let myself get into a spot like that again.

God bless you, Abby.

LUCKY IN N.J.

DEAR LUCKY: V. D. is still one of our most serious health problems. I hope this reminder will serve to jar others into acting. Those who can't afford a private physician can get FREE and confidential examinations and treatment through their county health departments. This includes minors.

FASCINATING FABRICS

Choosing the right fabric a material matter

By FRANCES DIETRICH

Fabric makes the fashion. Designers have known for years that you start with the perfect fabric to create the ultimate garment, which will flatter the wearer and make her happy.

The couturier has the advantage over the home sewer because he can take first choice of anything on the market; or have something specially created. But how do you select fabric when the budget is limited, time is limited and you're surrounded by a sea of fabric?

Here are guidelines to help make the right choice. Decide approximately how much money you can spend based on your budget plus the number of times you expect to wear the dress or outfit. For example, you could buy an inexpensive acetate taffeta for a party dress that will be worn only a few times. But, invest more money in better-quality fabric for a good basic dress.

SECONDLY, in relation to money, consider who is going to wear the garment. Low-grade chino or denim at a bargain price may not be a good buy for a child's pants that will get a lot of wear and abuse, but would be satisfactory for a young adult's sport coat which is a "fill-in" item in a wardrobe.

Evaluate the cost of upkeep. Remember that everything doesn't have to be washable to be economical. It will cost less per wearing to buy a high-quality woven wool for a classic coat that will require only seasonal drycleaning than a polyester doubleknit that may snag or pull, will not tailor well, and may have a shorter fashion life.

Study the silhouette on the pattern envelope to determine whether you need a soft, drapable fabric or one with body that can be controlled and shaped. Remember that your own build dictates whether you can add dimension with nubby, fuzzy fabric, or should select something with a flat surface.

WHEN THERE are a number of seams, curved seams or detail in the garment construction, focus on a solid color fabric or one with a small floral or geometric design. You can splurge on a flashy fabric when the dress has a minimum of seams.

If the sleeves are the set-in type, look for a resilient fabric. Permanent press woven fabric and knits with special finishes have yarns that are literally locked in place. This makes it difficult, if not impossible in some cases, to "ease" fabric into curved seams.

Fiber content is particularly important and tells you whether you want cotton's softness and breathability; a compromise of cotton and polyester; all-wool or a blend of polyester and wool; durable nylon tricot; texturized polyester, which provides more "give" in a woven cloth than filament polyester; or a blend of silk with polyester, which will give you a touch of silk's inimitable gloss.

Don't hesitate to test fabric before you buy. Take woven fabric between thumbs and forefingers and pull it crosswise and lengthwise. If the yarns shift easily, the fabric will ravel and pull at seams. Crush fabric in your hand to test for wrinkle-resistance. Look at the surface for evenness of print, irregularities of yarn, pulls in knits and "shading" in solid color fabric.

Good sports about gear

If you're planning to fly on vacation this summer but are hesitant about taking along your golf clubs or scuba gear — don't be.

That's the word from American Airlines.

American says its people and planes are geared to handle the wide range of sports gear — even bicycles — that travelers like to take with them on vacations. And the airline notes that some items are even flown for free.

There's no fee, for instance, on golf and fishing equipment. American allows each passenger one golf bag in addition to the two pieces of luggage he or she can take charge-free. The bag can contain up to 14 clubs, 12 balls and one pair of golf shoes.

The allowance per person on fishing gear is two rods, one reel, a net, a pair of fishing boots and certain other items (all must be in one package), plus one tackle box.

A surfboard can be flown for free, American said, if the surfer is traveling with just one piece of luggage. If he or she has two or more pieces, there is an excess baggage charge for the surfboard. The charge ranges from $4 to $10 depending on the length of the flight.

The same rules apply to scuba gear, and each diving buff is limited to one empty tank, one mask, one snorkel and certain other items.

As for bikes, American accepts both one-seaters and tandems.

French feast day awaits voyagers on I,P-T cruise

By HERB SHANNON
I,P-T Travel Editor

Ports of call are what make a cruise memorable. Especially if the lazy days at sea are punctuated with the excitement of frequent stopovers in exotic foreign anchorages.

One such day among many in the 17-day Thanksgiving season cruise to the Caribbean aboard the Royal Viking Sky, co-sponsored by the Independent, Press-Telegram and Long Beach area travel agents, comes on November 30.

Pointe-a-Pitre is the port of call on the Windward Island of Guadeloupe at the Atlantic fringe of the Caribbean. The names give a clue to the national allegiance. It is not American, neither north nor south, nor British, Spanish, Portuguese or Dutch.

It is French, n'estce pas?

And what do the French do best? They cook, that's what. And though Thanksgiving Day will be celebrated with traditional American and international cuisine aboard the proud Royal Viking Lines ship, there will be plenty of leftover thanks to be given by Long Beach gourmets on the French West Indies island.

Not that leftovers are the order of the day. The women cooks of Guadeloupe start celebrating Thanksgiving in their own French way on a Saturday in August. The Saturday is supposed to be the one closest to August 10, the feast day of St. Laurent, patron saint of cooks. This year the date is right on target.

AND HOW DOES Madame celebrate the Fete des Cuisinieres, an elaborate festival devoted entirely to the joy of cooking? She puts away her pots and pans, bids adieu to the kitchen and heads for a busman's holiday in Guadeloupe's main city, Pointe-a-Pitre.

There is a parade, to the beat of the beguine, which was born in the French West Indies, and much primping in Creole costume and singing and dancing. But most of all, there is cooking.

Highlight of the festival is a five-hour feast of Creole specialties prepared by the women, some boasting more than half a century of culinary expertise. Many are owners of the nearly 100 little restaurants which dot the island and bear their names - Chez Rosette, Chez Odette, Chez Yvette, Chez Violette, etcetera, etcetera.

Eventually the noisy procession of professional cooks makes its way to the Palais de la Mutualitie for the fixing of the meal. Shortly after noon, the Palais doors open to reveal the result. On the main table, the battered parade figure of St. Laurent sits surrounded by masses of flowers, platters of seafood, spicy sausages, grilled clams, rabbits marinated in wine and loaves of bread baked in the form of fishes.

All these dishes and more will await the reawakened palates of the I,P-T cruise party two days after their Thanksgiving dinners aboard the all-first-class Royal Viking Sky, afloat in the Caribbean. There also will be other attractions for the 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. stop at Pointe-a-Pitre, not the least of which are sun, sand and surf.

For those who wish to seek out the inland beauty of the French West Indies, there is Guadeloupe Island's primeval rainforest, which contains natural freshwater swimming pools in streams plunging in waterfalls from heights as much as 300 feet. The famed Chutes du Carbet is one such idyllic scene.

ALONG THE WAY to the interior is the inevitable stop for lunch at one of the tiny emporiums presided over by the cooks of the Fete des Cuisinieres - Madame Mimi, Kiki, Marie-Louise, et al.

GAL-IVANTING

Bridging the age gap, Romanian- style

By CHORAL PEPPER

I went to Romania to get young and beautiful and came back the same old me.

It isn't that Dr. Ana Aslan's controversial Gerovital H8 youth treatment doesn't work. It's just that the results are not immediate. To retard the aging process, you have to wait long enough to age.

However, always one to believe a little bit in everything, I fully expect to enjoy a future of everlasting youth. As many a psychologist has said, believing is seeing.

There is more reason to go to Romania than for everlasting youth. This is a country of extraordinary scenic beauty. A bonus to the Gerovital treatment is that its clinics are established at all of the best Black Sea and mountain resorts, in addition to several in and around Bucharest, the capitol city.

The treatment is not confining. After a preliminary physical examination, which takes two or three days, you need only report for a daily injection. This can be obtained in the various clinics as you move about the country.

Romania is no place for a traveler who goes around saying that he doesn't want to be treated like a tourist. A tourist here is the only thing you would want to be.

The hard-working, grumbling Communist population is never seen in fine restaurants except when accompanying the German, French, Spanish, Scandanavian and South American visitors who come by plane-loads to try to recapture their youth.

NORTH AMERICANS ARE late-comers to the scene. The U.S. Food and Drug Administration is presently tallying final tests. If results come through as generally expected, Gerovital H3 treatment will be legalized in this country by next year. In the meantime, you have to go to Romania if you want to give it a try.

I had expected to be mingling with the aged, the infirm and possibly a hopeful sex maniac or so, but the guests at the Nord and Park Hotels in Bucharest were like myself, more interested in the prophylactic, or preventative aspect of the treatment than in seeking a cure for a specific ailment.

We who concerned ourselves more with bridging the age gap struck up friendly conversations while waiting each morning for the injection. These eventually led to happy nights imbibing fine Romanian wine, dancing and listening to folk music.

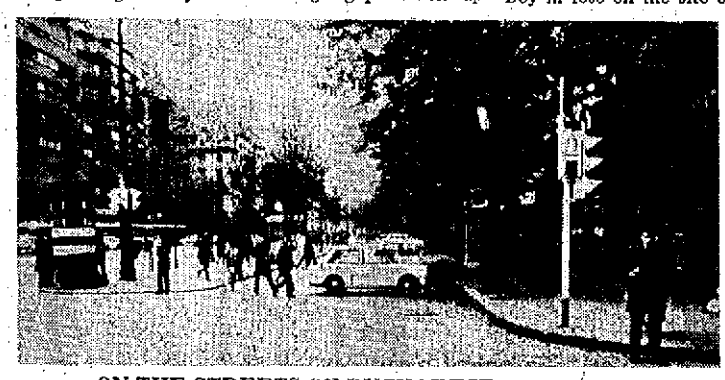

For dining, our favorite place was Bucur, a grand former residence of the family for whom Bucharest was named. Its five rooms and wine cellar are elaborately decorated in princely hunting lodge styles reminiscent of the country's various sectors.

ANOTHER INTERESTING restaurant is Hanul Manue, an historic inn originally built by Manu Bey in 1808 on the site of an old market place where merchants and farmers set up their daily stalls.

When the Inn was restored in 1971, ancient documents were followed exactly except for a few modern conveniences, like bathrooms, added to accommodate today's guests.

One bit of advice I would give to anyone contemplating this trip is to join a Ring International tour, available through local travel agents. These tours, packaged in conjunction with SAS and the cooperation of the National Romanian Tourist Office, will save you money and endless delays.

Few Romanians speak English. The Americans we met who travelled independently were not properly briefed in regard to treatment schedules and encountered incredible frustrations. Those who arrived with the tour groups received preferential treatment every step of the way.

TRAVELING WITH DELAPLANE

Big wheels in Paris

By STAN DELAPLANE
Paris

Every afternoon (and all day weekends) the motorcycle kids get together at the corner where Rue Quentin Bouchard enters the Champs Elysees, just below the Arc de Triomphe.

No hippies. No Hell's Angels. These youngsters run 8 to 17 years. They are dressed to the nines in rally type outfits that cost up to a thousand dollars. Their bikes are chromed and polished to reflect the Paris sun. Mainly Japanese: Hondas, Yamatos, Suzukis.

Little bikes for little kids — I saw one 8-year-old girl doing figure-eights you couldn't believe. Priced the clothing at a bike shop nearby: Black boots with chain ornaments, $100. Decorated helmets, $70. Leather trousers, $150. Leather jackets the same. Gloves $30.

They stand around rapping and admiring each other. Occasionally firing up the cycle and doing acrobatic riding over curbs and on the sidewalks.

Across the street, Drug West Creperies sells the best crepes in Paris. They fold them into cones or into three-pockets like Mexican tortillas. (The Sonora fold.)

Each pocket holds something: chopped lamb, mint jelly, salad. Lots of dessert crepes too. Price $1.50 to $5 and they're worth every franc.

Absolute MUST in this area, a block away, is the Renault auto agency. Go above the model exhibit to the mezzanine where there's a restaurant. The booths are antique automobile bodies. The lighting is from old-style auto lamps. Fenders and wheels are used for ornaments. And the food is excellent.

On the second floor there's a collection of restored antique Renaults dating back to 1898. Includes their first racing cars.

"How do we get into China? is it possible?"

About like getting the camel through the needle's eye. You can apply in Ottawa, a People's Republic office there. In Hong Kong there's an office. If you write to either one, they won't answer.

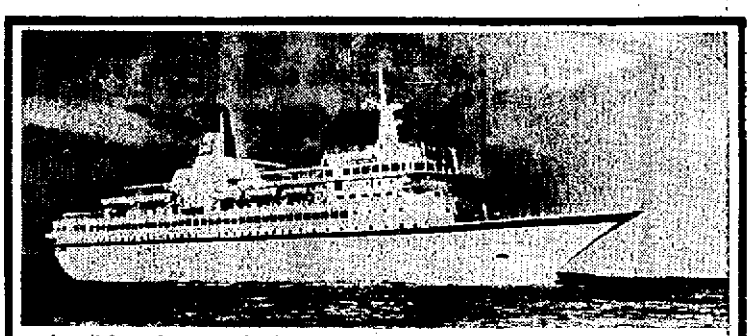

If you walk in, they say: "Who invited you?" You say: "I don't KNOW anyone. But if I could get in, I'd meet somebody who'd invite me." They say: "You must be invited first." (The cart goes before the horse in China.) I've asked a dozen times. Same deal. I even carried a book, "The Sayings of Chairman Mao".

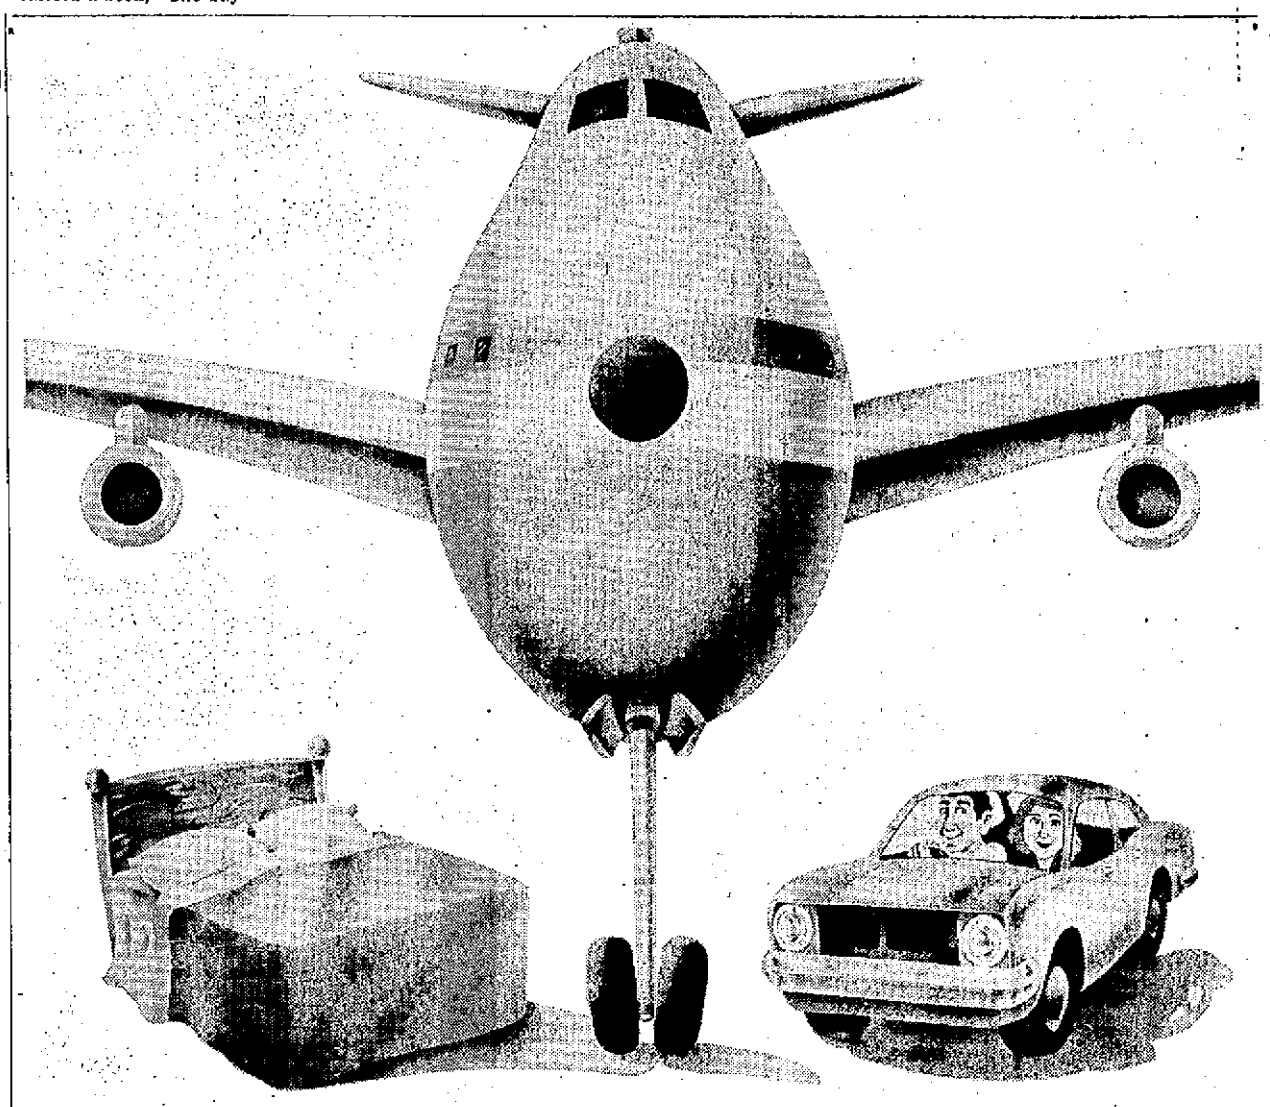

They DO sometimes take tour groups on intellectual pursuits: Doctors, students. Canadians seem to get on tours without problems. The American walk-in is 86 — out.

We can give you a fly/drive vacation to Australia or New Zealand for less than it costs just to fly there.

A normal round trip economy ticket to Australia costs $1424.

But by taking Pan Am Holiday #587, you can get a 15-day vacation there, including a round trip economy ticket, for $845.

You also get a Ford sedan for 8 days with 300 free miles from Hertz (you've heard of them). And a discount on gasoline. And $104 worth of lodgings. And transportation to your first night's accommodations. And road maps. And mileage charts. And more.

If you can stay longer, say from 17 days to 3 weeks, we can do even better. We can give you a choice of 14 Pan Am's World Tours for not very much more money.

Tours that let you see a country almost as big as ours by bus, plane, or car. And which are designed with specific interests in mind.

Take our 17-day Australia Unlimited Fly/Drive tour, for instance. It costs $1042 and is especially designed for covering Australia's long distances. (Initially, it costs more than our $845 tour, but it can save you money if you're heading for the Gold Coast or the Outback.)

Included in this tour, along with a car for 14 days with unlimited free mileage, are up to $250 worth of accommodations (good for the 14 nights you'll be in Australia) at TraveLodge, Noah's or Flag hotels. And a flight bag. And a shopping guide. And a travel wallet. And Pan Am's "Real Pacific" guide. And vouchers for two rolls of color film. And road maps. And a Driving Guide. And, oh yes, round trip economy air fare, too.

Both of our tour books offer Fly/Drive vacations to either Australia or New Zealand, or to both. For more information, ask your travel agent for Pan Am's World Australia and New Zealand and Australia, New Zealand Fly/Drive 1974/1975 (Pan Am Holiday #587).

Prices shown based on round trip GIT economy air fare for groups of 10 or more. We help you join a group. Hotels based on double occupancy, and car rental based on two people sharing car.

PENNYWISE TRAVELER

Looking at the 'fly by nights'

By JANE MORSE

Although family fares, youth fares and most other discount fares have now gone to some graveyard in the sky, there are still a few ways left to shave 20% to 33% from the price of many U.S. air tickets without booking months ahead or traveling in a group.

However, unless you're in the military (which still gets an automatic 25% off what we continue to call "economy" fares), the remaining "specials" are elusive little rascals.

Look hard and you may find a few cut-rate promotional fares between major cities and resort areas — but look harder, because they probably have expiration dates attached. What this means is that you could be hit with an increase at the airport no matter how certain the seller is that the rules and prices will be continued.

ALSO bear in mind that shopping is still essential if you're after rock-bottom prices. The complexities of air fares, especially when your destination is not on a heavily traveled route, raise the distinct possiblity that any two airline clerks will quote different rates for the same trip.

Inexperience, inadequate training or sheer laziness on the part of some clerks can hit you where it hurts, so it isn't a bad idea to check with two or three before making your commitment.

Then, too, the more tariff rules and exceptions there are, the less likely any individual is to have an accurate gauge on the big picture. Not only is plenty of misinformation passed around but a fare one airline has never heard of can be a box-office smash with another.

For instance, Continental has pioneered "Thrift" class (10% less than economy) in a few cities.

The best and biggest discounts aren't around in all places either, but there are two kinds in particular it pays to look for, namely:

FLY - BY - NIGHT FARES—There are worse ways to go, especially when "after dinner" fares are reduced by at least 20%, sometimes 25%. They commence in one or two cities as early as 7:45 p.m., but a majority start after 10 p.m. — and continue to include "early bird" takeoffs up to 6 a.m. or so.

For the penny-wise, there are two things to remember: Not all airlines have designated their night flights as lower fare flights, and you won't get a reduction if your day flight doesn't take off until night.

travel

If you're ticketed on a full-fare flight that's delayed past 9 p.m., though you'd do well to see if there's a night flight alternative leaving from the same aiport. You can then turn in your ticket for the first flight and save by switching.

Self-imposed delays aren't the worst idea in the world, either, when re-ticketing to a night flight would pay for a nice gluttonous go at everything from oysters to cognac in some eater's paradise.

You'll find most night flights operating on transcontinental routes and to and from cities east of the Mississippi. The carriers with the largest supply are American, TWA, Eastern, Delta and National.

West of the Mississippi it's a new and smaller ball game called "standby." Anyone can play, kids or adults, but the few planes involved usually move in the creepy-crawling hours between midnight and 3 or 4 a.m.

Standby, of course, means take a chance, go to the airport without a reservation and hope the airline has space for you after the full-fare payers have boarded. The good part is that except in major holiday periods, they almost always do.

The best part is that when they do you travel for 30% less than the economy rate. Continental, United, Western and Frontier are the carriers most likely to provide.

SPEND-AND-SAVE FARES — Alias "individual tour basing fares," alias IT and ITX fares. The name is not as important as the price, which is roughly 20% to 33% off economy fares if you also buy an "advertised air tour," that is, ground arrangements that meet a specified minimum price. This generally must include two nights' lodging plus sightseeing, a rental car or some kind of entertainment

The coast-to-coast traveler, for instance, can buy the $374 New York-California day coach round trip, or a $261 ITX round trip plus a ground package of at least $65 and still pocket a little change.

You'll find similar possibilities mainly between major cities long distances apart, but there are some short-distance ITX fares, too. Ask — and then ask again. An airline clerk recently told us no ITX fare existed on a particular route: his supervisor told us otherwise.

The big disadvantage of ITX arrangements is that there are "blackout periods" (generally holidays, Friday and Sunday afternoons, sometimes all weekend) when the ticket can't be used. For the most part, you're also required to stay at least six days and not more than 30 and can't use one company's ticket to travel with another line.

To compensate, though, there's often a king-size ITX advantage: Stopovers are permitted almost anywhere along the airline's route for $10 or less apiece.

Some ITX fares and all night fares also have a little extra something for the family — specifically, a one-third discount for kids off the already reduced rate. And that, for lots of people, is the only way to go.

Scuba tours

UTA French Airlines is collaborating with Diving Adventures of Corona del Mar on two new scuba diving tours to Tahiti.

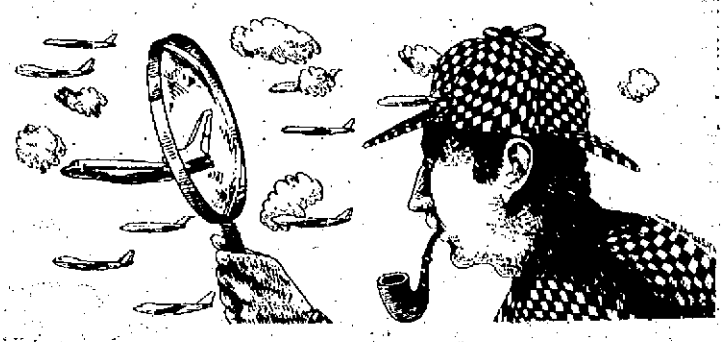

The tours offer one week, two weeks or longer on the legendary island of Moorea. All diving equipment is provided, including tanks, fins, mask, snorkel, weight belt, boat and guide.

Diving Adventures arranges optional excursions to Tetiaroa. While diving is limited to experienced, accredited divers, these tours also welcome non-divers at the same rates.

These programs, featuring the Moana Hotel in Moorea, are offered on both a standard and deluxe basis. The Moana provides American plan (all meals) or modified American plan (two meals daily).

The lagoon and garden bungalows are fully carpeted and equipped with telephone, refrigerator, coffee maker, and piped-in music.

Chris Evert wins $350,000 fiasco

Match race or mismatch?

So called match of century between Chris Evert and Miss Musket at Hollywood Park Saturday appeared to be mismatch at finish with Chris Evert whipping eased-up Miss Musket (upper right) by 50 lengths. Jorge Velasquez rode Chris Evert to $350,000 winner-take-all triumph before 47,900 booing fans. AP Wirephoto

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

The "Richest Match Race of the Century" turned into the biggest fiasco of the century Saturday at Hollywood Park as underdog Chris Evert breezed to a whopping 50-length victory over Miss Musket in the $350,000 winner-take-all confrontation before 47,900 booing fans.

Miss Musket, who was off stride throughout, made a race of it for only five furlongs of the mile and one-quarter test, but then she chucked the whole thing and was so badly beaten that jockey Laffit Pincay eased her to a canter the final half mile. When Miss Musket finally staggered across the finish line, the crowd erupted in a chorus of boos reminiscent of the Dodger days in Brooklyn.

Even though Miss Musket broke on top, Chris Evert (who paid $3.40) quickly zoomed into the lead as Pincay's filly swerved toward a temporary barrier on the inside. Jockey Jorge Velasquez took advantage of the momentary lapse and shot Chris Evert to the front where she remained the rest of the chase.

Miss Musket, lugging out badly the whole trip, nevertheless made a serious move to overtake Chris Evert at the five-eighth pole on the backstretch and pulled almost even with the leader. Velasquez, however, applied the whip a few times and the Eastern invader responded as though shot from a cannon.

From a competitive standpoint, the race was over as Pincay gave up fighting the lost cause with his reluctant filly and eased her to battle another day.

Miss Musket, whom many thought might have become lame during the race, cooled out perfectly in the receiving barn and the vets reported nothing appeared physically wrong with her.

Happiest of the winning clan was owner Carl Rosen, who had put up $100,000 against a similar sum by rival owner Aaron U. Jones (Hollywood Park added the final $150,000).

"Oh, boy," chuckled the Boston industrialist. "They thought we couldn't get the lead, huh? Reading newspaper accounts of pre-race activities, I thought I had brought the wrong horse out here.

"Everybody was writing and talking about the workouts of Miss Musket, but I told them 'Wait until the race.' Workouts don't mean that much to my trainer and he proved that today.

"I had pre-race fear in my heart of what might happen in the race, but now my heart goes out to those other people. I know how badly they must feel. Me? I have a great feeling of pride. My motivation wasn't the $100,000; it was to help racing and prove I had the country's best filly."

Trainer Joe Trovato, 37-year-old Brooklyn native, was more outspoken.

"Was I confident?" he asked in answer to a question. "Sure, and why not? I had the best horse. I

52,975 see Dodgers fall, 5-2

Sutton loses again

By Gordon Verrell
Staff Writer

At long last, Don Sutton has found his fast ball.

He has also found, claim some of the Philadelphia Phillies, his sandpaper.

With a throng of 52,975 on hand at Dodger Stadium Saturday night, Sutton displayed something which hasn't been seen in sometime—his old self.

He pitched a no-hitter for five innings, a one-hitter for six, a three-hitter for seven—but still he lost, 5-2, when Mike Marshall failed to protect a one-run lead in the eighth inning.

"He pitched well enough to win," manager Walter Alston said of Sutton whose drought now is more than two months old.

"I thought Don pitched very well," added Danny Ozark, the Phillies' pilot and Alston's one-time coach. "I didn't see any difference in the way he pitched tonight and the way he pitched last year."

Neither can some of Ozark's players, which is where the sandpaper comes in.

"A lot of balls were scuffed up," charged Tommy Hutton, a one-time teammate of Sutton's. "We had a couple in the dugout and they had definitely been roughed up."

DODGER OF DAY

JOE FERGUSON doubled home Dodgers' only runs in 5-2 loss to Phillies.

It's hardly a new argument. But it's certainly strange that no one was complaining in Sutton's previous 13 starts when he had difficulty lasting five innings.

The umpires threw out several baseballs during the evening but there were no warnings.

Ozark said only that "I know the balls get scuffed up a lot on this infield."

It all must be heartening for Sutton that the enemy is beginning again to squawk about the baseballs he throws.

But Sutton who left the game in the top of the eighth with a 2-1 lead and runners at first and third, was nowhere around when the game was over.

He did, however, stay around long enough to see Marshall surrender a single to Dave Cash that scored the tying run as well as witness Marshall's throwing error on a sacrifice bunt by Larry Bowa which enabled the tie-breaking run to score.

Even with the loss, Sutton's sixth in a row—he hasn't won since shutting out Houston May 14, 1-0—the general feeling is that he has regained his old form.

"It was just a confidence thing, I'm sure of that," said Ozark who has seen Sutton at his best as well as his worst., "This game should certainly make him a good pitcher his next time out. His control was good."

Sutton didn't walk a batter, the first time all season he's accomplished

Angels split, Ryan's flame under control

By DON MERRY
Staff Writer

BALTIMORE—Nolan Ryan conceded earlier this week that he did not deserve to be selected to the American League All-Star team.

Saturday night, however, Ryan pitched like he definitely belonged.

This might have also been the birth of the new Nolan Ryan—no longer frighteningly overpowering but instead a poised knowledgeable craftsman.

Ryan was pure pitcher—not a thrower—as he dispatched Baltimore on five hits as the Angels won the opener of a twi-night doubleheader, 2-0.

Baltimore avoided a sweep in the nightcap just when one looked imminent,

Frank Robinson snapped a 1-1 tie with a solo home run in the ninth inning of the second game but the Birds rebounded with four—the last three coming on Mark Belanger's three-run shot off reliever Dave Sells—to pull it out, 5-2.

Ryan indicated he can still bring it when the occasion dictates and he struck out eight Orioles while walking only one—a remarkably low total for him.

The eight strikeouts gave Ryan, the major league leader, a total of 201 and with at least 14 starts remaining he is well on the way to another 300-strikeout season. If he achieves that plateau, he will become the first pitcher in history to do so for three consecutive seasons.

In the afterglow of his 12th victory—almost one-third of the Angel total—Ryan said he got by on guile and cunning as much as sheer talent.

"I think Baltimore was expecting more than I had," Ryan remarked. "My stuff was okay but I didn't have good velocity."

"I thought he was sick when I saw him warming up," observed broadcaster Don Drysdale. "He didn't seem to have any movement to his pitches at all. I guess he got better in a hurry though."

Only the Orioles looked pallid in the opener. They could never manage more than one hit in any inning and the base on balls, usually a Ryan tormentor, was practically non-existent.

He issued only one—to Don Baylor leading off the eighth—to match his career low. But he no longer has a standing bet with the resident manager that he will receive $100 if he fashions a walkless complete game.

"After two managers (Del Rice and Bobby Winkles) I figured I'd give up on it," Ryan said.

Ryan's second shutout of the season—and one which guaranteed the Angels of their first winning road trip since a three-day invasion of Chicago to open the season—was preserved by some deft fielding, especially by third baseman Dave Chalk who made at least four Brooks Robinson-type plays.

"Davie saved several hits and maybe a couple of runs," Ryan said, "but that's what you need to shutout somebody."

The Angels managed a run against loser Wayne Garland in the fourth when Frank Robinson was hit in the head with a knuckleball and Joe Lahoud singled Robbie to third. Pup Doherty got the

WUNNERFUL GOLF DAY FOR WELK

ESCONDIDO (AP) — It was a 'wunnerful' day for Lawrence Welk's golf game Saturday when the 71-year-old bandleader decided to play on his own par-three course.

While Welk played, the rest of his television show crew taped part of the opening fall program.

When Welk reached the 145-yard 18th hole, the cast, which had been performing a production number on the fairway, stepped aside to let their boss play through.

Welk hit an iron shot 18 inches from the cup and the ball rolled in for a hole-in-one.

A spokesman said it was Welk's third career ace.

A.L. All-Stars underwhelmed

CHICAGO (AP) — You can't please everyone all the time and sometimes you can't please anyone.

Catcher Ed Herrmann of the Chicago White Sox doesn't want to play in the All-Star game and will not.

Pitcher Wilbur Wood of the White Sox will go to the All-Star game but he's upset about the gentlemen's agreement among American League managers not to use All-Star pitchers in games today.

Manager Chuck Tanner of the White Sox is bitter that Ken Henderson and Jorge Orta weren't selected to the team.

The Milwaukee Brewers can't understand how Johnny Briggs was not selected to the team. Representing Milwaukee will be Darrell Porter who said, "It not only surprised me but everybody on the ball club."

Herrmann flatly refused to play in the game after he had been selected by All-Star manager Dick Williams. He will be replaced by Jim Sundberg of Texas.

"I promised my wife and kids I would go home (to California) and spend the All-Star break with them," said Herrmann. "That's all there is to it. Also, I've been playing on a bad ankle which I've hit with batted balls five times in the last month. I need the rest."

Asked if he might have played if he had been voted in as the catcher rather than being a late selection, Herrmann said, "Yes, I probably would under those circumstances. There are others who are not playing because of injuries so why should I."

Wood was incensed over the agreement not to use All-Star pitchers today. As a result, he worked Saturday with only two days rest instead of taking his regular turn Sunday.

"I don't mind because I have a reputation of working with two days rest," said Wood. "But what is the objective of the American League races? To win a division or to win the All-Star game? Why should the Sox or any other club be deprived of using a pitcher on Sunday.

"What if a team should lose its division by one game because a pitcher was not used or taken out of rotation or pitched ahead of time because of the All-Star game? It's unfair to the pitchers and the clubs involved.

"What if a pitcher wins 19 games instead of 20 because of that decision?" said Wood. "Yeah, they'll say it doesn't make any difference but it does. There's a difference between a man batting .299 or .300. It's all so ridiculous."

Jim Colborn of the Brewers said, "The All-Star game is losing its credibility because the team representing the American League is not the best."

Garvey can't believe write-in total

From unknown to All-Star

"Really," the polite young man with the pleasant smile was saying, "this is incredible. It's hardto believe."

A year ago, Steve Garvey, a failure as a third baseman, began the season as a pinch-hitter. He didn't know if he had a future with the Dodgers.

Garvey, 25, is living proof that America is the land of opportunity. He got a chance at a second position with the Dodgers. As a result, he will be the National League's starting first baseman in Tuesday's All-Star game in Pittsburgh.

Garvey began this season as a virtual unknown. In fact, he wasn't even listed on the All-Star ballot. Since computerized balloting was introduced in 1969, only one other write-in player has been picked. Rico Carty of Atlanta was written onto the National League starting roster in 1970.

"I guess this all goes to show that a player should never lose confidence in himself," said Garvey. "When last season started, I didn't know if I fit in with the Dodgers. But I had some success as a pinch-hitter, I got into the lineup and it's all turned out better than I could have dreamed.

"It just goes to show you how many high points and how many low points there are in this game."

The former Michigan State football player—the Dodgers' opening day third baseman in 1970 and 1971—received 1,082,489 write-in votes to win his starting All-Star berth.

"That's what's really incredible," he said. "I find it hard to believe that that many people took time out to fill my name in. It's a lot easier to punch out a name on the card than write one in. It's very flattering"

By July 17, Garvey was hitting .308 and was second in the National League with 65 RBI. He had 15 home runs.

"This season has been a culmination of all my other years up here," he explained. "It's the blending together of my natural ability and experience.

"I've backed away from the plate some and this has allowed me to handle the inside pitch better. I've also cut down on my stride and this has given me quicker hands."

Garvey has only one goal this season—the pennant in the National League West.

"I don't think you can think personal goals," he remarked. "Really, I mean that. If I can got the rest of the season and get only one more home run and one more RBI and we win the pennant, I'll be happy."

Despite the presence of the Cincinnati Reds, Garvey is confident about his team's chances.

"Of course, I wouldn't want to pay this game if I didn't think I couldn't go out and give 110 per cent and win," he added.

"Cincinnati caught us last year but we're much more mature this time around. I think the biggest thing we have going for us is our consistency. Plus Jimmy Wynn and Mike Marshall."

Wynn and Marshall, also All-Star selections, were acquired during the off-season in trades.

Will Garvey be nervous at Pittsburgh?

"Yes, I imagine I'll be a little nervous," he smiled. It's quite an honor, you know."

CURING HOOKWORM

I hope it never happens, but if you ever start hooking your short irons, you have two choices: (1) consider bowling, or (2) open up your stance.

A golfer can get away with a hook off the tee sometimes. But when he puts a wicked curve on a 9-iron or wedge, it means a trip to whatever hazard is around the green — bunkers or ponds or both.

Since my stance is always open, hooking short irons isn't a worry. It won't be one of yours if you'll open up a little bit. Turn a few degrees toward the hole on shots that demand a 7-iron to a wedge.

HOOKING short irons often is caused by failure to turn the left hip out of the way on the downswing. The backswing for lofted clubs is shorter, and there's less time to get your left side clear. So you're "cheating" a little to your advantage by opening up a mite.

If hooks with short irons persist, have your pro check your clubs. They could be too flat. This means the heal of the club catches the turf before the sweet spot strikes the ball, causing a hook.

Hometown hero Karl tied for B.C. Open lead

ENDICOTT, N.Y. (AP) —Hometown hero Richie Karl, who grew up just across the street from the golf course, charged into a share of the lead Saturday with a 68 in the third round of the $150,000 B.C. Open.

Karl, now an assistant pro at the host En Joie Golf Club when he isn't playing the tour, had a 205 total, eight under par. He was tied for the top spot with Curtis Sifford.

Sifford, a 32-year-old nephew of old pro Charley Sifford and the second round leader, scrambled to a one-under 70 in the mild, breezy weather.

"This is my bad round," said Sifford, one of the few blacks on the pro golf tour. "I got it out of the way. I got my choking round out of the way."

Neither Karl nor Sifford has ever won on the tour.

Karl, 29, has played part time on the tour for four years but has not yet come close to winning. For his 10 previous events this season—only one since March—he has an official money winning total of $256.38.

Karl has played this 6,804-yard layout since he was 6 years old—"It's a good neighborhood to grow up in and playing golf, well, your mother always knew where you were"—and is seeking to become the first host pro to win a tour title since Earl Stewart captured the Dallas Open in 1960.

The pressure of playing before the hometown gallery doesn't bother him, he said. "There is no pressure," Karl said.

"I grew up across the street. If I don't know the golf course, who does? I have made up my mind to play the course, not the gallery."

Jessen in lead; Laura sags

LA GRANGE, Ill. (AP) — Ruth Jessen, a semi-retired pro who has played only four competitive rounds in three months, surged from the pack with a one-under-par 71 to grab the 54-hole lead by a stroke Saturday in the wide-open U.S. Women's Open Golf Tournament.

Miss Jessen, competing only because of a $1,000 sponsorship from her Pinetop Country Club near Phoenix, Ariz., popped into the lead from four strokes off the pace as disaster hit the trio of 36-hole leaders.

Of the halfway pacesetters, Carol Mann faltered for a 77, amateur Debby Massey slumped to an 80 and Kathy Ahern ballooned to an 81.

Thus Miss Jessen, a 19-season pro whose best previous Open performance was runnerup in the 1964 championship, moved into today's final round with a three-over-par total of 219, a stroke ahead of JoAnne Carner, Sandra Spuzich, and Sandra Haynie.

Laura Baugh of Long Beach struggled home with a 77 for 232, 13 strokes off the pace.

Mrs. Carner, the year's No. 2 moneywinner, also shot a one-under-par 71, while Miss Spuzich matched par 72 on the tricky La Grange Country Club course, and Miss Haynie scored 74 to create the three-way deadlock for second place at 220.

Miss Jessen, who said that even a potential Open championship would not lure her from her golf teaching job, said, "I hadn't even planned on playing here. But, the kind people at Pinetop, where I teach, insisted that I file an entry and then surprised me with a $1,000 check to send me here.

"I've been a pro 19 years and nothing ever happened to me like that.

"I know I'll be awfully nervous Sunday but it will be fun — it's always fun playing well in this tournament."

Intrepid falls to Courageous

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — The aluminum yacht Courageous, taking advantage of light winds, triumphed decisively Saturday against the Intrepid in the U.S. observation trials for the America's Cup.

Courageous, seeking to oust defending champion Intrepid from the Sept. 10 America's Cup racing series, defeated its wooden opponent by 4 minutes and 32 seconds in an eight-mile race on Rhode Island Sound.

The victory was the second by Courageous in four races with Intrepid during the observation trials staged by the New York Yacht Club to determine the fastest U.S. boat.

The club's race committee shortened the latest competition from 12 miles due to the light winds, which forced cancellation of a second race on a clear day with calm seas.

Courageous is 5-2 in the observation trials and Intrepid is 5-3.

Intrepid leads with an overall record of 10 victories and five defeats in the preliminary and observation trials. Courageous hold a 9-4 mark in the total competition and Valiant is 1-9.

NFL pre-season opens this week

By Associated Press

With or without their striking veterans, National Football League teams move toward their full-scale exhibition season this week with at least two meetings on the schedule.

The highlight of the week is on Saturday, when the St. Louis Cardinals and Buffalo Bills meet in Canton, Ohio, in the annual Hall of Fame game. The game, which would have followed by one day the now-cancelled College All-Star classic, is going ahead even though both clubs will field teams of rookies and free agents.

The first paid "exhibition" of the season was Friday night in Washington, where a crowd of 14,207 showed up at Robert F. Kennedy Stadium to watch the Redskins in a "controlled rookie scrimmage." Quarterback Joe Theismann, the former Notre Dame standout who signed with Washington after playing in Canada, completed 15 of 35 passes for 209 yards and one touchdown.

The Houston Oilers, who scrimmaged in a prison last week, were to meet a semi-pro team in San Antonio on Saturday night.

Thursday night, rookies and free agents representing the Green Bay Packers and Chicago Bears will meet at Lambeau Field in Green Bay. Neither the Bears nor the Packers have many veterans in camp, the most notable being Green Bay linebackers Jim Carter and Larry Hefner.

The Hall of Fame game in Canton is important because it is the first official exhibition game, and also because it will be carried nationwide by ABC-TV, which has already lost the All-Star game.

Each network contracted with the NFL to carry three exhibition games. A league spokesman said earlier than the networks did not pay as much for exhibitions as they do regular season games, but it remains to be seen if they will be satisfied with games played by rookies and free agents.

The Bills have 46 rookies and free agents in camp, but no veterans. On Saturday, 15 veterans, led by guard and player representative Reggie McKenzie, walked a picket line outside the Bills' camp.

The Cardinals also have a squad of 46, and it includes only two vets, linebacker Larry Stallings and defensive tackle Bonnie Sloan.

The National Football League claimed there were 104 veterans in the 26 NFL training camps as of the weekend, but many of them are not regulars. Teams with the most veterans in camp are the Cincinnati Bengals with 17 and Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins with 14.

Among the most notable veterans in NFL camps are Jake Scott, Jim Mandich, Howard Twilley, Jim Langer and Earl Morrall of the Dolphins; Bob Johnson, Al Beauchamp, Bob Trumpy and Horst Muhlmann of Cincinnati; Tommy Nobis of Atlanta; John Unitas of San Diego, and Ralph Neely of Dallas.

Legion tourney resumes today at Blair Field

El Segundo rallied for three runs in the top of the seventh inning to nudge San Pedro 4-3 and South Torrance pushed over a pair in its final at-bats for a 4-3 victory over the Whittier Golds 4-3 to highlight Saturday's opening round of the American Legion baseball playoffs at Blair Field.

Leo LaSala cracked a two-run single and Charles Zopfi then scored the winning run on a passed ball to cap El Segundo's comeback.

Two games are scheduled today at Blair. North Torrance opposes Whittier Golds at 11 a.m. while El Segundo and South Torrance mix at 1:30.

Jacklin holds 10-stroke lead

MALMOE, Sweden (AP) — Tony Jacklin shot a 69 Saturday and boosted himself into a comfortable 10-stroke lead after the third round of the Scandanavian Enterprise Open.

Jacklin led Britain's Sam Torrance, who had a 214 total and Jean Garialde who had 217.

Left-handed New Zealander Bob Charles, who won the Scandanavian tournament last year, shot a 78 Saturday and fell to fifth place at 219.

The closest American to Jacklin after the third round at the Bokskogen Course, was Gay Brewer who was in 17th place—18 strokes behind.

Peter Oosterhuis, runnerup to Gary Player in the recent British Open, had trouble with the wind and shot a third-round 74 to join a group of players tied at 220.

Gonzales retains WBC flyweight title

LIGNANO SABBIADORO, Italy (UPI)—Venezuela's Betulio Gonzales retained his World Boxing Council flyweight title Saturday on a 10th-round technical knockout over Italian challenger Franco Udella.

It was the 24-year-old Venezuelan's 38th win in 44 professional fights and his 19th fight ending before the limit. He has lost four and drawn two.

Nashville won by Yarborough

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Cale Yarborough outdueled Bobby Allison to win the Nashville 420 Grand National race Saturday night and record his eighth victory this season.

Yarborough, of Timmonsville, S.C., beat Allison by about four car lengths. But Allison zoomed into victory lane ahead of him and protested vehemently that the victory should have been his, apparently claiming he was a lap ahead.

Yarborough was involved in a similar incident last week at Bristol, when Buddy Baker made the same contention.

Richard Petty led much of the race but dropped out on lap 351 when he hit a Dean Dalton, who had spun out. Yarborough hit the wall during thesame incident but continued on.

Bob Unser captures Mich. pole

CAMBRIDGE JUNCTION, Mich. (UPI)—Bobby Unser of Albuquerque, N.M., led a field of 24 cars that qualified Saturday for the Indy event in today's twin 200s at Michigan International Speedway.

Unser was timed at 196.240, followed by A.J. Foyt of Houston, Tex., at 195.652; Mario Andretti of Nazareth, Pa. and Johnny Rutherford of Fort Worth, Tex., both with 194.437.

Unser's brother, Al, at 194.230 and Tom Sneva of Washington, at 192.874, filled out the first three rows.

Average for the qualifying field was 188.241.

Among other top qualifiers was Salt Walther of Indianapolis, Ind. and Wally Dallenbach of Denver, Colo., who had to make a complete engine change following practice but finished in time to qualify.

Stars' Mullaney talking to Tams

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Utah Stars Saturday gave coach Joe Mullaney permission to talk with Mike Storen, new owner of the Memphis Tams, about switching teams should the Stars fold or be sold to an owner who wants a new coach.

Stars owner Bill Daniels has given a group of local buyers until Aug. 1 to come up with his $3 million asking price.

that, and was in a brilliant duel with the Phillies' Dick Rutven for five innings.

The Dodgers, without a hit themselves until the fourth and only one hit through five innings, finally got to Ruthven in the sixth.

Sutton led off the inning with a line drive single to center. Dave Lopes then hit a hard smash back at the mound. Ruthven got it on his pitching hand but was able to throw out Sutton at second. Lopes stole second and Ruthven walked Bill Buckner before leaving because of the bruised hand.

Jimmy Wynn was the first to face the Phils' Jesus Hernaiz. He grounded out, but advanced the runners to second and third, and Joe Ferguson drove them home with a double down the leftfieield line.

Philadelphiaimmediately got one run back when Willie Montanez doubled with one out in the seventh and Del Unser singled him home.

In the eighth inning, after Hutton and pinch hitter Tony Taylor singled, Marshall replaced Sutton.

"Sutton hasn't gone that far in quite a while and the way Marshall has been pitching you're tempted to go with him every day," Alston said, explaining the move.

But Cash singled to left, scoring the tying run. Then Bowa bunted back to the mound. Marshall elected to go to third and threw wild, letting in the go-ahead run. In all, the Phils scored four runs and it left Sutton with his eighth defeat in 14 decisions.

It also kept the Phillies 1½ games in front in the National League's Eastern Division while the Dodgers' lead in the West remained at 6½.

Ozark was asked about playing against his former team and what pressures it generates.

"The only thing I want to do," Ozark replied with a gesture toward the Dodgers' clubhouse, "is to meet the Dodgers in the playoffs in October.

L.B. Lancer sprinters capture Aurora crown

Despite running without starting blocks, the Long Beach Lancers Track Club, coached by Dickie Smith,. dominated the sprinting events to capture the team title in the Junior AAU Aurora Games at Compton College Saturday.

Eight-year-old Dennis Price paced the nine-and-under competitors, grabbing seconds in the 50 (6.7) and 100 (12.5) dashes and running legs on the Lancers' winning 440 (56.4) and 880 medley (2:15.0) relays. Tyrone Townsend won the 440 and 880 and also ran relay legs.

In the 14-15 division, Jim Clinton enjoyed a banner day, winning the 180-yard low hurdles (23.3) finishing second in the 100 (10.3) and long jump (18-9) and running third in the 220 (23.6).

Coaches James Townsend and Willie Scroggins took three athletes in the 14-15 bracket to a national invitational at Reno, Nev. and all placed highly. Duane Evans, a 15-year-old from Arizona, blazed 9.4 to win the 100 while Chris Neal sprinted to a 9.8 clocking and placed fifth. Anthony Van placed second in the 440 with a fine time of 51.9.

Concannon to Pack for draft choice

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — The Green Bay Packers have acquired quarterback Jack Concannon from the Dallas Cowboys for an undisclosed future draft choice, Coach Dan Devine announced Saturday.

Concannon, 31, has nine years experience in the National Football League and was a starter with the Philadelphia Eagles and Chicago Bears before going to Dallas in 1972.

Four remedies would prevent future problems

Stangeland offers new views on 49er tragedy

Former Long Beach State football coach Jim Stangeland, one of the people deeply concerned about the crucifying probation slapped on the 49ers by the NCAA, comes forth today with personal solutions in four areas that he believes would prevent future tragedies similar to the one suffered by his old school.

The four remedies proposed by Stangeland:

1. A completely new NCAA investigation procedure.

2. College presidents rigidly running their athletic departments.

3. Eliminating the economic inequity in scholarships.

4. In the case of Long Beach State and other schools faced with athletic bankruptcy—a paid organization to sell season tickets.

"After many months away from coaching, I have been able to look at the over-all athletic situation both locally and nationally in an objective manner, and I believe deep in my heart that if improvement was made in those four areas, college athletic problems would not have to suffer further indignities like those we experienced at Long Beach State," said Stangeland, who's now in the real estate business in Long Beach.

STANGELAND THEN BROKE DOWN his feelings in each area.

"The manner in which the NCAA investigated Long Beach State was unprofessional," he stated. "The whole football investigation began on a cheap note in 1972. It was a classic example of the NCAA's arrogance toward small schools.

"One of the investigators called players out of my practice a few days before a major game to interrogate them. Can you imagine them doing that to Woody Hayes or Paul Bryant? Hell, no!

"Not only did the NCAA investigator have the audacity to behave that brazenly for openers, but he succeeded in ruining team morale for good by telling the kids their scholarships were poorer than other schools and they deserved better.

"Can you imagine a man supposed to be an investigator undermining kids by telling them their scholarships were second-rate?"

"FOR THESE AND OTHER REASONS I think the NCAA investigatng committee should be composed of former FBI agents, and there's a lot of them around, to get away from the present second-rate operation," continued Stangeland. "Let's investigate with experts who are taught to deal with facts.

"People with know-how would have made a credibility check of both coaches and athletes, and then the NCAA would have had professional gathered evidence based on fact, not opinion or rumor. This is what the NCAA was not geared to do when it swarmed all over Long Beach State.

"It's unbelievable that the NCAA could talk to four or five unreliable and disgruntled persons, then make decisions based on undocumented evidence."

STANGELAND THEN RAPPED the way the charges against Long Beach State read when released, feeling that could have been corrected "with professionals running the investigation".

"There were no names listed in the charges printed in the newspapers— neither mine, Jerry Tarkanian's nor anybody's," steamed Stangeland. "A sharp lawyer apparently advised them to go with no names because most of their charges didn't hold water.

"I had 10 different assistant coaches during my five seasons at Long Beach State, but when the charges listed 'an assistant football coach,' the finger pointed to all of them, not just one. They all wondered, 'Is the NCAA talking about me?'

"The NCAA indicted everybody by innuendo. No names! All my assistants could sue the NCAA for those innuendos. One of them, Keith Cordes, now is an FBI agent himself, and he was incensed when he read the charges.

"If it had operated efficiently, the NCAA would have sat down with the university president and a conference committee before releasing the story. Then if there was proper evidence, the president could cut the down the coaches. The NCAA never came face-to-face with Tark or myself."

THAT BROUGHT STANGELAND to area No. 2.

"College presidents have got to run their athletic departments. If the occasion demands, they must discipline their coaches before the NCAA steps in. The president must be alert not to get trapped with the bowls, national TV and the general hoopla of a major program.

"At USC the former president (Dr. Norman Topping) ran his athletic department with an iron hand. I don't say he was a tyrant, but he knew what was going on all the time and with coach John McKay's full cooperation, a tight ship was run at all times.

"I'm not implying there was any hanky-panky by the Long Beach State coaches, but I'm saying that the president take charge and immediately go into action with his coaches if there's even the least bit of smoke. Keep your house clean and stay on top of the program with the athletic director and administrative aides.

"College presidents do that with their professors; they should do the same with their coaches."

IN AREA NO. 3, STANGELAND SAID, "We were too poor at Long Beach State even to defend ourselves when the NCAA accusations started flying. Only one person, Glenn McDonald, went to court on the issue and came face-to-face with the NCAA—and he was acquitted, which shows what can be done if the NCAA is taken to court.

"They tried to strip Glenn of his eligibility. They embarrassed him publicly. This is unforgiveable because the NCAA was wrong.

"The economic dilemma at Long Beach State was a serious problem. When I first became head coach, our partial scholarships were around $150. Through super efforts of the Touchdown Club and then the 49er Foundation, we were able to raise them to $1,300, which still was below the NCAA limit of $1,700.

"A cardinal sin with the NCAA is taking unfair advantage of other schools by exceeding scholarship aid. We weren't even close to taking this unfair advantage because our kids weren't receiving enough scholarship money—and the NCAA knew of our deficit right away when it started its investigation.

"But this scholarship and economic dilemma must and can be eliminated."

THAT LED INTO area No. 4.

"I recommend for Long Beach State and other schools with financial problems a sophisticated, year-round season ticket sale operation.

"Lack of gate receipts was our major problem. The operation I suggest could be an agency geared to programs like the pros. Put the people on commission and give them an incentive to sell tickets year-round.

"Athletics is a business and has to be run like one. If I could spare the time from real estate, I'd start such an agency and guarantee the university a respectable athletic budget. A sale of 10,000 season tickets in both football and basketball would gross a half-million dollars.

"A professional agency commission of 20 per cent would be $100,000. What's wrong with a top professional ticket promoter earning $100,000 if the Long Beach State athletic department is going to gross $400,000. I'm being realistic—something like this has to be done in the college athletic business.

"Ohio State can net $250,000 or more per football game, but there are a lot of schools not like Ohio State which must sell season tickets through an organized agency 12 months a year.

"If the 49ers are to survive, it must be at the gate. They have the boosters and the student body to do the job. I'm sure it will be done. But when?"

SPORTS HOT LINE

Q. Although every hockey fan knows the term "hat trick" means three goals in a game by one player, I've never been able to find a sports buff who could explain the derivation of the term. Can you?—Jim Steiner, Torrance, Calif.

A. It originated in England in the late 1880's. When a bowler struck the wicket on three successive tries, his manager would award him a new hat. The term was picked up and popularized in soccer, then hockey. Long ago at amateur games in Canada, fans would pass the hat and contribute money and sometimes watches to the hero who had scored three times.

Q. Lance Rentzel is supposedly writing books now. Is he making it on his notoriety as a football player, or as a writer?—Tom Kelleher, Modesto, Calif.

A. Rentzel has completed a novel based on life with the Dallas Cowboys and the L.A. Rams. He showed it to his friends, Joseph Wambaugh ("The Blue Knight") and Jacqueline Susann ("Once Is Not Enough") and they were not overwhelmed so perhaps he wrote it himself. Identity of the ghost who handled Rentzel's autobiographical first book, "When All The Laughter Died in Sorrow," is one of publishing's best-kept secrets. Rentzel said he had no help, but the book has errors of time and incident which he would never have made.

Q. See if you can find a jockey or trainer who can answer this: How, when, why does a horse change "leads" in a race?—John C. Anderson, Harwood Heights, Ill.

A. By "lead changes" you're talking about the leading foot as a horse strides. Most horses are right-footed and run with a right-lead on the straightaway, but they have to change to a leftfoot lead on the turns. The jock changes leads in various ways, according to the horse, but most often by leaning to that side. Sometimes a horse will refuse to change leads coming out of a turn and will drift out. This happened this season at Santa Anita when Laffit Pincay had a filly in front of the field coming out of the last turn. She drifted out and lost the race, and the trainer asked Pincay why he hadn't tried to change leads. Pincay explained: "When I tried it on her in workouts, she stopped cold."

Q. Why did Cincinnati have to flip with Pittsburgh, Washington and Dallas to decide the order of draft picks in the college draft? They had the same won-loss records but so did Miami, Minnesota and L.A. and they didn't flip.—J.M., Dayton.

A. Regardless of won-loss records, the Super Bowl winner drafts last and the loser drafts next-to-last, so L.A. drafted 24th, Minnesota 25th and Miami 26th.

Welcome to Super Bowl, but don't drink water, senor

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Faced with the gravest and most acrimonious labor dispute their industry has ever encountered, owners in the National Football League have made a package offer that would enable a five-year veteran earning $30,000 a year to increase his pre-season pay from $2,900 to $3,000.

Although the package included several other concessions, it brought a hoot of derision from Ed Garvey, the players' union leader, who has insisted all along that the players were fighting for freedom, with financial considerations secondary. "The freedom issues are money issues and a buck is a buck no matter how you spend it," was the mysterious response of the owners' labor counsel, Theodore Kheel.

This may be the darkest hour professional football has known since the new-born Green Bay Packers, undefeated in their first 10 games, kissed one off to the Beloit Fairies through the foul misdeasance—all of us in Green Bay agreed — of a referee named Baldy Zabel.

Still, there may just possibly be a flicker of light showing at the end of the tunnel. At least Pete Rozelle is now in possession of an offer that would, he is assured, enable the league to recover in a few hours a substantial part of the $4 million which the owners said the proffered package would cost them.

MIGUEL GUARJARDO OF the Mexican National Tourist Council has invited the commissioner to transfer next winter's Super Bowl IX from New Orleans to Mexico City, promising that his organization would post a $1 million bond to guarantee a sellout of magnificent Aztec Arena at $25 tops.

Guarjardo says the 105,000-seat facility could be sealed to produce at least $1 million more than the league could squeeze out of 81,000 at $15 tops in old Tulane Stadium. It is now conceded by all that New Orleans will default on its promise to have that zillion-dollar domed stadium completed in time.

If Mexico strikes some as an unlikely source for such a proposal, the A.C. Nielsen Co. could correct that impression. Mexicans dig American football, giving it no worse than a second-place tie with beisbol.

Neither, of course, stirs the populace as soccer does. During the 1968 Olympics, three Mexicans were stabbed to death for saying they didn't think Mexico would win the gold medal, even though the home team was made up of professionals. (After a 4-1 defeat by France's amateurs, one of the martyrs is said to have nudged an angel in the ribs and said, "Who's looney now, senor?")

ANYWAY, THE SUPER BOWL gets one of the highest Nielsens scored by any sports show in Mexico. Curiously, the favorite team south of the border is not Dallas or Houston or San Diego or Los Angeles but the Miami Dolphins. Those Latin Yanquis, Manny Fernandez and Nick Buoniconti, may be the greatest idols down there since Manolete and Armillita opened the new bullring 30-odd years ago.

Apart from the loot, Guarjardo mentioned other advantages Mexico City enjoys over New Orleans. The weather at Super Bowl time is incomparably better, hotel accommodations are plentiful and superior, and transportation by air is excellent.

Guarjardo did mention the possibility that if the players' strike delayed the opening of the season, the Super Bowl might be played later than Jan. 12, the scheduled date. In that event, a creature as powerful as Pete Rozelle might get a room in New Orleans, but lesser mortals would have to take pot luck in Baton Rouge.

Suppose the game were postponed a week to Jan. 19. That day 10,000 members of the National Rural

RED SMITH

Electric Cooperatives will be in convention, swarming through the Roosevelt, the Monteleone, the Sonestra, the Marriott. A week later New Orleans will be host to the National Sand and Gravel and National Ready-Mix Concrete Assns., and two days after that delegates will check in for the National Asphalt Pavements Associations.

THE START OF FEBRUARY brings the New Orleans International Boat Show and 13,000 members of the Assn. of Southern Agricultural Workers, to be followed Feb. 16 by the Golf Course Superintendents Assn., 5,000 strong. After that there might be a chance for the NFL to slip into town and get out safely, the only convention scheduled between Feb. 26 and March 1 is the American Cleft Palate Assn., which needs only 500 beds. However, that's getting pretty close to Mardi Gras when New Orleans would have no time for football.

Mexico City is dead serious about getting a place on the International Sports Scene. Not many towns have facilities to compare with those built for the Olympics.

The city has put out feelers for franchises in both the NFL and the National Basketball Assn., and Guarjardo's offer to Rozelle is no jest. If the heavyweight championship of the world can be decided in Kinshasha, Zaire, surely the National Football League can do better than New Orleans.

BUD TUCKER

Ray of Sunshine for Anaheim?

The community of Anaheim was established by sturdy German stock who came to settle full of hope and faith in their land, their maker and their fellow man.

The tastes of the settlers were modest and they did not lust for anything grand. A roll of sausage and a loaf of black bread and a stein of lager was enough to accompany the fat man who played the tuba on Saturday nights.

Unhappily, the settlement grew to a village and the town became a city and ambitions inflated accordingly.

In 1966, the generation in charge was sold a stadium and the taxpayers of Anaheim were placed on the hook for $20 million, give or take a million or so either way.

ENTRUSTED TO PAY for all this was the American League baseball side, the Angels who moved out from under the rental requirements of Walter O'Malley in Los Angeles. O'Malley, who was to become the last private citizen ever to build a sports stadium, did not make a big thing of it and refrained from sticking his nostrils into the affairs of the people of Anaheim.

But when asked, he was willing to share his experiences.

"What you get for $20 million," O'Malley said, "is a $20 million headache."

Anaheim endured a migraine, largely because the baseball team turned out to be less than artistic. People stayed away from the stadium in great numbers unless the attraction was high school football, Billy Graham or Fourth of July fireworks.

Baseball filled the seats with human beings on a few isolated occasions such as the major league All-Star game of 1967 which also served as a celebration of the ball park's first birthday.

GENERALLY speaking, though, Walter O'Malley was right and you would just as soon own a block of Edsel stock as a piece of Anaheim Stadium.

However, stadium officials the other night thought they recognized a tiny ray of sunshine in the arrival of Orange County's local football eleven. The Southern California Sun of the World Football League staged its home opener by defeating a team from Hawaii, 38-31.

This, described by many as Anaheim's finest hour, was celebrated by ticket takers in tuxedos, Hawaiian dancing girls, the fat guy with the tuba and 30,000 customers.

Of course, it is significant to note that Anaheim Stadium accommodates 42,000 for football and another of Walter O'Malley's early adages was violated.

"Never give your product away."

The Sun squandered considerable by placing the event on local television which was in complete disregard of the teachings of O'Malley. As a matter of fact, it was in striking contrast to the reasoning of those earlier established in the professional football business.

Anticipating a sellout, the Sun set up the TV program and took off in an entirely different direction than the betrayal of the fans angle. Indeed, the announcement stated that the opener was being televised as a gesture of appreciation to those citizens of Orange County and beyond who had supported the Sun by purchasing tickets.

This was a radical departure, to be sure, but it is not essential that anyone understand it. The important thing is the reaction.

The firm that runs the Sun figures what the hell, the whole thing was a gamble in the first place. Some of the rules are different and most of the uniforms so a policy deviation shouldn't be a big thing.

Of course, the Sun surely agonized the finish of the game on the theory Anaheim and Orange County will tolerate anything but another turkey.

Mike Garrett happy to be out of football

By JIM COUR
UPI Sports Writer

Mike Garrett was never supposed to be big enough to make it big.

At 5-9 and 185 pounds, the former Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Southern California had something to prove in pro football.

"I think I proved it, too," the soft-spoken Garrett said. "People were always saying I was too small and couldn't make

"Yes, I'm very happy with the way my career went."

At 30, the talented product of L.A. Roosevelt High School has called it quits after rushing for 5,481 yards in eight pro seasons at Kansas City and San Diego. He twice exceeded 1,000 yards rushing in a season and his 5,481 total ranked him ahead of such NFL greats as Ollie Matson, Hugh McElhenny, Dick Bass and Lenny Moore.

"I'm not going to miss football at all," Garrett said confidently. "Honestly, I was tired of it and I was ready to do something else."

Garrett gave up his bachelor's status last March 21. His wife, Sherry, has four children by a previous marriage.

"It was quite a transition after being single all my life," he admitted. "But getting married is probably the best thing I ever did. My wife is a tremendous person and I love her very much. I'm very happy now.

"When I played football, I was gone six months of the year. Now I can stay in one place and devote my life to my family and my work."

Garrett is working with a drug rehabilitation program in San Diego where he wound up his career with the Chargers. "We're trying to help kids 13 to 17 in trouble with the juvenile justice system," he said.

Signed out of college for a $300,000 bonus by the Kansas City Chiefs of the old AFL, away from the Rams, the former Trojan played in Super Bowls as a rookie in 1966 and again in 1967 when he had his first 1,000-yard rushing season.

In '67, the Chiefs upset Minnesota, 23-7.

"I can't really say this one thing or that one thing was more important in my career," he offered. "I did enjoy college ball the most, though. It was quite a thrill playing in the Coliseum at Los Angeles three years in a row for SC."

They won't have to hold any benefits for Garrett.

"I don't think any player can ever retire and feel he has it made for life," he remarked, "but I feel reasonably secure."

Garrett did report that his weight had shot up to 197 pounds.

Loses no-hitter in 9th

'Doc' calms Royals

NEW YORK (UPI)—George Medich came within three outs of pitching the second no-hitter in the major leagues in two days Saturday but settled for a two-hitter in helping New York to a 6-2 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday behind an 11-hit Yankee attack.

Medich, attempting to match the no-hit feat of Cleveland's Dick Bosman, who no-hitted Oakland Friday night, lost his bid when Fran Healy led off the Royals' ninth with a sharp single to centerfield. Medich also lost his shutout when Fred Patek followed with a double and Medich uncorked a wild pitch while facing Amos Otis, allowing Healy to score. Patek then scored on a groundout by Otis.

Medich, a 25-year old righthander who attends the University of Pittsburgh Medical School and eventually plans to become a surgeon, was attempting to hurl the first no-hitter by a Yankee pitcher in regular season play since Allie Reynolds accomplished the feat in 1951. He settled instead for his 12th win against seven losses and his fourth triumph in as many decisions this year against the Royals.

The Yankees routed Royals' starter Steve Busby, who no-hitted Milwaukee last month, with four runs before he could retire a batter in the second inning.

Cubs blast Reds, 11-6

CINCINNATI (AP) — George Mitterwald drove in two runs with an eighth-inning single and two more with home run in the ninth as the Chicago Cubs mauled Cincinnati's relief corps for nine runs in the final two innings Saturday night, crushing the Reds 11-6.

Cincinnati starter Clay Kirby pitched five hitless innings and took a 4-2 lead into the eighth but walked Billy Williams with one out and was replaced by Clay Carroll.

Jose Cardenal greeted Carroll with a double and Andre Thornton singled one run across and took second on the throw home.

After an intentional walk to Bill Madlock, rookie Will McEnaney replaced Carroll and fanned pinch-hitter Carmen Fanzone for the second out. Mitterwald, another pinch hitter, then greeted Pedro Borbon, the fourth pitcher of the inning, with a two-run bloop single and Don Kessinger's single brought the fourth run home.

The Cubs tagged Borbon for five more runs in the ninth.

Ellis collects 5 RBI in win

CLEVELAND (UPI)—John Ellis' fifth RBI of the game, a two-run single with two outs in the ninth inning Saturday, gave the Cleveland Indians a 10-9 victory over the Oakland A's.

After the A's took a 9-8 lead in the top of the ninth on a run-scoring single by Bert Campaneris, Rusty Torres led off the Indians' ninth with a single and took third when Frank Duffy sacrificed and pitcher Rollie Fingers' throw went past first baseman Joe Rudi and Duffy went to second. Fingers got George Hendrick on an infield fly and then struck out Charlie Spikes. Ellis then slapped 1-2 pitch into centerfield to score the winning run.

A crowd of 19,126 boosted the Indians attendance to 616,678, which exceeds last year's attendance by 11,605. They watched the Tribe jump out to a 6-0 lead and come back for their second consecutive triumph over the World Champions.

Ellis drilled a two-run homer in the second inning which bounced off centerfielder Bill North's glove over the centerfield fence. Cleveland then chased starter Ken Holtzman with four runs in the third on a two-run homer by Charlie Spikes and run-scoring doubles by Duffy and Bell.

Wood tames Brewers

CHICAGO (UPI)—Shortstop Bucky Dent smashed a tie-breaking single with two outs in the seventh inning Saturday to back the seven-hit pitching of Wilbur Wood and give the Chicago White Sox their sixth consecutive victory, 3-2, over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Wood, 16-11, faced only 31 batters and became the winningest pitcher in baseball so far this season by outdueling Milwaukee's Clyde Wright, now 8-12.

The White Sox trailed 2-1 in the sixth when Dick Allen cracked his 25th home run more than 400 feet into the upper deck in left field.

Stargell sinks Braves

ATLANTA (AP) — Willie Stargell greeted Atlanta reliever Danny Frisella with a leadoff home run in the 11th inning, enabling the Pittsburgh Pirates to defeat the Atlanta Braves 7-6 Saturday night for their seventh consecutive victory.

Hank Aaron set a major league record by playing in the 3,034th game of his baseball career. Ty Cobb held the old standard with 3,033.

The Braves tied the score on Ivan Murrell's pinch homer off Ramon Hernandez with two out in the eighth. It was only his second home run of the season and came after Marty Perez opened the inning with a double and Paul Casanova bunted a pop fly into a double play.

Pittsburgh had taken a 6-5 lead in the seventh when Frank Taveras was hit by a pitch, stole second and scored on Bob Robertson's pinch double.

The Pirates, who blew a four-run first-inning lead, gained a 5-5 deadlock in the third on Stargell's double and a single by Richie Zisk, who drove in two runs with a single in the first.

Bailey's homer shrinks Giants

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Bob Bailey's ninth inning leadoff homer snapped a 1-1 tie and pitcher Dennis Blair drove in an insurance run with a sacrifice fly Saturday in leading the Montreal Expos to a 3-2 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Blair went the distance on a seven-hitter for his fifth victory in seven decisions while Ed Halicki, touched for six of Montreal's seven hits, suffered his second loss in as many decisions.

Ken Singleton's fifth inning single drove in Montreal's first run but Gary Matthews, with his 11th hit in his last 16 at-bats, got it back with a solo homer in the seventh.

Detroit ace Mickey Lolich, 10-12, was rocked for five runs in the first two innings, as Brye opened the game with his second home run of the season. Singles by Rod Carew, Larry Hisle and Harmon Killebrew produced another run in the inning.

Cards end losing streak at seven

ST. LOUIS (UPI)—Tim McCarver's bases-loaded single with two outs in the bottom of the ninth scored two runs to bring the Cardinals from behind for a 6-5 triumph over Houston Saturday, snapping St. Louis' seven-game losing streak.

McCarver drove a Don Wilson pitch into the gap in right centerfield, scoring Jerry DaVanon and Bake McBride to highlight a three-run Cardinal rally in the last frame.

Pinchhitter Luis Melendez led off the inning with a triple and scored as Lou Brock grounded out. DaVanon then walked and McBride singled before Astro reliever Jim York got the second out of the inning. Wilson relieved and promptly walked Joe Torre, filling the bases and setting the stage for McCarver's game-winning blow.

The win was only the second for the Cardinals in their last 15 games.

ANGELS SPLIT—

run home with a sacrifice fly.

Robinson provided insurance in the ninth when he doubled home Chalk, who had opened with a single.

Ed Figueroa pitched out of delicate situations in the second game and the Angels appeared to be on the verge of a sweep when Robinson rocketed his 14th homer into the left-field seats against old nemesis Mike Cuellar who was pitching with two days rest.

But Baltimore rebounded in a hurry as Boog Powell opened the ninth with a single and Baylor sacrificed pinch-runner Enos Cabell to second. Brooks Robinson, who drove home Baltimore's first run with a second-inning single, then tied it with a line drive hit to right.

Another single by Elrod Hendricks—the 12th for the Birds—chased Hendricks and brought on Sells who was quickly victimized by Belanger's booming drive.

Burroughs slams 16th, Texas wins

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI)—Dave Nelson and Len Randle each hit a two-run double and Jeff Burroughs hit his 16th home run of the season Saturday night, allowing the Texas Rangers to coast to an 8-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

Jim Bibby, pitching with only two days rest, gave up seven hits, three of them in the ninth inning when the Red Sox scored four runs, and boosted his record to 13-12.

The Rangers trailed 2-1 going into the third but moved in front for good on a three-run inning. Cesar Tovar and Burroughs singled, Tovar scored a fielder's choice with Mike Hargrove reaching first on the play. Burroughs and Hargrove then scored on Randle's double.

New York homers bury Padres, 10-2

SAN DIEGO (UPI)—Consecutive bases-empty home runs by George Theodore, Rusty Staub and Cleon Jones highlighted a five-run outburst in the fifth inning Saturday night and the New York Mets went on to rip the San Diego Padres 10-2.

Theodore, Staub and Jones hit their homers with one out in the fifth off loser Lowell Palmer. Doubles by Jerry Grote and Don Hahn and a single by Wayne Garrett produced two more runs in the inning and made an easy winner of Jerry Koosman, who was behind 2-1 prior to the fifth.

Baseball's fans join in tearful goodbye to 'Diz'

WIGGINS, Miss. (AP)—Dizzy Dean was laid to rest Saturday on a country hillside following a simple ceremony which reflected none of the flamboyance that characterized him in life.

"He has left us, but he has not left us empty," said the Rev. Bill Taylor, pastor of the tiny Bond Baptist Church in Wiggins, little more than a pop fly from Dean's sprawling ranch-style home just north of Wiggins.

Jay Hanna Dean blazed into the limelight during the trying times of the early 1930s as a baseball pitcher of uncanny ability. But it was his gift of gab and uninhibited down-home humor that made him a fixture on the national scene for nearly half a century.

"Few men will be remembered as he will be, a man of kindness and goodwill," said the Rev. Taylor. "He was an institution it would have been been a tragedy to institutionalize.

"His speech didn't always follow the rules, but he was better understood than our best grammarian." The minister said Dean's dialogue with life was like "letters writ from the heart, not the head."

Dizzy's childlike tendency to blurt out whatever came to mind endeared him to millions, including many younger people whose only knowledge of his prior baseball greatness came from what they read and heard.

Sometimes they heard it from Diz himself as he entertained millions on televised games during the 1950s and 1960s with tales of how great he and other oldtimers were in their days.

But when Dizzy bragged, it wasn't like an ordinary braggart—and his fans loved him all the more for it.

In the end, it was mainly the residents of his adopted hometown—black and white—who made up the overflow crowd at his funeral.

There were some well known people, like country rock star Roy Acuff, who used to team with Dean and sing his favorite song, "The Wabash Cannonball." Mississippi Gov. Bill Waller was there too, along with football coaches Paul (Bear) Bryant of Alabama and Johnny Vaught of Mississippi.

His pallbearers where men he drank coffee with and hunted with and golfed with and joked with. Above all, the ones he joked with. Men like Jack McHenry and Boyce Holleman and B. Havard Jr.

And, of course, his family, brother Paul and the two women in his life, one white and one black; his wife, Pat, and Lena Walls, the Deans' housekeeper and companion for 25 years.

The only people to say anything during the services at the church and cemetery were a singer and two local ministers.

But as Mrs. Dean was leaving her husband's grave, her words best reflected her husband's lifelong attitude toward the press and, through the press, to the public.

She turned to a cluster of newsmen and cameramen and said, "I want to thank you all for being here. It was nice of you to come."

In good hands

We make them small because we want to, not because we have to.

Big car manufacturers are finally seeing the light.

All of a sudden, everybody is in the small car business.

This, however, is not because car manufacturers have a profound belief in the small car.

It's because they have a profound belief that it's no longer easy to sell big ones.

At Fiat, we've been making small cars for the last 70 years. Nobody twisted our arms to make them that way. We simply thought that small cars make more sense than big cars.

We also didn't have to hurry up and turn them out overnight. We've had years to think about them, and to improve them.

One of the happiest results of all these years is the Fiat 124.

Did you ever notice how American small cars look like miniature American big cars? The 124 looks nothing like them.

We make our coupe a little boxy instead of sleek. As a result, it has more headroom than a Mercedes 450 and a Rolls Royce.* This height, plus exceptionally large windows, keeps you from getting small car claustrophobia.

A small car shouldn't be a big car made smaller.

Through some ingenious engineering, we've given the 124 more legroom than not only every other small car, but most big ones. More, in fact, than a Lincoln Continental, a Cadillac Eldorado, and a Chrysler Imperial.*

In the backseat, there's room for two children. Even if they're 6'6".

And unlike many small cars, the 124 has a real trunk. It'll carry 7 pieces of luggage. In fact, the trunk is about twice as large as the trunk in a VW.

Driving the 124 isn't like driving other small cars, either. But to see the difference, you simply have to drive it.

The car has self-adjusting, power-assisted, four-wheel disc brakes. Radial tires that run $100 extra on most cars are standard equipment. Automatic transmission and air conditioning are available.

The Fiat 124 is not the kind of car that's whipped up overnight in a moment of panic. It's the natural result of a long evolutionary process.

And the difference shows.

Shrine workouts continue; South slight favorite

By PAUL McLEOD

The North and South will continue strenuous workouts under a burning sun this weekend in preparation for this Saturday's 23rd Shrine Football contest at the Rose Bowl.

With temperatures forecast in the mid-90's the North, under head coach Paul Womack, will work out twice-a-day at its training site at Whittier College. The South will follow a similar schedule practicing at Cal State Long Beach.

Womack worked his squad without pads, three times a day until Thursday. The 10-year Riverside High coach justified his move by contending that "conditioning will be the key to this game." Co-coaching the North is Taft High's Hal Lambert.

Under the direction of John Hangartner of Kennedy High (Buena Park) and Gardena High's Ralph Vidal the South is slightly favored over the North despite being outweighed by eight pounds-per-man.

Rick Costello of Neff High will probably start at quarterback for the Rebels. Costello completed 141 of 248 passes last fall for 2,196 yards and 24 touchdowns. His three-year totals were 393 completions in 751 attempts for 5,913 yards and 63 TD's, second leading passer in CIF history.

Dwight Ford of Bell High and Kevin Cole of Gardena will spearhead the ground attack. Ford runs the 100 yard dash in 9.6 and used that speed to rush for 1,651 yards during 1973. Cole led Gardena to the 1973 L.A. City championship with 1,696 yards rushing.

Santa Monica quarterback Dennis Thurman will open at flanker for the South—a move designated to add more speed and precision to the Rebel offense. Thurman plans to attend USC in the fall where he is expected to replace Lynn Swann.

Frank Manumaleuna of Banning High is scheduled to see action at both tight end and fullback. Manumaleuna was an all-L.A. City selection while garnering all-America honors in his three-years at Banning. He can also play defense if needed.

Tickets for the game are priced at $5.15 and $2.10 and are available in Long Beach at El Bekal Temple, 801 Elm Ave., between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. or by phone at 432-3407. Tickets can be purchased in Los Angeles at the Shrine Football Office, 655 W. Jefferson Blvd.

Reason for playing

RAMS ORDERED TO PICKET

The National Football League Players Assn., expressing "concern" with a decision by Ram veterans not to picket their training camp, will set up picket lines today, Ram player representative Tom Mack said Saturday.

Mack said an informal vote he conducted among the team's veterans, in which it was decided to boycott training camp but not set up picket lines, was overruled by the NFLPA.

"The union has expressed concern that people will misinterpret our not picketing and believe that we are not in full support of the union," Mack said. "In other words, I deviated from union policy without authority."

On Tuesday, a day before the squad's rookies and free agents reported to training camp here, Mack announced the outcome of a vote he conducted among a majority of the Rams' 44 veterans. He said the veterans felt picket lines drew media attention away from the real issues of the strike and focused attention to the picketing players themselves.

After three days of two-a-day drills, coach Chuck Knox cancelled today's workout.

Scheckter captures British Grand Prix

BRANDS HATCH, England (AP) — Jody Scheckter of South Africa, in a Tyrrell Ford, won the British Grand Prix Saturday as a luckless Ferrari, piloted by Nikki Lauda, which had led until five laps from the finish, dropped out with a puncture.

Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, in a Marlboro Texaco, finished second and took the lead in the world drivers' championship point standings.

In a race which did not become exciting until the closing stages, despite record-breaking speeds and a record crowd of 100,000, Lauda, of Austria, dominated until that fateful puncture.

Leading the championship before the race, he seemed set to go farther ahead. At one point, he had built a 12-second lead which he saw whittled away as he slowed on a flat tire.

Car after car passed him on the last few laps.

Punctures were a feature of the race. They caused the downfall of many top drivers, including Ronnie Peterson of Sweden.

Scheckter's winning speed was 115.78 mph. He completed the 75-laps in one hour, 43 minutes, 2.2 seconds.

CHRIS EVERT BY A MILE—

played the race by ear; I didn't run it in the newspapers. I had a couple plans, depending on how my filly got out of the gate. So she got out fast and that was that.

"They said I brought my filly out here too early, that I wasn't working her right, and that I was too young. I guess they know now they were wrong on all counts."

Velasquez said he hit Chris Evert only a few times.

"I didn't need to do it any more," remarked the grinning Panamanian. "I looked back when I came into the stretch and couldn't find that other filly. I knew where she was until the half-mile pole and then she disappeared."

Pincay said he "didn't know what was the matter, but she (Miss Musket) didn't have it today. She broke okay, but tried to duck in a few strides out of the gate. When I tried to catch up on the inside, my filly wouldn't go up in there. I tried the other filly a couple times, but each time she pulled away from us. I whacked my filly once, but I could see she didn't have it today and I didn't push her."

Disappointed Charlie Whittingham, Miss Musket's trainer, allowed as how "I guess I better stay out of match races. I don't know what was the matter. Maybe she sulked, but I don't know today."

The $350,000 purse zoomed Chris Evert's lifetime earnings to $602,801, but she'll never have an easier, richer payday than Saturday.

Pincay struck out in the match race, but he slugged a grandslam home run in the $132,000 Hollywood Juvenile Championship for 2-year-olds when he steered Dimaggio to a nose victory over The Bagel Prince. George Navonod was third, three lengths behind. Favored Eastern import Bold Gun was ninth in the 12-horse field.

Dimaggio, an appropriately named Bold Hitter colt, paid $14.40.

The Bagel Prince's trainer, John Pappalardo, claimed a foul against Dimaggio, but it was disallowed when movies showed plenty of daylight between the two colts during the entire stretch drive.

Dimaggio's owner, John Valpredo, said when his colt last raced and lugged so badly, Pincay told him, "Put blinkers on him or I won't ride him back." So Dimaggio raced and won with blinkers Saturday.

Maybe that was an equipment change Miss Musket needed.

LBSU swimmer Grant captures Lifesaving Open

La Zanzara faces 6 at Hollypark

Aaron Jones' La Zanzara, second in the Santa Barbara, Long Beach and Vanity Handicaps this year, will be favored to capture her first stakes event in 1974 when she takes on six distance-loving grass specialists in this afternoon's $66,200 Beverly Hills Handicap at Hollywood Park.

The Beverly Hills highlights the final Sunday of racing at the Inglewood oval, and those in attendance will have a chance to win $76,000 in "Super Sweep" prize money. The fan, or fans selecting the most consecutive winners beginning with the first race will collect or share the $76,000.

Scheduled at a mile and three-eighths over the lakeside turf course, the Beverly Hills also attracted Dogtooth Violet, Ready Wit, That's Show Biz, Grasping and Hurry Countess. With seven starters and no declarations, the winner will take home a check for $39,200.

La Zanzara, a late-running Irish-bred daughter of the Herbager stallion Sea Hawk II, closed fastest of all in the recent $111,500 Vanity Handicap, won by her stablemate Tallahto.

Hollypark's traditional closing-day feature, the $100,000-added Sunset Handicap, attracted a dozen grass specialists, including Eastern ace Take Off, when the mile and one-half turf course marathon was drawn Saturday. Take Off, whose victories in the recent Edgemere and Bowling Green Handicaps have earned him top weight of 125 pounds for the Sunset, will be ridden by Ron Turcotte

Big Whippendeal, who earlier this season captured the Century Handicap, blew out a half-mile in :49⅘ Saturday and then landed in post 11. His Sunset pilot, Laffit Pincay, was up for the drill. The remainder of the Sunset lineup, in post position order, is Scantling (Angel Santiago), Mr. Cockatoo (Wayne Harris), Strong Award (Jorge Tejeira), Yvetot (Heliodoro Gustines), Irish Stronghold (Chuck Baltazar), Greco II (Bill Shoemaker), Montmartre (Don Pierce), Pure Flight (Steve Valdez), El Rey (Alvaro Pineda) and War Heim (Fernando Toro).

RACING ROUNDUP

AQUEDUCT—True Knight came from last place to win the 88th running of the $114,800 Suburban Handicap by 1½ lengths in a furious stretch drive by jockey Angel Cordero Saturday. Plunk, shipped in from California, was second by a head over 7-5 favorite Forego. True Knight, a 5-year-old son of Chateaugay, added $68,880 to his lifetime earnings of $663,785. Carrying 127 pounds, he covered the 1¼-mile distance in 2:01 ⅗ and paid $10.20 to win.

LIBERTY BELL—Sherby came from off the pace to beat Better Arbitor by four lengths in the $58,450 Minuteman Handicap. Stonewalk, the 7-5 favorite, stumbled at the start and unseated jockey Miguel Rivera, who escaped unhurt. Ridden by Herb Hinojosa, Sherby returned $19.40 to win.

ARLINGTON PARK—Buffalo Lark defeated Royal Glint by a nose in the $45,550 Diplomat Way Handicap. Barclay Jet was third. Buffalo Lark earned $30,550 and paid $9.40 to win.

MONMOUTH—Northern Fling, under the urging of jockey Anthony Agnello, overtook Shane's Prince in the stretch for a three-quarter length victory in the $38,550 Longfellow Handicap. The winner covered the 1⅛-mile distance in 1:49⅗ and returned $10.40 to win.

ROOSEVELT RACEWAY—Italy's Dosson scored a major upset Saturday night by beating odds-on favorite Delmonica Hanover in the $50,000 Challenge Club Trot. The 5-year-old Italian trotter, who finished third to Delmonica Hanover in the $200,000 Roosevelt International Trot a week ago, went right to the front and was never headed. Delmonica Hanover finished second, three lengths behind the winner and a length ahead of Axius of France. Dosson returned $20.40 for win tickes.

Kaweah 4th as Coin wins

Smooth Coin, the nation's champion 3-year-old filly in 1973, won her third race in five Los Alamitos appearances Saturday night when she raced to an impressive victory in the co-featured fifth race.

For Smooth Coin, a 4-year-old daughter of Jet Smooth, the win was her fourth in seven starts this year and her 18th in her last 26 starts, increasing her earnings this year to $10,000 and the past two years to $32,000.

Smooth Coin, who gave trainer D. Wayne Lukas his 48th win of the summer meeting, raced the 440 yards in 22.05 seconds and paid $8.60 for the win.

Buddy Fee Dee finished second in the dash while I'm For You ran third. The favored entry of Vinewin and Osage Copy ran sixth and seventh in the eight-horse field.

Kaweah Bar, the former two-time world champion, was losing his 21st successive race since winning the $100,000 Los Alamitos Championship. The 8-year-old gelding finished in a deadheat for fourth with Be Sure Ole Lady.

Flight 109, the hottest stakes star on the West Coast, warmed up for an expected start against Charger Bar in the $50,000 Go Man Go Invitational Handicap by breezing to his third successive victory in the 15th running of the $10,000 Hard Twist.

The Bayou Bar gelding, who began his career four years ago here in a $1,600 claimer, turned in the fastest time of the meeting, clocking the 350 yards in 17.62.

Flight 109 returned $5.20, $2.60 and $2.20. Priss Kitten and Native Empress wound up in a deadheat for second.

THE BAGEL PRINCE responded to reach the winner's flank and hung in the final strides. The trainer of THE BAGEL PRINCE protested a foul by the winner but the stewards disallowed the claim. GEORGE NAVONOD lacked speed to the turn, rallied from the middle of the track to be within striking distance into the stretch then could make little headway. LITTLE BIG BAD took up on the far turn, swung wide and swerved out sharply in midstretch. ANNOUNCER failed to threaten. QUOTE weakened from between horses. Rich Del Mar meet opens this week

DEL MAR—Racing at the seaside Del Mar track opens Wednesday and more than 1,700 horses already have been approved to run for the $3.2 million purse schedule.

The 43-day meeting, with Tuesdays off, includes 25 stakes worth $705,000.

"Traditionally the horsemen came to Del Mar to rest up or freshen their horses," said racing secretary Peter Tunney. "Now the trainers send them to a farm or training center for a week or 10 days and use that stall for a horse they intend to run."

Del Mar has 1,650 permanent and 120 temporary stalls. Another 200 horses can be stabled this year at Pomona and their entires accepted at Del Mar.

"We're going to continue our basic philosophy of improving the quality of racing by using 2-year-olds and 3-year-olds," said Tunney.

Among the jockeys returning to the Southern California track will be Steve Valdez, 18, who took the riding crown last year, 61-45, over Alvaro Pineda. No jockey has won consecutive titles since Bill Shoemaker took five in succession between 1950-54. Others returning are John Ramirez, Howard Grant, Rudy Rosales, Jerry Lambert, Fernando Toro, Bill Mahorney and A.L. Diaz.

No retirement for Whittingham

WHITTINGHAM
Keeping busy

No wonder Charlie Whittingham feels a bit uncomfortable. Of the five newly announced members of racing's Hall of Fame, he's the only one still on the same old job.

But the balding 61-year-old trainer has no plans to give up his intention of outlasting the lengthy career of "Sunny Jim" Fitzsimmons, who didn't retire as a handler of thoroughbreds until he was 89.

"There's no chance for me to retire," said the 40-year veteran Whittingham. "I hope I have another 40 years."

Whittingham, one of the West's premier trainers and conditioner of oneof the most powerful stables in the country, was selected last week for induction into the National Museum of Racing in Saratoga Springs, N.Y., Aug. 6.

His co-inductees include Secretariat, Damascus, Dark Mirage and former jockey Conn McCreary. All have quit the track.

But the way Whittingham is going, retirement for him should be a long way off.

His stable earned him a personal high of $1,865,385 in 1973 and Whittingham has been the nation's leading money winning trainer the last four years.

As the frontrunner again this year, he would be bidding for title No. 6 except for a 27-day strike at Santa Anita in 1969 which cost him that year's championship by $4,000.

The training great also has captured more than 200 stakes victories and close to 40 victories in $100,000 races—tops among all active thoroughbred conditioners.

"I like what I'm doing, so why should I quit?" Whittingham said. "Everybody I see who retires dies. I'll go on as long as my health is in good shape and so far I haven't had any trouble."

The ex-Marine, whose one-horse stable in 1934 has grown to a collection of 70 spread out at different tracks in the West, doesn't plan a rest after Hollywood Park ends its meeting Monday. He is going to start at Del Mar, which opens its meeting two days later. He also has some Eastern dates planned.

"This is a seven day a week job," Whittingham said.

Albacore outlook gloomy along Southland coast

The heading over a release from the Southwest Fisheries Center of the National Marine Fisheries Center at La Jolla reads like this: "Albacore Fishing scattered along the U. S. West Coast."

That bulletin, labeled No. 74-4 and issued last Monday, may or may not add much to what I already have reported to you about the longfins. However, I have read and re-read the bulletin and have studied the accompanying map showing all the sea surface temperatures from Vancouver Island to the tip of Baja California.

The chart shows the sea temperatures for this year in solid lines, those for 1973 in dotted lines. There really isn't any need to compare the two because only one person caught an albacore on a sportfishing boat in 1973.

For the first two weeks this month there was a 60-degree current far, far off the Mendocino coast. It looped downward and over the old Showboat Bank southwest of San Diego, then upward to the coast near Point Conception. Another looped downard over the San Juan Seamount, then even farther north of Conception.

Why am I relating all this to you? Because this is the time of year when sportfishermen are so interested in the albacore runs, or lack of such, that they bombard me and the fishing landings for information.

THERE WAS ONE SIGNIFICANT paragraph in the 700-word report. It read: "Surface waters offshore western North America warmed at near-normal rates in the first half of July. Most offshore waters warmed by about 2 degrees F. except for a region between Monterey and Morro Bay, where temperatures dropped slightly from values during the last half of June."

That may or may not have been the reason why landing operators at Avila Beach and Morro Bay were watching the situation closely. My oldtime friend, Mac McClintock, who once was the general manager of the abandoned Pierpoint Landing, said this:

"With most of the sportfishermen drawing beads on the sporadic albacore which are showing their age-old tactics of hit and run in July, simmer down in August and then really reaise hell in September, the guy who wants his fishing NOW is getting it, but with rockfishing providing the action and with satisfying results." Mac was saying that after a satisfying trip for himself and wife, Millie, out of Port San Luis Sportfishing at Avila Beach.

Skip Sato, who operates that particular landing, said at the same time: "We used to tell the media when somebody caught a limit of big rockfish; now we tell them when somebody fails to get a limit."

Even so, the skippers out of that landing are watching the albacore very closely. Along with limits of rockfish, there are usually two or three salmon.

THERE MAY BE A CHANGE in the albacore reports after this weekend. In addition to the party boats out of the San Diego landings, there are scores of other boats, all privately owned, trying for albacore. The Tuna Clubs, here and at Avalon, and other game-fishing clubs of Southern California, were concluding their annual inter-club competition Saturday. Their reports should prove very interesting.

Despite bad weather at sea part of the time, most of the commercial fleet is concentrated 500 to 600 miles off the west coast of North America all the way from a point due west of Morro Bay to Vancouver Island.

The commercial fleet changed its position at times because of weather. Fair catches were being made off the Dumping Grounds of the Northwest. It would be most delightful to report that the fish were concentrated on the Dumping Grounds off San Diego, but it is beginning to appear that that will not occur this year.

Virginia sweeps

Class A low net—Tie bet. Del Walker 73-4—69 and Terry Scarborough 74-5—69; blind bogey (71) Hugh Gibbs, Tom Gabbert, Ray Green, Bill Wallace, Jerry Lessell.

Class B low net—J. G. Thompson 87-18—69, tie for second among BobBoyd 90-18—72, John Roggeveen 87-15—72 and Ty Ellis 91-19—72; no blind bogey.

The local situation; at Long Beach, Seal Beach, San Pedro and Newport Beach, remains about the same, with fair to good catches of kelp and sand bass, some barracuda, an occasional halibut and the usual assortment of bottom fish. For the surf fishermen, there are occasional runs of corbina off the beaches from Sunset to Huntington.

OUTDOOR MINIS— If you are in the Bishop area Aug. 3 and 4, there is something besides fishing as an attraction. The Bishop Indian Athletic Assn. is sponsoring its annual All-Indian Rodeo at the Tri-County Fairgrounds. There will be a Saturday night performance and another on Sunday afternoon.

Mark Driscoll, Long Beach, and his partner, Marvin Snowbarger, San Jose, entered this year's Levi's Ride and Tie Race near Chiloquin, Ore., and finished seventh among 42 teams. It is the longest ride-and-tie race (33½ miles) in this country. It goes over stony roads, up and down steep grades, through forest land and ends at the Klamath County Fairgrounds in Klamath Falls.

San Gabriel Valley Hunters Unlimited has given the Department of Fish and Game a check for $125 to buy a copy of the Hunter Safety film, "Sweet Sunday's Gone," to be used in Hunter Safety classes in stressing the dangers in the mishandling of firearms.

It seems a bit unusual for a map company, such as Rand McNally, to publish a paperback, "Travel by Train," written by Edward J. Wojtas, but it's ready for the book stores at $1.95. It's a "natural" for people who never have been on trains, and a refresher for those who "remember when." It tells what to do and see in the U. S., Canada and Mexico.

'Your Hit Parade' to make comeback as summer series

By BOB MARTIN
TV-Radio Editor

Back in the so-called good old days when "the tube" meant a tube of toothpaste, or maybe the inner part of an automobile tire, folks would sit by the radio on Saturday nights and listen to a program called "Your Hit Parade."

Later, from 1949 to 1959, millions of Americans each week watched as well as listened to singers perform the week's top 10 hit tunes as "Your Hit Parade" aired on television.

And now, after a 15-year absence, "Your Hit Parade" is being revived as a five-week summer miniseries on CBS. Starting Aug. 2, it will air each Friday night in August from 8 to 8:30 on Channel 2. Bill Hobin, who is producing the show for Chuck Barris Productions of Hollywood, directed the original TV version of the program for several years in the 1950s.

The earlier TV show made the faces of such singers as Gisele MacKenzie, Dorothy Collins, Snooky Lanson and Russell Arms more familiar to countless TV fans than the viewers' aunts, uncles and cousins. This summer's series could bring fame to three young singers who will be the show's stars. Naturally, they are hoping it will prove to be so popular that it will become a regular TV series.

CHUCK WOOLERY, a tall (6-2), dark and handsome Southern gentleman, Kelly Garrett, a cute brunette, and Sheralee, a pretty blonde who goes by just the one name, are the talented threesome you'll be seeing on all five summer shows.

Chuck told me a bit about the show, and about himself, at lunch the other day at the Scandia in Hollywood. Though not exactly a newcomer to show business, he said that landing the role "is definitely my biggest break to date."

A composer, musician and actor, as well as a singer, the genial young man from Ashland, Ky., said he has never had any trouble making a satisfactory living even though he hasn't gained major stardom yet. Says he: "I have been a success in my own eyes."

He pointed out that he, Kelly and Sheralee will do songs from 1935 to 1959 that were on the radio and original TV "Your Hit Parade" shows, but that they won't sing any of the current hit tunes. For the modern numbers, he said, "we'll have two guest acts each week."

Woolery is old enough to remember some of the old shows and songs, but many of the numbers are new to him. "We've been watching some reruns of the old shows — the commercials are hysterical!" he commented. "I think we'll have an advantage over the performers on those shows. Why? Because they not only had to do the same numbers week after week, but also because listeners often compared them with the singers who had the hit records."

HIT PARADERS . . . Chuck Woolery, Kelly Garrett (foreground) and Sheralee are the stars of new "Your Hit Parade," which will air on CBS for five Friday nights, starting Aug. 2.

CHUCK HAS been singing since he was a young boy. "Both sides of my family were musical," he pointed out. "My dad and I would sing all the way to the country and all the way back when we'd go fishing. And I was singing in church by age 10."

He took piano lessons as a youth — "I'd always want to expand on an assignment, and the teacher would tell me to just play the number as written" — and he studied voice, including opera, for seven years. He is also an accomplished guitarist.

A professional entertainer since his college days at Morehead State and the University of Kentucky, Woolery has toured as a singer both with groups and as a single. He has played major hotels from Jamaica to Miami Beach to New York City, and was under contract to record companies in Nashville for a few years. He has sung on the Johnny Carson and Mike Douglas TV shows.

Among his own compositions, "Naturally Stoned" has been the most successful. "I wrote, sang and produced it," he pointed out. "It sold about a million copies worldwide."

AS AN ACTOR, Chuck has been on "Love, American Style," played Superman on a Burns-Schreiber TV comedy special and a 112-year-old man as a regular one season on "The New Zoo Revue" syndicated children's series. He was tabbed as Superman while attending a party at Burt Reynolds' house one evening. And, while singing at a club in Jamaica one night, he was selected for a role in the movie "Jamaica Reef." He played the third lead in the film behind Stephen Boyd and David Ladd.

Later, Ladd introduced him to an actress who was to become Chuck's wife about a year and a half ago — JoAnn Pflug. Chuck and JoAnn live "between Bel-Air and Brentwood — sort of mid-air."

"Just three days before we met," Woolery said, "JoAnn had told Shirley (Mrs. Pat) Boone she needed a spiritual-minded man in her life. Shirley told her to pray for one. JoAnn had recently made a commitment to Christ. Well, Christ is the most important thing in my life too. We hit it off well from the start."

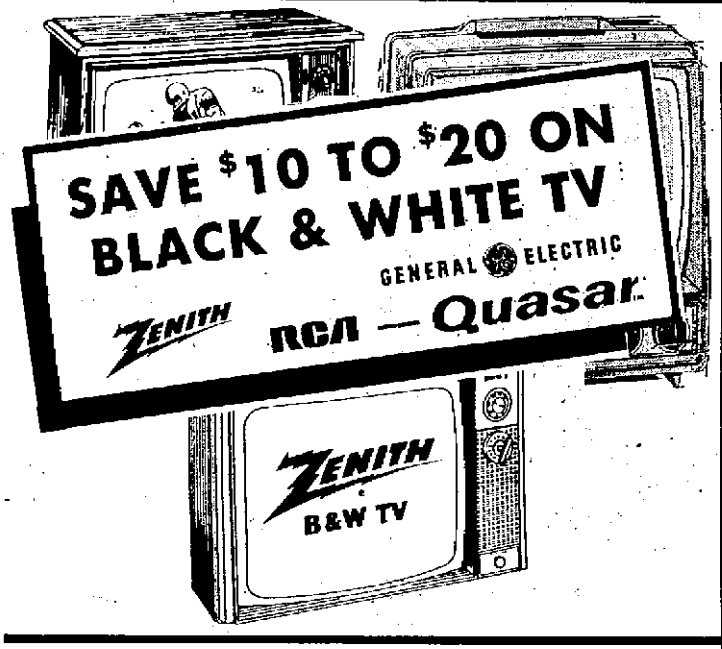

He's hoping "Your Hit Parade" will hit it off just as well with viewers.

Bilingual TV series for kids due in fall

Young viewers of public television get their first bilingual entertainment this fall. It's "Villa Alegre" in Spanish and English for children 4 to 8. Its producer says human values are as much a part of the show as language and culture.

By Associated Press

Claudio Guzman, caught in the excitement of explaining his ideas, leaped from behind his desk and began to act out segments of a new Spanish-English language children's television show.

In animated gestures, Guzman went through segments designed to illuminate Spanish and American cultures for children 4 to 8. The show will be called "Villa Alegre" — Happy Village.

"We experimented in human values, in feelings, in corn, in schmaltz," he said. "That makes me happy."

GUZMAN, who came here from his native Chile at 20, became executive producer of the children's show after a long background of producing and directing such efforts as "I Love Lucy," "The Untouchables," "December Bride," and "I Dream of Jeannie."

"Villa Alegre," funded by a $3.5 million grant from the U.S. Office of Education to Bilingual Children's Television Inc., has additional support from the Exxon-USA Foundation and the Ford Foundation. It will be seen this fall on public television stations.

The initial experiment is 65 half-hour shows that blend education and entertainment by using films, animated situations, songs, stories, games, dances and visual effects.

THE SETTING in "Villa Alegre" is a village — more stylized than real — that is inhabited by eight adults and a changing group of eight children. They develop close relationships as they explore the major themes of the show: human relationships, food and nutrition, energy and man-made objects. The show is mostly live action, but uses animated cartoons and graphics.

It is the brainchild of Dr. Rene Cardenas, a former vice president of the Kingston Trio who went back to the University of California at Berkeley and got a doctorate in cultural anthropology.

Cardenas became executive director of the Bay Area Bilingual Education League and "Villa Alegre" came out of his belief that a national television program was needed to unify the various Spanish-English projects at schools around the country. He is executive director of Bilingual Children's Television in Oakland.

"VILLA ALEGRE" is the first national program of its type.

It would be easy to call it a bilingual "Sesame Street," but Guzman doesn't like the comparison.

"If it were going to be another 'Sesame Street,' why do it?" he said. "The ingredients are the same. We're dealing with the same age group."

He fought the rigidity of the educators involved in the show.

"Children don't need complicated situations or rules or grammar to speak another language. All they need are objects and situations that they can relate to in a simple manner."

Dr. Luis Rivera, former professor at the University of Puerto Rico and now associate director of research and educational planning for Bilingual Children's Television, is credited with keeping Guzman from leaving.

"HE HAS THE best common sense, besides the knowledge," Guzman said. "He was the man who made me think the way I wanted to. I almost left, I couldn't put in pathos, laughs. He came in and changed that."

Rivera's presence also quieted fears of Puerto Rican groups that the series would be too much oriented toward Americans.

Guzman created a character to act as a bridge between Spanish and English. He drew pictures of him and called him the maven. Darryl Henriques acts the part on the show.

"As entertainment, it bothered me," Guzman said. "If you have a section in Spanish and I'm an American, I'd be bored. The maven comes in and says, in English 'We're talking about an apple tree. Some trees give you apples, some give you shade, some wood.' The maven appears and says this is what they're talking about.

"He tells you. A maven is a person who knows a little bit about everything."

GUZMAN SAYS that the show has transcended its original purpose.

"Our intention was to teach Spanish to the English-speaking children and English to the Spanish-speaking children," Guzman said.

"But at the same time, to be aware of the Spanish culture. The kids know they're not living in a vacuum.

"What I'm proud of is that we turned out to do more than that. We're doing relationships. Give a little love. If only that comes through, I'm happy."

DARRYL HENRIQUES (center) appears as a not-too-serious doctor in a sequence of "Villa Alegre," new Spanish-English language children's show to be seen this fall on public TV stations.

With "The Bob Newhart Show" in production for its third season, Suzanne Pleshette — who plays Newhart's wife — is getting some female help.

Actress Pat Finley has joined the cast as Newhart's sister.

"I fought for this," Suzanne said. "What we needed was another woman in the household. Someone for me to confer with on problems concerning Bob. The problem in the last year was I couldn't articulate my problems with anyone other than Bob."

SUZANNE PLESHETTE

THE VIVACIOUS Miss Pleshette, lithe and with coal black hair, moved into television two years ago in the midst of a successful film career.

She was spotted by executive producers David Davis and Lorenzo Music on the "Tonight" show and signed for the Newhart show.

"Real life overlaps our show. I think that's what makes it good," she says.

"We borrow each other's psychoses. I'm the only one who's not afraid to fly. Bob is. On the show Bob counsels me about my fear of flying."

CBS' NEWHART show is a slice of realism, or at least as real as television shows like "All in the Family" and "The Mary Tyler Moore Show." All three are able to reflect life and still get laughs.

ROBERT POWELL (left) plays the debonair C. S. Rolls and Michael Jayston is the dull mechanical genius, Henry Royce, in "Mr. Rolls and Mr. Royce," third segment of four-part "The Edwardians" mini-series, on Ch. 28 at 9 p.m. Sunday.

In the show, Suzanne plays Emily Hartley, whom she describes as "a healthy, well-adjusted married woman with no malice."

She said she plays the role in what she calls "the Suzanne Pleshette style."

By that she means, "I think I have an ability to laugh at myself. Life is enjoyable. No problem is insurmountable. Either you can laugh it off or overcome it. I'm demonstrable. I reach out."

SHE SAID she feels the show is growing and that "the beauty" of the show is that "you can go to the producers with a problem and sit down and talk it out.

"The producers tell us it's our job to protect the characters. It's our obligation to say something is out of character. Sometimes, we're proven wrong, but that's extraordinary."

Suzanne said she is a good friend of Hope Lange, who quit "The New Dick Van Dyke Show" last year with a complaint that all she ever got to do was pour coffee.

"HOPE AND I have lunch a lot and we discuss this," she said. "I think I was more fortunate than Hope. The concept of our show included a real relationship.

"There have been circumstances when I've gone to the producers and told them I will not pour another cup of coffee. Then we'll sit down and discuss philosophically what this woman is. They've worked very hard to make her a real person."

"Sometimes," she said, "I'm the catalyst for solving a story, but my character doesn't get to say what she thinks.

"Everyone's aware of this problem and trying hard to fix it."

Tony Musante set to star in 'Trial of Lt. Calley'

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Tony Musante happened to be sitting in his agent's office in Los Angeles a few weeks ago when the phone rang. The caller asked if the star of the "Toma" series was available for a certain role.

The agent, Musante recalled, "turned to me and said, 'Do you have any political reservations about playing William Calley?' And I said, 'No, none at all'."

And that, he said, is how producer Stanley Kramer tapped him for the title role in "The Trial of Lt. Calley," which ABC says probably will be aired late this year. No definite date has been set.

TONY MUSANTE

THE DRAMA is based on the court-martial that convicted the former Army officer of killing 22 Vietnamese civilians at My Lai in 1968. Calley now is in prison at Ft. Leavenworth, Kan.

"At this point, I can't say how I personally feel about him," Musante said. "But I do feel, regardless of what my opinions are by the time I finish the show, that it's a story that should be told."

Musante, whose knowledge of the Calley case is about the same as that of the average newspaper and magazine reader, said he'll spend the next few weeks reading all he can about it to prepare for his role.

THE ACTOR, a Bridgeport, Conn., native whose only connection with the military was as an Army Reserve clerk typist in the pre-Vietnam era, was asked how he felt when Calley, 31, was convicted in 1971.

"I personally feel that justice was not done at the trial," Musante said. "By his own admission, I know the man did kill. Do I think this is right? No, of course not.

"On the other hand, I know other people killed at My Lai in a similar manner. I'm not going to say he's a scapegoat, but it didn't sit well with me that he was one man singled out, regardless of whatever he's like."

MUSANTE, who portrayed a cop of many disguises in the since canceled "Toma" series on ABC, said he has no qualms of any kind about portraying Calley.

However, he noted, he has known of situations "where actors will not take unsympathetic roles because they don't want to be identified with unsympathetic characters."

He said he doesn't fall in that category of thespian even though after his first major TV role in 1963 — he played a vicious hood — "I had difficulty for quite a while in getting other kinds of roles.

"The producers would say, 'We got a hood part, where's Tony?'" he laughed.

The BIBLE Says

Question:
To what denomination did the early Christians belong?

The answer is amazingly simple — none. There were no denominations in the first century, nor for many centuries thereafter. There were many local churches or congregations, but still there was just one church, "one Lord, one faith, one baptism" (Eph. 4:3-4).

These early Christians had the epistles of Paul, even as we do. When Paul wrote that there is one body, which is the church, and that Christ is the only Saviour of the church (singular) — all primitive Christians believed it! (Eph. 1:23; 5:23-25).

The early disciples just accepted the truth and spent their lives seeking to persuade all men to be members of the one church, the church of Jesus Christ. For in the very act of being saved (Acts 2:38), one becomes a member of the Lord's church (Acts 2:41, 47). This is the way it was before the day of denominationalism — and this is the way it ought to be today.

Wells Report

Fore! more years

Among Washington watchers there has been a frantic but so far unsuccessful effort to explain President Nixon's criteria for the making of a vice president. The two he has chosen could not on the surface be more dissimilar.

There was Agnew, the articulate, alliterative hatchet-and-bag man, and now there is Gerald Ford, the intellectually clumsy ball boy, who says yes when he means no and vice versa. Agnew was no better than he should be and a damn sight less. There is general agreement that Ford is honest, an opinion bolstered by the belief that anyone that stupid would soon be found out if he wasn't.

A closer look, however, discloses that both Agnew and Ford possess two necessary traits for vice president.

1. They scare hell out of anyone who might be seriously thinking about impeachment.

2. They play golf considerably worse than the President.

The second talent is not as easy as it may at first appear. This is an administration concerned with superlatives ("the most far-reaching program ever proposed by any administration," "the first you-name-it ever undertaken by any President"), but you will notice that for almost six years now the White House has been mum on the subject of golf.

The truth is that Nixon is a lousy golfer. He became vice president under Dwight Eisenhower, who made golf America's national sport. In Ike's time everyone had to play salesman's polo. If you didn't you were un-American. You probably put LSD in mom's apple pie.

Soon after his inauguration as vice president, Nixon stepped to the tee in front of reporters and photographers. On his first swing he missed the ball entirely. He hit it on his second swing, but just barely and it dribbled a few yards down the fairway.

He had never had time to learn golf, he bravely explained. He was always too busy.

He remembered his weakness when the time came for him to pick his own vice president. After the Eisenhower legacy, what would Americans think of a President who was outdriven and outputted by his own veep?

Agnew beaned two innocent bystanders in the course of his brief but spectacula reign as president-in-waiting. Just the other day Ford stepped to the tee, hit a ball straight up into the air and it came down and hit a young man.

Say what you may, Nixon never hit anybody with a golf ball. He hardly even hit the ball.

The thing I like best about President Nixon and his vice presidents is their lousy golf scores. I think a lot of Americans feel the same way, especially the tennis pros. Tennis has just passed golf as the nation's most popular participation sport.

Face it, pasture pool is no great shakes as a sport. Sure, Ike played it so everybody took it up. I'm still waiting for a President that chases women. I mean, look at what Ike did for golf.

You name any of the famous golf courses in the country — Spy Glass, Oakmont, Pebble Beach, Winged Foot, whatever. I'll bet I have a better score on each of them than any hotshot golf pro you care to name. That is because I've gone to great pains never to tee off on any of them.

In high school I occasionally worked as a caddy. All the other caddies wanted to be golf pros. Not me. At the age of 16 I retired undefeated. I'd watched too many decent human beings walk up to that first tee on top of the world — and come in from the 18th hole swearing, broken, and hateful. Nowadays, I take the long way to work so I don't have to drive past the Fountain Valley Miniature Golf Course.

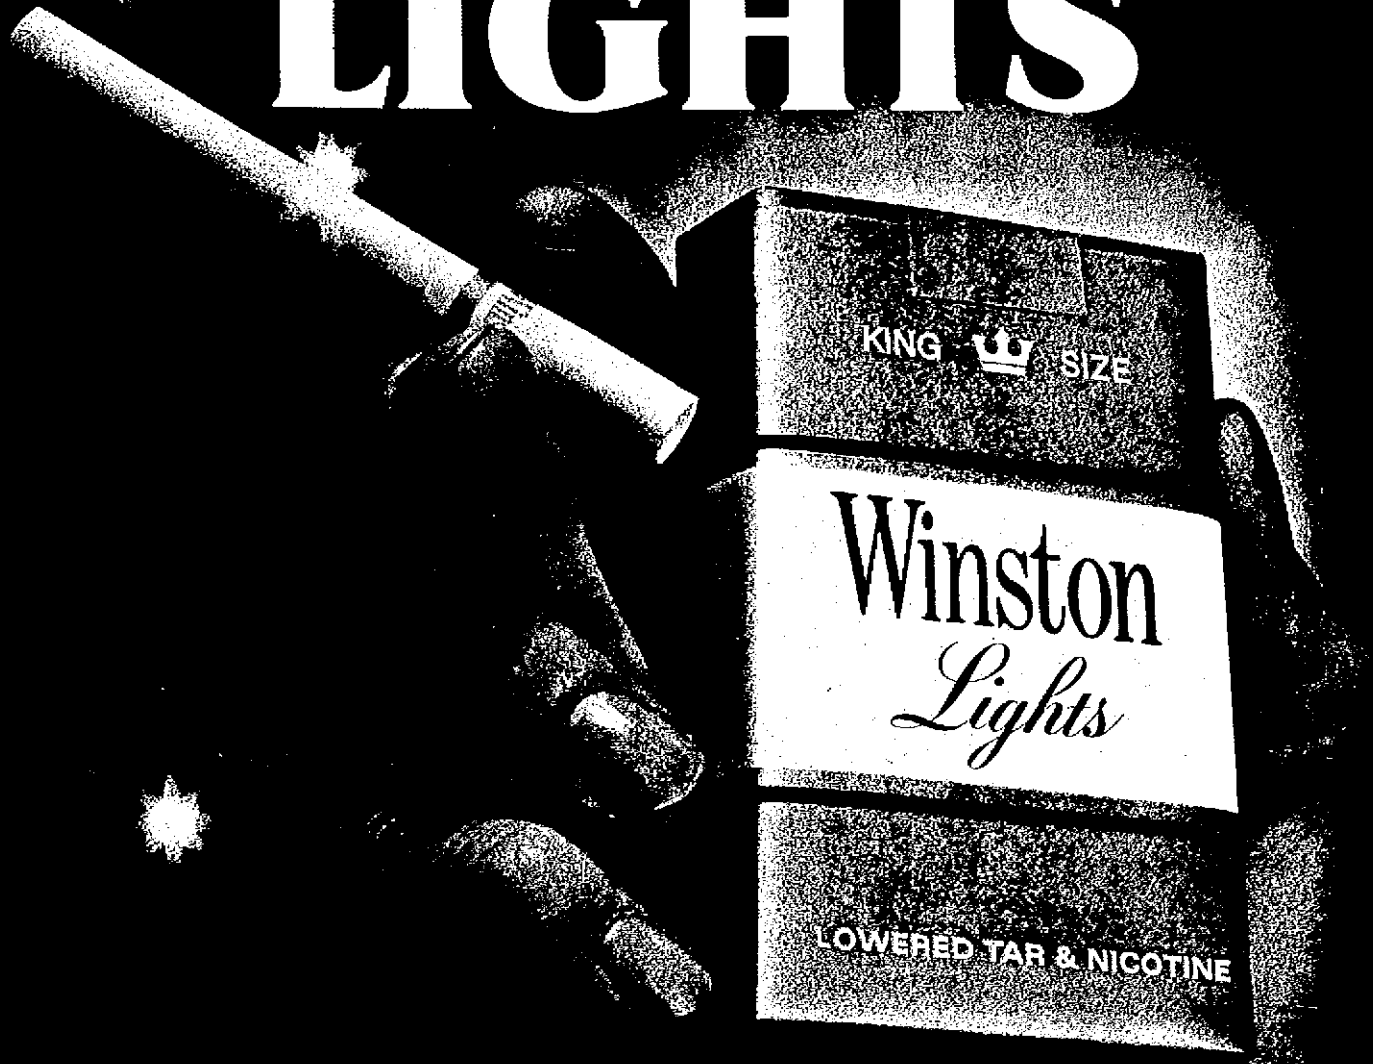

That's where Nixon, Agnew, Ford and even Ike made their first mistake, stepping up to that first tee for that first swing. Until that time they had a perfect record Zero for zero. Sixty-four under par.

You step up to the tee and you hit a hole-in-one. So what? So you've got one stroke more on your card than if you had just walked away from the ball. In tennis, you hit a good shot, you get positive points scored for you. In golf, you hit a good shot, you get negative points scored against you.

So let's hear it for Nixon, Agnew and Ford. They may have their faults, but they have done more to kill golf than any administration in the history of this nation. That is a superlative that will stand when all the others are forgotten.

Redd Foxx
... financial problems

Sidney Poitier
... wedding bells

Robert Mitchum
... same old wife

Prince Charles
... just another rumor

Robert Young
... new medical responsibilities

Q: Why is Redd Foxx throwing away a career fighting for a piece of Sanford and Son? Isn't half a million bucks a year enough bread for him? — Michael Stirrup, Youngstown, Ohio.

A: Foxy Redd isn't crying wolf. In order to clear $150,000, he claims he has to make a million dollars. "What I need," Redd told reporter Joseph Modzelewski "is a per cent of the show so I can make capital gains. Either that or hire Nixon's tax lawyer!"

Q: Why when Bob Griese or any quarterback throws the football, does he spin it? — Mrs. Bennett Turley, Ft. Lauderdale, Fla.

A: Because the spinning prevents the ball from tumbling over in flight. And, with the nose pointed in the intended direction, it minimizes the wobble and reduces the effect of wind resistance.

Q: Anything to a rumor that Sidney Poitier and Joanna Shimkus, after living together for years, are finally going to marry? — Mrs. Franklyn M., Seattle.

A: Yes, according to close friends. They predict that Sidney and Joanna, who already have two children, will get married as soon as their expected third child is born later this year.

Q: How does an apparent gadabout like Robert Mitchum stay married for more than 30 years to the same wife? — Mrs. Eleanor Breadner, Honolulu.

A: "Maybe because I've been too lazy to change," Mitch mutters, tongue in cheek. "And she has absolutely no trade-in-value anyway." Dorothy was 14 and he only 15 when they met. "She was in high school," he recalls, with nostalgic affection. "And I had just gotten out of jail. Picked up for having no visible means of support, for the simple crime of poverty."

Q: Despite reports from time to time of a Prince Charles romance with Princess Grace Kelly's daughter, speculation about Lady Jane Wellesley continues to pop up. Anything to it? — Mrs. Myra Hartleigh, Philadelphia.

A: We don't think so. Charles would probably offer a princely ransom for the answer. He confided to his secretary (Sue Stafford) that he feels sorry Jane got all the publicity linking the couple.

Q: Robert Young plays Dr. Welby so realistically. But isn't he weary of playing the same character for so many years? — Ruth Marchant, Des Moines.

A: Not really. As a pro who's had his ups and downs, Bob realizes how fortunate he is at this stage of the game to have the security of a long-running, top-rated series. But he'll assume new responsibilities next season when he'll be recast as director of the family practice training center at the fictional Lang Memorial Hospital.

SPORTS FANS! I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW

Brought to you by Dewayne B. Corbett

Here's a little known fact about Sandy Koufax ... Do you know what kind of start Sandy had when he first came to the big leagues? ... Most fans don't remember it today, but Sandy actually lost more games than he won during his early years in the majors ... He joined the Dodgers in 1955 and between then and the end of the 1960 season, he had won a total of 36 games — but he had lost a total of 40 games! ... Nobody knew at that time that Sandy Koufax would go on to become one of the greatest pitchers of all-time.

Who was the youngest man ever to manage a big league baseball team? ... The answer is Roger Peckinpaugh, who was only 23 when he was picked as manager of the Yankees in 1914 ... Lou Boudreau is the second youngest manager in major league history ... Lou was only 24 when he was named pilot of the Indians in 1942.

We've all looked at a baseball home plate hundreds of times — but most people, for some reason, miss this question ... Can you remember if the point of home plate faces the pitcher or the catcher? ... The point faces the catcher.

I bet you didn't know ... You're on the right road to DOUBLE MILEAGE with BANDAG cold process retreads, their fireless tread can cut your tire cost. WE GUARANTEE IT.

Big risks for big money

By COLIN DANGAARD

Robert Craig Knievel was eight years old and stealing hubcaps in his hometown of Butte, Mont., when he started riding motorcycles.

He "borrowed" his first machine from a neighbor's garage. Pretty soon he was doing "wheelies" down the main street, if you please, and jumping slag heaps left by the Anaconda Mining Co.

He jumped over his first car at 16, winning $50 from the man who owned it. While he still had acne, he was touring Butte on the rear wheel, doing 70, grinning in the wind.

Knievel moved from stealing hubcaps to cracking safes, among other things, but decided, when he was driving through Bonneville Flats at 120 miles an hour, the police still on his tail where they had been for the past four states, that the pressure was too much.

Colin Dangaard is a freelance writer based in Beverly Hills.

So he hit the carnival circuit in February 1966 with Evel Knievel's Motor Cycle Daredevils.

He was now jumping 10 cars in a row and getting famous, this tough, quick-tempered, ruggedly handsome young man. He had a Rolls Royce up in the van, a girl at every stop and scars all over his body.

Sitting in a bar in Kalispell, Mont., in 1968 he was telling a friend, Chuck Shelton, that he could jump any god damned thing and that he was made of steel, see.

"Well," said Shelton. "why don't you jump the Grand Canyon? Now there's a jump that'd make you famous!"

"How far's that across?" Knievel asked.

"Oh, maybe 600 feet."

"By God, maybe I can!"

The Grand Canyon of Colorado measures up to 18 miles across, but Knievel found a place where the gap narrows to a mile and one-tenth.

So he thought about it, and said, "Yeah, I'll do it."

While engineers built a "rocket cycle," Knievel was seeking permission from the Department of Interior, which was granted, and the local Navaho Indians, who finally turned him down. Knievel would always remember then as "poor, broke sons-of-bitches."

Then he recalled Snake Canyon in Twin Falls, Idaho, where he used to go as a kid with his grandparents. He looked it over, found it was just as wide as the narrowest part of the Grant Canyon and "a whole lot prettier."

So now, on Sept. 8, 1974, Evel Knievel is going to jump it in his Sky Cycle X-1, a steam-powered vehicle like a jet fighter sans wings.

Either way he'll travel a mile: That's how far it is across and that's how deep the canyon is.

"A man ain't a man unless he keeps his word," Knievel is telling me as he paces up and down in his dressing room trailer. "I said I'd jump it and, by God, I'm gonna."

At 35, Evel Knievel, who may well be the world's greatest motorcycle stunt man as billed, is putting more on the line than his life: Last year he made over a million dollars and is now a millionaire "two or three times over."

But he wants more, see. Much more.

"I give myself a 50-50 chance of getting killed. But the risk is worth it, understand. Three or four million dollars is what I'm figuring on making. A lot a man can do with that kinda cash. You've got to take big risks for big money. Especially me. Because I don't have much education, see.

"If I make it, great. If I don't, well, I won't be needin' money anyhow. But I'm gonna make it."

Knievel expects the stunt will "outdraw the Pro Bowl and the Super Bowl combined." The gate will be live, the souvenirs numerous and the profits all to Knievel Enterprises.

He recently fired a test shot, but the "sky cycle" fizzled half way across, plunging into water of unknown depth. Knievel had considered riding that one, but decided against it, first because he couldn't get the canopy to close when he was wearing his emergency parachute, then because of logic he seldom uses. "No sense practicing something you can't miss," he explains. "I'm glad I wasn't in that baby because I sure wouldn't have gotten out."

Knievel's eyes light up when he explains how his scarred and broken body will endure 5.5 G's as the $50,000 rocket cycle leaps from a ramp and climbs 2,000 feet, accelerating to 300 miles an hour in four seconds.

"One third of the way across," he says, "I'm going to open a parachute system that will slow me, once . . . then I'll open a second that will slow me again and drop me into the impact area, where I'll nose the cycle into the ground. A special shock absorber will pump oil up a shaft six feet long to cushion the blow.

" . . . All this providing I'm not splattered against the wall on the other side, in which case I'll be going to the Evel Knievel Heaven, which has these beautiful broads, a river of beer and a place where I can jump my motor cycle . . . "

The Snake Canyon trick for Knievel has become an obsession: He'll either die trying or "die more slowly" if he doesn't. It all goes back to his own definition of "goodness" in a man.

It will end Evel or start a legend; it will certainly be the turning point for one of the most extraordinary careers in American speedway history.

He got his name in jail

Raised by his grandparents, his folks having been divorced when he was a boy, Knievel got this idea for riding cycles when Joe Chitwood's Auto Daredevils came to Clark Park, in Butte.

A guy on a bike jumped one car and the announcer said, "The last man who tried that got hisself killed."

So Evel knew he'd just have to leap cars.

All through high school, which he found a "waste of good time," he thought about motorcycles and leaping over things. He was sidetracked by rodeo riding and hockey — playing semi-pro in Seattle and the Eastern Hockey League — and by adventures in crime. Tossed into a Butte jail for stealing hubcaps, he landed in a cell with a guy called Knofol. The warden turned the key and said, "We got Awful Knofol and now we've got Evil Knievel."

The name stuck.

Later Knievel changed the spelling because he didn't want people thinking he was that bad.

He moved on to serious crime after meeting a safe cracker, started carrying his tools and was soon using them.

"I'd always go in through the roof," he says, "tie a rope to a chimney or something and drop down. First thing inside you find a stepladder to put under the hole, so you can get out fast if you have to. I'd need an hour tops usually to get a safe open. I was dropping through holes in the roof like every night of the week. I robbed so many safes in Oregon that one newspaper said it looked like somebody was dropping bombs. But I never got caught. I was lucky."

Knievel was also careful to rob only those people he knew carried insurance; he has long since paid back all his victims.

For a while he cheated at cards in partnership with an Indian called Yellowbird, then moved onto straight employment with the Columbia Insurance Co. of America. He never sold less than 100 policies a week. Once he sold 110 in a state mental institution, ending the week with 271 sales and "the Paramount Grand Diamond." Evel told the company he wanted a guarantee of being a vice-president, if he did everything right for two years, but they didn't give it to him so he quit.

He opened a motorcycle dealership in Moses Lake, Wash., where he built a racetrack and a great big jump. He put a "wall of fire" in the center of the jump and once leaped over two lions and a cage full of rattlers. He busted the cage as he came down and "the snakes started crawling up in the crowd." Recalls Evel, "It was funnier than hell. I just buzzed on out and watched it from a hill some place."

He borrowed money in 1965 and built portable ramps behind a friend's garage before hitting the carnival route with six other riders.

They opened at the Date Festival in Indio, Calif., then moved to Barstow, where Evel decided to give 'em something extra. He stood out in centerfield, dressed in leathers and helmet and had a motorcycle race toward him at 60 miles an hour, while he crouched, ready to leap, letting the machine pass between his legs.

It caught him in the groin.

He was thrown 20 feet in the air and spent 30 days recovering.

Back on the track again, all went smoothly when he rode a parasail 300 feet up behind a jet car. "That's fun," he says, "but tough on the knees coming down."

He moved on alone when the others fell away, seeking steady pay and no risks. Evel wanted bigger jumps, bigger money. Within two years he raised the price of a jump from $500 to $5,000. He was becoming a success — but he was paying for it.

In 1966 he fell at Missoula, Mont. In '67 he fell twice at Graham, Wash., and once in Seattle. Leaping the fountains in front of Caesar's Palace in Las Vegas, he came down so hard he drove his hipbone through his pelvis. In 1968 he fell at Phoenix and Tahoe, where Ray Gunn, who has worked with him six years, recalls, "He just fell short, that's all. Not enough power. He hit, went over the handlebars and came down 60 feet away at the foot of the landing ramp." A compounded fracture nearly cost him his left arm. He has broken so many bones he has lost count. Still, he considers himself lucky. "I haven't broken my neck yet," he says. "And I've broken my back without once pinching the spinal nerve, which is why I'm not in a wheelchair."

He's been hurt jumping long as often as jumping short.

"At Seattle," Knievel says, "I jumped 65 feet over my own truck — and 55 feet beyond it. I broke my lower spine. The doctor X-rayed it and said it looked as if the bone had exploded. I laid up a few days. It hurt like hell. But I had to jump again. So I got an ambulance and a doctor out there and they filled me up with painkiller."

Ray Gunn, a former cattle rancher from Moses Lake, Wash., has been with his boss five times when the bike has come down the wrong way, once splat into the side of a van.

"He's made o'steel," says Gunn, talking in a cowpoke's drawl as if his mouth is full of marbles. It's the way all Evel's friends talk.

"Toughest guy I know," says Earle Castine, who has worked with him one year. "No way I'd jump over them trucks. Not on a motorcycle. A plane maybe."

Like Evel, they all drink beer and will be seen around the trailers with good looking women, especially after the jump when Evel is relaxed.

there leaning against the fence while Evel and crew are packing. "I met him," she says, "when I was walking home from the club where I work as a waitress. He asked me if I wanted to go for a ride on his motorcycle."

Knievel has been married 14 years to Linda, a beautiful girl he met in his hometown. They have three children, Kelly, 13, Robbie, 11, and Tracy, 9. It's a happy, if free, family with no doubt as to who's in charge.

"How many ducks can Daddy kill with four shots?" Knievel likes to ask.

"Five ducks," they answer in unison.

Questions on women's liberation cause the man to chuckle. "The only women interested in that," he explains, smacking his short leg with a heavy black cane, diamonds encrusted in a gold top, "are those who've been hassled by a man they couldn't handle. I don't know anything about women's liberation, except that the girls I see connected with it have big mouths. I just don't dig their type.

"As far as I'm concerned there are two or three places for a woman besides the bedroom, the kitchen and raising kids. Just two or three. One is being beautiful to take out to dinner. The other is being a perfect lady.

"As for a woman being equal to a man — well, if she wants to cut her hair short and undergo surgery . . . she can do it.

"Other than that, women are biting off more than they can chew. There ain't a woman in the world gonna tell me what to do. Never was and never will be."

Moving on to the "double standard," Evel says, "If a guy's married and has a little sex

He always goes back to his wife with another woman, he can kinda compare her to his wife and I've done that. And I still got the same wife.

"But I think maybe a man is more apt to get away with this than a woman. I'd rather do it than have my wife do it.

"And if a man is a good man, he doesn't need to worry about his wife doing it. If a guy takes a girl out, has a sexual affair with her, then goes back to his wife . . . that says his wife was better for him than the girl."

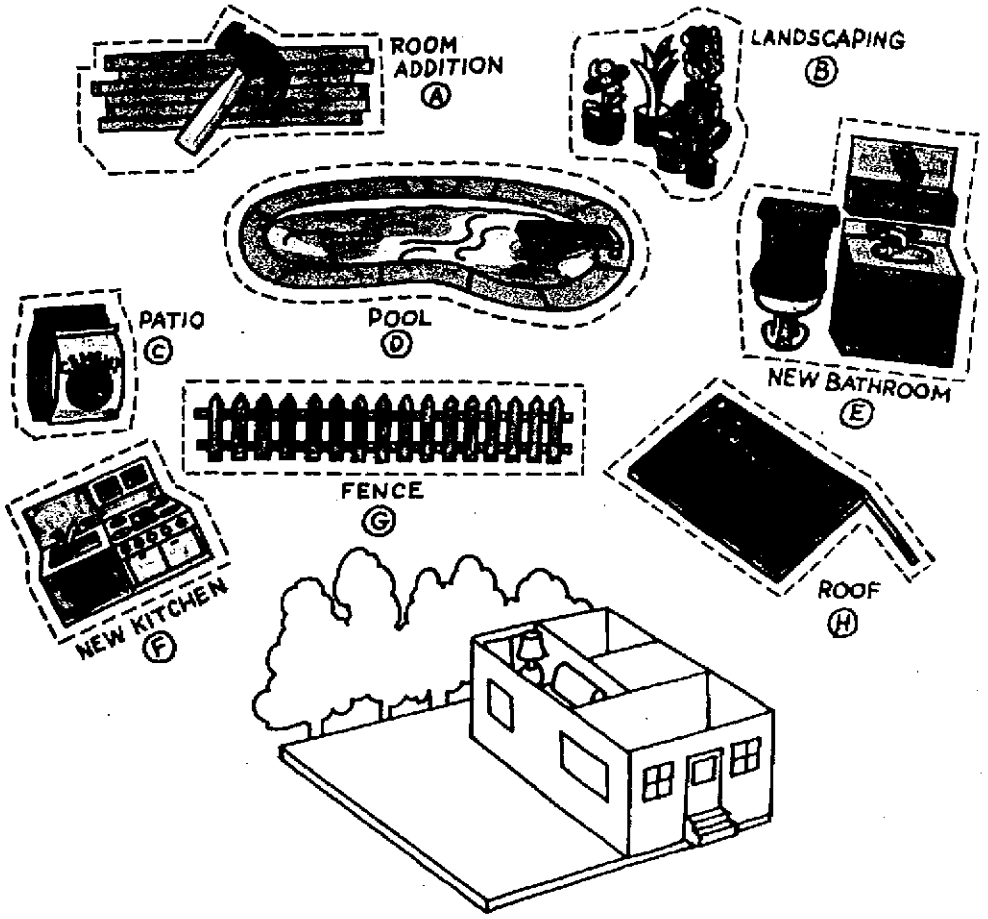

It's Friday afternoon. Practice time, one day before Evel will jump 10 Mack trucks at the Orange County International Raceway.

He arrives in a gunmetal Ferrari with his two sons. A hundred teenagers surge forward. Evel is uptight, limps through the crowd, growling orders, making his way to his dressing room.

Twenty minutes later he emerges in white leather with red, white and blue motif; a true gladiator of the asphalt, where all the dragons breathe fire and their nostrils glow red hot; a man of steel, his hipbones fastened with metal screws. He climbs on one of three bikes, roars off doing 85 miles an hour on the back wheel. Returns to change bikes and take a look at the practice jump. Rushes at the ramp, turning away an instant before mounting as if psyching himself up. Returns to the pits, walks slowly to the microphone and addresses 48 people left in the stands. "Sorry folks," he says, "sometimes I know I should not jump and tonight is one of those times. Bring your kids over to the dressing room and they'll all get an autographed photo."

Watching all this from a wheelchair is Alfred Sommer, 35. Sommer went to school with Knievel and traveled two days to be here tonight to watch his old friend.

"A hell of a man," is how he describes Knievel. "Scared of nobody. Toughest guy I know." He grins, eyes moist, as he recalls the times he and Evel roamed Butte's 168 bars, Evel buying beers with money from bets won. "He'd bet on anything that moved," said Sommer. "And if it didn't move, he'd lay odds that it was about to. Can't believe he's hit the big time. Always so crazy!"

Ask Sommer how come he's in a wheelchair and he says, "Dived into a swimming pool." He waits a while. Another of those people who talk as if they got marbles in the mouth. Then adds, "Had no water in it."

Evel surprises Sommer by recognizing him — it had been over a dozen years — and immediately orders two helpers to lift the wheelchair up into his dressing room. "Be careful," he snaps, "me and him's been through a lot already."

The morning after finds Evel strangely calm. He's actually whistling and twirling his heavy cane, the top of which unscrews to reveal a glass cylinder of very fine whisky. He apologizes for having been so difficult to reach; I had trailed him three solid days, trying to stop him just 10 minutes. Always he was surrounded by the screaming fans he adores, by whispering businessmen, for whom he always has an ear, or by frowning mechanics, in whose hands rests his life.

"Very sorry," he says, "but I have to do everything myself."

He slumps in a leather chair and says quietly, "I know people say I'm made of steel and that I ain't scared of nothing. But it's not true. I'm scared every time I line up with that ramp ... scared because I've missed it so many times."

He takes me to a walk-in closet, switches on the light and shows me a big crucifix. "I stand before this every time I put on my white leather. I'm not a religious man — I don't go to church — but I believe in God. I'm God-fearing. Why, I don't know."

He talks of success, confessing, "It's a strain, being a hero. Your life is not your own. Even as we sit, people are crowding around out there waiting for me to appear. And all I want to do is go and play golf with my family. So many always after my time. You know, if they gave 14 year-olds the vote, I'd be President. There'd be no Richard Nixon."

The conversation moves to courage. He defines it as being "that which you need to take a step that will make you a big winner or a big loser. Courage is venturing into the unknown with the question: Will I live after this or will I be dead? Courage is not jumping out of an airplane at 30,000 feet without a parachute. That's stupidity. Courage is jumping out of the same plane, from the same height, and, after falling 7,000 feet, passing another skydiver who hands you a parachute, and you put it on while you continue to fall, and you land safely.

"My friend Rod Pak did that."

"It took a whole lot of guts."

He thinks a while, then adds, "Most of all, courage is knowing fear — and overcoming it. Strength is having the courage to overcome fear.

"Now, it's not necessarily a good thing, being so strong. It can get you killed. I've made a way of life out of being nearly killed.

"But I wouldn't be happy, wearing a gray suit, white shirt, red tie, red socks and black shoes, like the other men walking the streets of this country.

"To me, that would be slow death.

"I will jump the canyon because I am Evel Knievel, the man who does what he says he's gonna do.

"If I survive, I'll celebrate.

"If I don't, read my message. It'll be written in dirt at Snake Canyon." □

Where did all the money

BY MARG McCALL

Most old people speak softly and wear hearing aids, I'm told. That's nice. I can just hear them all conversing sweetly and reasonably.

Such is not the case, however, with my mother. She can't wear her hearing device because it "plugs up" her ears. So the wind whistles gaily between Mom's ears and she and I hold loud tete-a-tetes, no matter where we are.

The other noon we went to a nice restaurant. As we were being seated, Mom shouted anxiously, "I don't know how we are going to pay for this."

They served us anyway, but this pinpoints the problem! I know how we are going to pay restaurant checks. So does Mom, but she forgets. I think her memory is weaker than her hearing.

Until recently Mom was living at Leisure World with a part-time companion and signing checks as if they were Christmas cards. Now she resides securely in a guest home and I handle her money matters. She has little need of cash, and because many of the ladies at the guest home are absent minded about ownership, she carries only a few dollars at a time.

Everytime she opens her pocketbook in public, I know she is going to put my foot in it. One Sunday a friend took Mom and me to an elegant restaurant. Mom had a cocktail, we all ordered a la carte and I saw mom fingering her purse. She brushed aside my assurances that we were to be guests on this occasion and shouted across the table, "Do you know where I can get my hands on some money?"

You've got to hand it to Mom for spunk. It must be hard for a widow of 20 years to adjust to not writing checks or handling money. In her day she managed well and expected the same of others. One day I wore a new leopard-print synthetic jacket to luncheon with her at Harry's Continental Cafe. She was thunderstruck at my seeming extravagance and a little incredulous at the explanation. To the amusement of other diners I had to shout, "Fake fur, Mom, fake fur," guiding her hand across the resistant nap. Oh well, I was never at ease in snobbish cafes anyhow.

And it was woe to any cause she supported if it was suspected of not practicing her variety of thrift. In a letter to the Republican Party headquarters she dealt them a sharp reprimand: "If you wouldn't waste our funds sending me three letters saying exactly the same thing, maybe you wouldn't have to ask me for money so often." I'll bet their fancy new computer can't answer that one.

Twelve years ago when she set up housekeeping in California, with typical prudence, she tucked a $100 bill in her old Standard Diary account book to cover any imaginable emergency. Recently when we changed her lodgings, she asked if it was still there. I said it was untouched. (So was the diary.) How can I tell her it shrank? The devaluation of the dollar has taken place outside her world.

Today Mom blithely operates under her notion of restaurant tipping which was fixed in the early 1960s when she "learned" from her new lady friends that one tips less here than in the East. The ladies seem to have derived a tea-room formula that a tip equals 35 cents.

So if the gratuity doesn't go clunk in the service tray, Mom is scandalized. "You don't need to leave that much!" she shrieks as the help scatters. Coward that I am, I leave veritable windfalls of silver to avoid a scene and spare Mom the tantalizing sight of unclaimed currency.

One less than satisfactory compromise is the cafeteria. It doesn't cost much less because of the tendency to load up — carrot salad, carrots and carrot cake? Indeed we seem to have added a new dimension to conspicuous consumption. For as Mom's tray, gaily bearing a fleet of little dishes, glides toward the cash register, she will open her gaping purse and sing out, "I hope this is free!"

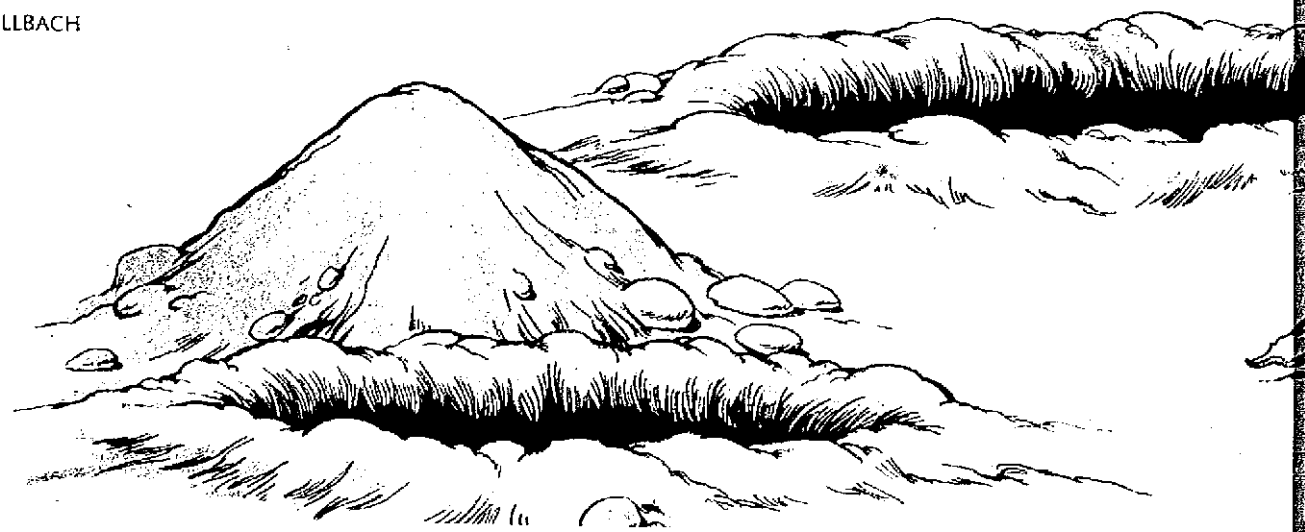

Probably the spread reminds her of gala buffet parties in the past. As I say, it does not avoid a scene, but somehow you don't mind so much in a cafeteria. Also the quarter I give the boy to carry her tray is never contended. After all it is less than 35 cents. Indeed, I'd be scolded if I forgot.

We picnic a lot. But what Mom really wants is to dine out and I don't mean outdoors. After a series of picnics in the park that were pleasant, peaceful and plentiful in my viewpoint, I again took Mom to a nice restaurant. As she sank into the thronelike chair, she observed tartly, "I didn't know I could afford to go to places like this."

When I reassure her that she can, I know we are once more starting down Memory Lane wherein I will be ambushed. Soon I will be called upon to be tolerant when she asks piercingly in Buffum's tea room, "Whatever happened to all my money?"

I've always been a little nervous about money and I don't like giving out at-large an itemized list of her investments and savings — "300 shares of AT&T, 200 Columbia Gas" ... You understand how I feel. If it would settle the matter once and for all, I'd gladly do a command performance. But the same question would come up again within the hour.

A piercing query in the tea room

Matters are getting worse, of course. They peaked last month when Mom spent some time in a hospital. Always a dreamer at night, during the hospital stay she slipped in and out of reality more frequently.

As I arrived to visit her one day she was waking from a nap and asked me, "Were you with me the night I buried the money in the woods?"

I said the wrong thing. I was honest. "No."

This upset her terribly. Her only child, her faithful prompter, had not been on hand for an important event.

Luckily, as I said, you always get a second chance to answer her queries. The very next day she asked again, "Were you with me the night I buried the money in the woods?"

"Yes," I said emphatically. I wanted this to stick.

"How much did we bury?" she shouted.

"Two thousand dollars," I yelled. (Was that nurse in the hall looking at me funny?)

"Do you remember where we put it? I don't."

"Yes. Fort Knox."

"That's good." I could see her relax.

Mom's ills improved after that and I'll be checking her out soon (if they'll release her to me). The last time I visited, I found Mom asleep. Her roommate, a fragile little 90-year-old, said excitedly, "Your mother tells me that you are going to marry the head doctor here."

I started to respond, "No." Then I looked her over. A kindly looking old lady. Somebody's mother. She might be suffering the same insecurities as Mom. What's the harm, I thought.

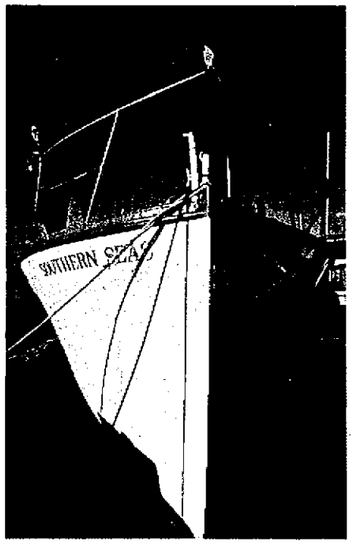

"Yes," I said. "I am."

Maybe the doctor has money. □

Casting off t[illegible]nchor

BY TOM WILLIAMS

What causes a guy to pack it in, literally sell the ground out from under himself — his $100,000 home — then buy a boat to move aboard?

Some suggest the answer lies somewhere between that drab freeway fencing and the 10 a.m. cup of corporate coffee. But whatever the wellsprings, Californians from Weed to National City are swapping their old brogans for some flashy deck shoes so as not to slip while grabbing for the gusto.

"Romance is always an element in the ambience of boating people, especially those who live aboard," says Eric Lucas, the 44-year-old director of the Long Beach Marina. "Almost all the people living aboard will tell you they have plans for that Big Trip. If they all actually tried it, you wouldn't be able to see the spindrift from the bowsprits. But you can't discount the dream. It's a part of the magic."

Tom McInturff, Long Beach harbor master, lived aboard his boat for 10 years.

"It's one of the most pleasant ways in the world to live," he says wistfully puffing his pipe. "Romance? Yes. Most Definitely. Life on the water is a life all its own. The peace and quiet is remarkable. At night you listen to the slap of the waves against her. You can even hear minute animals and shrimp eating the algae off the bottom. And when it rains there's that soft blanket covering the surface in absolute silence. It's not bad," he says reflecting out the window, "Not bad at all."

jawed Bostonian who's lived in Long Beach several years. He is also founding president of the Long Beach Marina Boatowners Association, and is extremely active in the Long Beach chapter of the U.S. Power Squadron.

It's hard to find a trace of understatement in those flat Boston tones when Mossy says, "A boat is one of the last vestiges of freedom left to modern man. When you're at the helm out there, you're another Columbus. A great feeling . . . "

Cliff Johnson is a 45-year-old poet-screen writer who lives aboard a 43-foot houseboat in a San Pedro marina. He describes himself as 75 per cent idealist and 25 per cent realist.

"I am most readily able to relate to myself when I'm on the water. I suppose you could call me romantic. I just like being able to step out and see the ocean. Living here is the best way to do it," says the man who gave up a thriving Long Beach furniture manufacturing business and a $100,000 home for poetry and a houseboat.

Boating people don't intrude

One of the spunkiest live aboards in the Long Beach Marina, must be 74-year-old Nancy Katin, who calls home a 66-foot cabin cruiser South Seas. She still puts in a full work week in her surf trunk manufacturing business in Huntington Beach — Kanvas by Katin, renown throughout the surfing communities of Australia, Puerto Rico and the United States for outstanding quality.

"Just call me Nancy," says the former vaudeville veteran of the Pantages and Orpheum circuits as she lights up a Pall Mall. "I've lived aboard since 1959 and I wouldn't live anywhere else. I know it's silly of me to live here maintenance-wise, but I just couldn't move. All the noise and traffic during the day at work presents such a constrast to the absolute peace and quiet of the boat. I had her dry docked for three weeks once, and I rented an apartment which nearly drove me mad with noise. Then, too, boating people are the nicest you'll find. They don't intrude, but when there's a problem they're right there to help."

So it seems most boating people entertain a form of enthusiasm about their lifestyle which spills over the brink into true belief. Yet argonauts from the most genteel of yachtsmen to the saltiest sea dog will tell you a boat is a very jealous mistress. And most of her demands come in the form of maintenance. McInturff estimates a man who lives aboard spends 12 hours in maintenance for every hour of boating. Yet maintenance connotes different things to the boating crowd than it does to your average householder. Kent, for instance, likes to call it "tender loving care." And William Goodman, executive secretary of the Long Beach Marina Boat Owner's Association, who with his wife Margaret and daughter Jo, live aboard a 43-foot cabin cruiser Margaret C (after the captain's lady), explains maintenance this way:

"Maintenance really is part of the life. There's no denying it. I don't look at it as a drawback though. It's all in the lifestyle. I'll be out doing my brightwork (varnishing Margaret C's mahogany) and one of the neighbors will

PATTERN is in, in the current era of home decor. Old rules about not using more than one print or pattern in a room have gone out the window, and many uninhibited homeowners enjoy a multiplicity of prints and patterns in lively, colorful rooms.

Pattern is very much "in" in carpeting, too, a trend enhanced by the new techniques that have brought a livelier range of patterns in broadloom as well as area rugs and "printed" carpets.

One thing that a patterened carpet can do is pull a room together even where there are many other prints or patterns in the furnishings. An overall geometric pattern or squares or "tiles" is especially effective as a unifier.

You'll find patterned carpets in just about any texture and length you like — even shags! And you can find patterned weaves in 100% wool, looped acrylic piles, tufted nylon. Some are available foam-backed to eliminate the need for separate padding. So if you feel like taking a leap into adventurous use of pattern, let a patterned carpet pull it all together!

And for the selection that will enable you to find just the perfect pattern, come in and look over our displays, where good design, quality and sensible prices go together. Visit our carpet center now — this week for sure.

stop by to borrow a wrench for his diesel. We'll start talking about my engine problems, exchanging stories and tips, and there you have it. We experience a camaraderie you just don't usually find ashore."

Frank Jensen manufactures surfboards in Newport Beach. He also owns and lives aboard a 90-foot gaffed Marconi schooner anchored next to John Wayne's Wild Goose in Newport Beach. The Ranger's interior is almost entirely lined with oak. The main salon evokes memories of Captain Nemo's private quarters. Jensen sits at the large oak table on plush burgundy couch, as sun from the skylight beams off the bottle of Coors in his hand.

"If you want to know what living aboard is like, it's problems on problems on problems," he says, casually brushing back long shocks of hair to keep them from mingling with his full beard. He looks like a young Buffalo Bill as he explains why he sold his house to move aboard.

"I was getting pretty stagnant. I was perfectly comfortable living on the beach, but things were just too easy. So I bought the Ranger and now we're preparing to sail her around the world. But a boat requires constant and often instant attention. For instance last night I was sound asleep when the bilge alarm went off. When that happens and you don't respond, you run the risk of waking up at the bottom," he smiles. "But we keep solving the little problems and I find I grow by coping."

The Long Beach Marina is home for 120 live aboards. According to Lucas, the marina's five basins which sport 1,847 berthings for pleasure vessels, is the world's largest publicly owned and operated facility of its kind. Many marinas are publicly owned, he explains, but private concessions provide daily services.

If there's any question about the popularity of the marina it is disspelled when you realize 10,000 people — the entire population of the City of Commerce — are waiting for a slip there. "The waiting time for smaller vessels is usually about five years, but with the larger vessels it can be up to 12 years. It's remarkable when you remember we had trouble filling all the berthings when we first opened in 1957," he adds.

Lucas' biggest problem with the live aboards is providing them with enough electricity. "When the marina was originally conceived in the late 1940's, no one dreamed what a prosperous future lay ahead for boating. At that time 15 amps per slip was indeed generous. But recently boat manufacturers have added extras and appliances which all take more electricity. And we began to suffer the effects."

Now provisions are being devised to remedy the situation and within the next five years the marina management hopes to begin modernizing electrical facilities to provide 30 amp hookups for boatmen.

The Long Beach Marina Boat Owner's Association enjoys excellent relations with the marina management, according to Mossy Kent. "You see, Eric has his own boat and he's done some extensive long distance sailing so he understands our problems first hand."

Sitting in his office, smoking a long panatela, Lucas looks more like a blue-eyed Errol Flynn than a man who worked his way up through the city's lifeguard service. He is explaining just what went wrong with that last long distance sailing trip he made.

"There were just the two of us, me and Shipwreck Harry. He got that name for a couple of incidents he was involved in subsequent to this trip. Well, we were sailing out of the South China Sea toward the Philippines June 9, 1960 when Typhoon Mary hit us. Winds gusted up to 120 miles an hour, we found out later. It was unbelievable. We were able to moor in a semi-sheltered cove, but debris was swirling around us. Shipwreck was straining to go forward and adjust the mooring line. He was hunched over close to the dock when a great gust hit him from behind. All he heard was a giant pop; he looked around and his oilcloth overcoat was gone, everything but the sleeves. He looked at me; he was white, real white. We decided to go below and wait it out — in total terror. We were finally rescued by a larger ship. The next morning, after it was all over, Harry and I were having a cup of coffee when I broke down and cried for 15 minutes. Frankly I was delighted to be alive."

Every sailor remembers his first storm and Frank Jensen has a scrap book filled with wire stories about his exploits off the Farallon Islands north of San Francisco.

William and Margaret in the galley

"We were all pretty freaked. There were eight of us when we got caught in a full gale. We were getting gusts of up to 65 miles per hour and the boat was awash in 25-foot waves. We carried on a bucket brigade for eight hours because our bilge pumps were broken. Finally a Coast Guard helicopter dropped us a pump but it broke down right away. We called for another pump and the Coast Guard finally towed us in.

"When it was over the sails looked like shredded wheat. We'd blown the drive shaft, ruptured the fuel tank and incurred about $1,000 damage. Two people had been throwing up blood and it took them two months to fully recover. A lot of excitement on that trip."

The California Department of Navigation and Ocean Development in Sacramento estimates show there are over 100,290 boats registered in Los Angeles County alone. Orange County boats number 37,940; San Diego County has 26,156 pleasure craft. According to Jim Matsueda, a planning supervisor at the department, statistics regarding the actual number of live aboards are kept at the local marinas. There are 84 marinas in Southern California alone. A spot check of marinas in the Long Beach area revealed Intra Leisure Marina at King Harbor in Redondo Beach has 199 people living aboard 99 vessels; California Yacht Anchorage has 18 live aboards in 350 berthings; Chuck Seffel of Bayshore Marina in Newport Beach estimates he has 40 live aboards among his 700 slips.

The Long Beach Marina has a yearly income of $1.6 million. Nearly $1.2 million comes from slip rentals. "This represents an increase of 30 per cent over last year. It's a big jump all at once," Lucas says. "But you have to realize it's only the third hike in prices since we opened." But even with the increases, Long Beach rates are lower than most other marinas with similar facilities, Lucas explains. He backs the claim by showing a world-record waiting list of 10,000.

Slips are rented on a monthly basis by the length of the boat or the slip, whichever is longer. They range from $1.55 per foot for boats or slips up to 29 feet; $1.70 up to 44 feet; and $1.80 for 45 feet and longer.

With so many people trying to get in, he confesses, some problems have arisen in the past. "We have rather strictly enforced rules now because of the phony partnerships that used to spring up so a boat owner could pass on his slip to the boat purchaser. He would retain a nominal 1 per cent in the boat and the title to the slip. But we had to crack down on that practice. Now it's strictly first come first serve. If we do get a complaint about an alleged violation, we conduct a full investigation and report our findings to the complaining party."

One problem almost all live aboards are able to mention is the lack of space dockside living affords.

Tracy Holcomb, 26, and her boyfriend Alan Helschein, 28, live on a 40-feet wooden yawl moored in San Pedro. The Fleetwood is constructed of beautiful Honduras mahogany, but the thing that irritates the San Francisco artist is the lack of space aboard.

"The boat is just too small for me," the pretty burnette complains. "We bought her thinking we would tear ourselves away from the rat race. Well, living on board in no way resembles living on land. But I gave up a lot of things to do it; my studio and working space to name a couple. Then, too, I feel that creating a pleasant environment helps me to work. But here," she says with an embracing gesture that touches opposite walls of her small galley at once, "here, I can't hang my pictures, and the only prospect antiques present is a hideous clutter." So romance dies a little in cramped quarters. "But don't get me wrong," she adds, "I wouldn't trade the experience for anything. I won't ever forget it." Their boat is now up for sale.

Lynn Schwartz is Tracy's neighbor. She and her husband Fred were formerly in the clothing business in Washington, D.C., before they bought their 75-foot tugboat she describes as "quasi-converted." After a year of living on board she too counts space — or the lack of it — as a big minus for boating. Then too "it's a real intense living experience on board," she says. "If you want to take off, you don't just jump in the car and leave home behind — you take it with you. So getting away means different things."

Margaret Goodman agrees "There's just not as much space on board as ashore, but you get used to it." Her husband goes her one better and talks about tight space as another chance to convert a liability into an asset. "Sure, even when Margaret has to get down on her knees to get something out of the reefer (refrigerator), or when I have to stand on my head to fill the batteries with water, I just consider it part of the inconvenience that will keep us young longer."

The Sal DiSimone's have had a special problem with space during their many years living aboard. When they first moved aboard their 40-footer they had children. "But when the others came along we just had to have a bigger boat. We now live on a 60-foot cabin cruiser, and we brought the last four children right from the hospital on board." The DiSimones are busy remodeling their boat for the third time. "Actually we're doing a lot of different things. But one of the main reasons we're remodelling is to utilize more locker (closet) space."

Raising infants around the dock can be a dangerous business and Mrs. DiSimone says her children grew up in lifejackets. Unconventional perhaps, but no more so than her attending a diesel mechanic course at Long Beach City College.

"I was the only girl in the class," she says, "but everyone helped me and now I know just as much as my husband about these big engines."

She likes her waterside life. "It's just like a little watergarden outside; shorebirds hunting for fish, new neighbors all the time, and when the tide is out the seawall next to our slip is alive with sea creatures. The youngest four children have never lived in a house and I wouldn't blame them if they wanted to try it for a while, but my husband and I are very happy where we are. I wouldn't trade it."

The live aboards in the Long Beach Marina say they enjoy a warm feeling of security there. With a 24-hour security force of 16 men and a patrol boat, Lucas estimates the marina's theft and vandalism rate to be among the lowest in California. "In fact we rely heavily on live aboards to help us with security problems. Our men often act on tips phoned in by live aboards who keep a sharp eye out for strangers on the docks. Then, too, they give us a lot of help watching for unusual occurrences like fire, and when storm warning are out they'll help us secure many boats in the marina."

Mossy Kent speaks for the Long Beach Boat Owners Association when he explains his attitude toward live aboards. "Non-live aboards are glad to have them watching the docks. They know right away when something is awry and they act quickly to prevent major damage when something comes up."

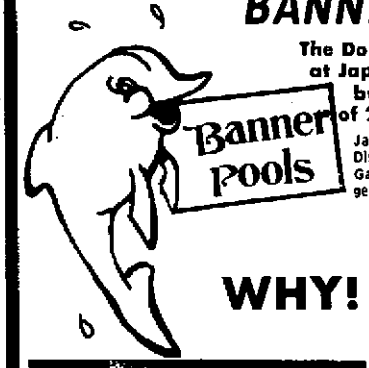

Foster James, president of California Yacht Anchorage, agrees having live aboards in a marina is a great boon to any security force. "They are able to spot trouble which might otherwise go undetected but for their being there."

William Goodman articulates the sentiments of most seafaring suburbanites. Sitting in his main salon watching a rose-colored sunset paled with neighboring masts and spangled with swooping gulls, he speaks of moving ashore.

"Yes . . . I do have plans for moving ashore — just as soon as I get too weak and decrepit to push a wheelchair up the gangplank!" □

The doctor is "in"

By JOANNE NORRIS

"I have lived life not wasting a moment. . ."

It's a statement not many people can make with conviction, but Dr. Elizabeth Mason Hohl, fast approaching her 84th birthday and still on the job as administrator of Los Angeles' Cancer Detection Center, can . . . and does.

Dr. Hohl had been practicing medicine for 57 years when she went into semi-retirement two years ago after a stroke. She still appears daily to head the center which she helped found in 1944. But after her illness, she reluctantly packed away her practice — along with memories stretching back to the days of the Hupmobile when she bounced through blizzard and dust storm to doctor the Nebraska farmers of a long-gone era.

Dr. Hohl grew up in Beaver City, Neb., where each Sunday she'd deliver homemade vanilla pudding to an ill neighbor. "He'd always eat it so eagerly, but it would run out the side of his face where he had a hole because of cancer of the jaw. It made a great impression on me.

"I also remember a woman in town, the mother of six little children, who died of cancer . . . I went to her funeral and I can still remember her lying there with quarters on her eyes . . . Later the brother of a friend died of cancer too . . . and I wondered, why did this little boy have to die?"

Her concern was translated into action when, at the height of her medical career, she and Dr. Catherine Ohnemuller, another Los Angeles doctor, the late Mrs. Queen Walker Boardman, and a number of volunteers, went through the Los Angeles phone book soliciting contributions to establish a cancer detection center.

"Not everybody sent us money," recalls the still erect and alert Dr. Hohl. "But a lot of people did. We rented a room in the Bradbury Building and with a paragraph of publicity in the Los Angeles Herald, announced we were prepared to examine presumably well persons to find cancers in case they had them. The first day we were so swamped, we gave 56 people appointments, rented eight more rooms, got nurses and doctors and lay assistance and were in business. Then they decided to convert the fourth floor, where we were, to a brassiere factory, so we moved to a 32-room building at Eighth and Hoover. In 1950 the state wanted that property for a lateral for the then new Harbor Freeway. We bought land at Third and Loma and built the present three-story brick building for $285,000."

Grand opening was October 1951 with Dr. Hohl as secretary-treasurer and clinic administrator and a staff of 100.

At that time Dr. Hohl had been practicing since 1916, an eventful year in which she both married and began her medical career in the town of McCook, Neb., population 10,000.

There was one 78-year-old doctor in town and a nose and throat specialist who didn't practice much, so the young doctor, fresh out of the University of Nebraska medical school, was kept busy, first in horse and buggy, then in rented cars, covering the countryside for a 40-mile radius.

Her career was the culmination of a determination born when she was five. During an institute to train kindergarten teachers, she was chosen, with a dozen other tots, to participate in a practice group for the trainees. The leader was an Iowan who, 65 years later, was attended by Dr. Hohl when the women died in the Century Plaza Hotel.

In the practice group the young Elizabeth got to portray the matron, nurse and doctor of a doll hospital. "Then and there I decided I was going to be a doctor. I had never known a woman doctor and wouldn't see one until I went to the university in 1909, 14 years later." Meantime she cut up snakes to find out what was inside and insisted on cleaning the chickens for dinner. "I had an unbounded curiosity about people, always wishing I could help them. I got my chance when an elderly lady in our neighborhood died and the undertaker had me stuff her orifices with cotton."

Doctor

A friend lauded the curative powers of dead cats and 'sheep button' tea

During this time she was threatened with some unusual treatments herself. Her mother's friend Mary Fultz spoke highly of the curative powers of dead cats. When Elizabeth developed an intestinal inflammation, the neighborly Mrs. Fultz urged Mrs. Mason to dispatch the Masons' cat Gypsy, skin it and put the still warm wet side of the fur on the aching abdomen and to administer, in addition, some sheep "button" tea. "I knew there were no sheep around so I wasn't fearful of that, but I was scared to death about the cat. I hid him under the covers for days until the poor creature got constipation, because I feared he would end up on my ailing stomach."

In 1907 Elizabeth was graduated from Beaver City High School and the next fall and winter she taught school in the country, living at an aunt's. The following winter she taught in a consolidated school at Hollinger, Neb., residing with a family with two little boys. "I slept with the oldest one, waking up each morning in a bed which he had irrigated every night."

In June 1909 she entered the University of Nebraska to accumulate enough credits to enter pre-medical school, which she did the following fall, the only girl in a class of 36 men. Her bachelor Uncle Joe disowned her at the time, claiming the only reason a woman would become a doctor was to do abortions.

Another girl joined the class in 1911 and she and Elizabeth with two male colleagues, shared a cadaver. The cadaver was one Shorty Gray, a notorious murderer who had been incarcerated in the state penitentiary just outside Lincoln. One Easter he escaped with a gun, killed a farmer, his wife and four children driving in a wagon to church, murdered two men who came after him and was finally shot through the heart by a posse. His body was turned over to the medical school and the four students spent months dissecting him.

To support herself, Elizabeth worked at a s shoe store. She was active in the YWCA, was associate editor of the Daily Nebraskan and still had time to go dancing. While on the dance floor, she discovered one partner had a peculiar heart beat. He was dead a week later.

After four years in Lincoln, the class moved on to Omaha for its clinical work.

"On Saturday mornings we did dog surgery. I had a mongrel collie who, under anesthesia, survived a series of surgical procedures. I became so fond of her, I gave her my lunches. It was difficult for me to finally remove a lung, let her come out of her anesthetic, breathe for an hour and then be put to sleep forever. That last session was a heartbreak."

During their training the students had to assist with 150 postmortems. They were always done at night in the filthy backquarters of an undertaker's and always without rubber gloves. "How I dreaded them. It really was eerie, but I never backed down."

During this time Dr. Hohl was called to a bordello at midnight. Leaving after treating one of the girls, she ran into a policeman who stopped her, but spying her medical bag, said, "Never fear going any place with that. No one will ever bother you." "I believed that through my 57 years of practice."

The senior medical students were allotted county hospital surgical cases to work on before the rest of the class. When Elizabeth's case was wheeled in, she had a hard time containing herself. "The patient was a black, peg-legged, undernourished man with huge gangrenous hemorrhoids. I learned serendipity there and proceeded to relieve the man of his trouble.

"Next morning when I made a visit to my patient, an intern met me with, 'Too bad, your patient died last night.' He hadn't though and I knew then that I could do hemorrhoids."

In June 1915, with the men off to Europe, Dr. Hohl moved to Nebraska Methodist Deaconess Hospital where she had an internship all to herself. Her day began at 5 when she made several rounds. She finished at 7:30 a.m., in time to be the first assistant to the chief surgeon of the Union Pacific Railroad with whom she operated steadily, with a brief break at noon, until 2 p.m. Then she made rounds with other doctors and did histories, physicals, wrote orders and progress notes.

"It was a 22-hour a day job which I willingly did for my room, laundry and three poor meals a day — no money — but it was a great opportunity to learn all that was known in 1915-16 from men we rightly considred giants in medicine"

In 1915 a Mr. Leonard Hohl of Albion, Nev., was brought to the hospital for prostate surgery. With him came his wife and son, Harrison. They were there about five weeks and although Elizabeth had few extra hours, she found herself wearing an engagement ring at Christmas and being married the following June. The couple moved to McCook where Harrison Hohl was in the cotton goods business.

"The doctors of the area were off at war so I was practically the only hope for the sick ... In the summer the heat and dust were terrible, but the winters were worse — no bottoms to the roads, rain, blizzards and deep snows came with temperatures of 15 below zero.

"Typhoid fever struck the German people of the town, measles came to young and old, and babies were a constant crop."

Once after a dinner party for 24 at her home, Dr. Hohl was called out for a delivery, 10 miles south of town in a blizzard. "Near 3 a.m., with the baby and mother safe, the driver and I left. About a mile from the house, the wind blew the car off the road. The driver walked back to the house and a team of horses was brought to get us back on the road. Five miles farther and again we were blown off the road.

"We saw a light in a farmhouse ahead. The driver walked to the house to find the farmer in bed with pneumonia and his wife fixing an onion poultice for his chest. No help there, so we had to abandon the car and walk ahead to a country school house against a blizzard so strong that I was coughing blood with each breath.

"The teacher had wood in a box by the stove so we burned the wood, thawed out and waited until mid-forenoon the next day. The farmer had told a neighbor about our predicament and he had gone home and called the garage to come out and get us. He came in a Ford truck with no windshield. That time I froze my hands, feet and cheeks and had chilblains for the next year. I didn't get paid for the delivery either."

On another trip Dr. Hohl accidentally ran over the finger of her driver, who was attempting to apply tire chains, severing the digit completely. Fortunately, she had antiseptic left over from a delivery and administered it to the bleeding stub.

During Prohibition she carried a .22 caliber gun but never had to use it.

"One night, when I was tired to death, the doorbell rang. There was a rum runner who had been shot in the ankle. I brought him in, removed the bullet, took him to the hospital and called the police. A 24-hour watch was posted at his door. Six days later, the night my mother died of pneumonia, he eluded the police and disappeared."

In 1919 Dr. Hohl went to Babies Hospital in New York City to spend time with a famed physician, only to discover that she had tuberculosis. She rested more, ate more and got over it.

In the fall of 1923, after eight and a half years of marriage, Dr. Hohl discovered she was pregnant. "Without doubt that winter was the toughest of my eight years of practice. Kidney stones to be releived miles in the country in a deep snow, a forearm deeply lacerated by a plowshare, a child practically scalped by a runaway team he was driving while harrowing a field, instrument deliveries, pregnant unmarried girls with homes to find for the babies. But I took care of them all. I kept quiet about my own condition though many times I stopped the car to take care of my vomiting."

Late the next spring the Hohls moved to Los Angeles where the baby was born on Aug. 12. He is now Los Angeles orthopedist, Dr. Mason Hohl.

His mother first resumed her practice in the Chinese community around Alameda and Apablasa streets, a veritable incubator. She was kept nearly as busy going to banquets to celebrate the babies' births as she was delivering them.

In 1933 Dr. Hohl divorced her husband. "I had evolved from a long line of bachelors and the bachelor life was for me," she says.

Her life, outside her practice, got busier and busier. For four years she was president of the Medical Women's Society of Los Angeles County. In 1933 she joined the Hollywood Academy of Medicine, where she was the only woman member for 35 years. In 1940-41 she was president of the American Medical Women's Association. In 1941 she became editor of the Medical Woman's Journal, a job she held for 10 years. Sandwiched among these activities were a number of trips throughout the world. She is still active in the Pan-American Medical Women's Alliance, a group of North and South American women physicians she helped found. She's planning to attend the alliance's 1975 gathering in Ecuador.

Doctor

She also founded the Physicians Aid Society, which was incorporated in 1941 and provides both a home at 3500 W. Adams and a sanitarium a block away for ill doctors, their wives and children.

Dr. Hohl was serving on 22 committees when she suffered her stroke. She was attending a committee meeting of the Los Angeles County Medical Association when she was stricken. She drove herself home and not until the next morning did she call for help. She spent the next two weeks in St. John's Hospital.

That first morning in the hospital she was called on to sign the death certificate of a patient. Grasping one hand with the other, she demonstrated how laborious it was. She shows no visible signs of the stroke now, but it ended her active practice.

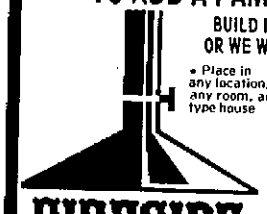

"I was delivering babies and everything right up until that time," she says, confessing that she misses it. "But 57 years ... maybe that's enough." Her expressive face crinkles in a rueful smile.

"I don't talk as fast as I once did," she continues, describing the aftermath of the stroke and talking quite rapidly. But she takes the stairs a little slowly as she guides a visitor on a tour of the center, opening doors, pulling out file drawers containing 30 year's of glass Pap smear slides.

Other rooms are devoted to X-ray records and other medical data (with red tags flapping on the files of cancer victims), on the thousands who have come through the center. Movie actors, TV commentators, writers and countless others. People have come from as far away as New York and South America.

What they get at the center, for $36 for women and $26 for men, is a complete cancer check-up plus lab procedures. This includes a chest X-ray, a blood count, urinalysis, stool exam, Pap smear and a biopsy of any suspicious tissue. The procedure takes two to three hours and anyone may call for an appointment. processes about 40 people a day. Reports are sent to private physicians. Dr. Hohl says the center doesn't treat patients and she has never seen anyone who has gone through it in her private practice.

The center functions without assistance from the American Cancer Society or any government agency. Support comes mostly from individuals. People have remembered it in their wills, and each board member makes a minimum $1,000 contribution. The center gets additional financial support through designations from United Crusade and AID. When donors designate it as the recipient of their contributions, their exams are free.

There are 35 paid physicians on the center staff who come in for several hours a week. Dr. Hohl is there from 9:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. An early riser, she fixes her own breakfast in her apartment on Wilshire Boulevard in Westwood. (She sold her 14-room house several years ago.) It's always the same meal: a packet of instant cream of wheat, coffee and a glass of Tang. She lunches at the center coffee shop and has dinner occasionally at the restaurant in her apartment building. She's in bed by 8:30.

She relaxes with gardening and oil painting and some of her paintings grace the center's walls. Orchid raising is a long-time hobby.

When people comment —as they inevitably do— that she has, indeed, had a full life, she nods.

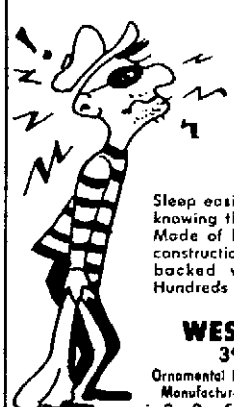

"Yes, I have. And I hope there's a lot more to come." □

WORKSHOP

RACK 'EM UP IN STYLE

BY STEVE ELLINGSON

Pool, as everybody knows, has become America's most popular indoor sport. Up to now, the one drawback has been the cost of a professional table for the home. If this has been your problem, fret no more. Here's an easily built, high-quality pool table that you can own without hocking the family jewels.

As you know, the heavier the table, the better the play. This is especially true with regards to the cushion and rails. A light-weight table acts like the shock absorber of a car. Under impact it gives slightly, thus cutting down on the rebound of the ball. The table shown here has extra heavy rails to solidly support the rubber cushion for maximum efficiency.

The ball return system employed here is similar to that found on tables costing a thousand dollars or more. The center tunnel feature allows for a shallow apron design, thus eliminating the heavy bulky look found on tables with a side tunnel construction.

The pattern's easy-to-understand directions and pictures guide you every step of the way. A list of needed materials is included.

To obtain the easy-to-follow pool table pattern No. 417, send $2 (add 25 cents for airmail) by currency, check or money order to:

Miller's Carpet Cleaning has been cleaning carpets in the southland area for 17 years. The steam clean method is by far the best method because the soil is extracted, not scrubbed deeper. "Steam clean freshens and re-news carpets which seem hopelessly matted and soiled, gives new life to your carpet." Our method is absolutely safe for all carpets. We combine the best of both methods, first we shampoo the carpet to loosen all the dirt, then we steam it to extract all possible soil from the carpet. Miller's is having a summer special of any 2 rooms and hall for only $39.95. For the best in carpet and upholstery cleaning call Miller's at (213) 531-0593.

GOURMET GUIDE

by JACK O. BALDWIN

When selecting pork spareribs at the meat counter, buy the back ribs, they are more tender and have more meat between ribs. When buying beef ribs look for the marbling.

This advice comes from John Choura, a master butcher, who spent 23 years in the retail meat business in Lakewood before opening the Gourmet Galley, a catering service, sandwich house and delicatessen located on the traffic circle on the Los Coyotes Diagonal in Long Beach.

"And only buy Choice USDA meal," John urges. That is what he buys when restocking his large deli case.

John and his son Jim opened the Galley four years ago July 3 and since have built a highly successful business and reputation as gourmet caterers to cocktail parties, wedding and receptions, dinners and buffets, sales promotions, executive luncheons, open houses, retirement parties and luaus, or any other occasion.

The Chouras can provide hors d'oeuvres with a relish tray for 10, buffet entrees, a gourmet combination (for parties of eight or more), or a hot entree (for parties of 15 or more) delivered, set-up and served by expert help under the supervison of Mrs. Choura personally.

Prices range from $7.50 for a tray that will serve 10 to full dinners priced from as low as $3 per person. Full dinner entrees include New York strip steak, barbecued beef, turkey, chicken Tetrazini, beef Stroganoff, chicken Hawaiian and chicken almondine.

There is inside seating at the Galley for 30 and on the patio seating for 35. The galley is open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and is closed Sundays.

JOHN CHOURA
Serves only choice

"Get your elbows off the table," my mother used to admonish me. But occasionally would forget and still do. I forgot about her attempt to give me good manners the other evening when we dined at one of Belmont Shore's most popular restaurants, Kelly's — spelled with a backward "K." One of the niceties I learned about Kelly's is that Bill Thompson and his wife Marguerite put cushions under their tablecloths. There are other niceties at Kelley's, not the least of which are Bill and Marguerite themselves. They are friendly outgoing people and so is their 22-year-old daughter Tomi, who serves as a hostess weekends. They want patrons to be served a good meal prepared from only high quality meats and vegetables. Proof that they adhere to this policy is the fact that nearly every night the 80-seat house is filled to capacity.

BILL THOMPSON
Quality first

CARICATURES BY BILL BUERGE

Because we were in the Naples area I elected to have Madaglione di Napoli, cuts of filet mignon sauteed in wine sauce, with fresh mushrooms and Italian herbs and vino Marsala. My wife selected Piatto Roman Rossi, choice sirloin of beef, grilled with thin slices of ham and eggplant, topped with ortega chili and melted Cheloma and splashed with Burgundy. Both priced at $6 were excellent.

But before our entree arrived I chose to have a cup of clam chowder. It was hot, thick and far from skimpy on clam meat. My wife ordered the tossed green salad which arrived chilled, diced and covered with tangy (I tasted it) Roquefort dressing sprinkled with freshly ground black pepper.

Being near the ocean, Kelly's naturally has a variety of seafood offerings, nine in all, ranging in price for $5 for shrimp, scallops, filet of sole, halibut, or boneless trout to stuffed abalone at $7.25.

Kelly's, 5716 E. Second St., opens at 4 p.m. weekdays serving dinner to 11:15 p.m. and Sundays to 10:30 p.m. They serve cocktails, too.

Medicine & You

Medical-Science Editor

The man who developed the first Pill believes it has been a major factor in the rise of women's lib.

Prof. Carl Djerassi, Stanford University chemist who synthesized the first oral contraceptive in 1951, says:

"Nothing has had a bigger impact on the emancipation of women and on the fostering and stimulation of women's rights.

"Suddenly, in many places, women have come into control of their own fertility and have been able to make a decision that previously had been left up to men or to chance."

Djerassi expressed his opinion in a report written for Prism, a publication of the American Medical Association.

He acknowledged that women's lib is critical of the Pill. He believes the reason is that women are concerned about the Pill's potential side effects and feel its use is dominated by men who don't want to experiment on themselves.

"Perhaps a fraction of this is true," he says. "But on the whole I think it's baloney."

New York researchers are attempting to work out a laboratory blood test that will indicate the presence of life-threatening lung clots.

The dangerous condition is technically known as pulmonary embolism — lodging of a clot in the pulmonary artery.

Medical investigators at New York's Downstate Medical Center say that the enzyme guanyl cyclase is an enzyme normally abundant in every person's lungs.

But an increase in its concentration in a blood sample indicates presence of a blood clot in the lung area.

They reported their finding to a meeting of the American Federation for Clinical Research, and details have been published in Medical World News, a newsmagazine for physicians.

Mercury continues to be ignored as a hazard, says an authority on occupational medicine.

Dr. J. M. Harrington of the London school of hygiene and tropical medicine notes that mercury is widely used in apparatus for analyzing gas in liquids. This equipment is commonly used in hospitals, Dr. Harrington says.

Poor laboratory technique using this apparatus can result in markedly increased levels of environmental mercury, a new study shows.

Workers exposed to potential mercury risk should be examined by a physician at regular intervals, preferably every six months, the doctor says.

Mercury poisoning can lead to soreness of gums, loosening of teeth, abdominal griping, diarrhea and several other symptoms. There also can be paralysis, weakness and death, reports the journal Lancet.

Elderly cigarette smokers in the 65-84 range are no more likely to develop coronary heart disease than those who have quit smoking.

So says Carl C. Seltzer, Ph. D., a senior research associate in biologic anthropology at Harvard school of public health.

Dr. Seltzer reported to a meeting of the Gerontological Society that four studies indicate there are no appreciable excess risks of death from coronary heart disease among elderly persons who continue to smoke cigarettes.

Among elderly women, there is some evidence of a trend toward lower coronary heart disease rate in cigarette smokers as compared to former cigarette smokers.

The report is in Medical Tribune, a newspaper for physicians.

Carbon monoxide inhalation can kill during a major fire even if the victim doesn't go near the flames.

Consequently, burn and smoke victims of disastrous fires should be treated immediately with oxygen, a University of Chicago study suggests. The treatment should be done at the site of the fire if possible.

Researchers, reporting in Archives of Surgery, state:

"It is not usually appreciated that significant blood levels of carbon monoxide occur in many individuals who survive exposure to fire."

The level of carbon monoxide in the blood can be determined by a laboratory test. One of the researchers comments: "Many people brought in from a fire are excited and it is difficult to evaluate carbon monoxide poisoning without a specific test."

Ten per cent of seemingly benign stomach ulcers are actually ulcerating stomach cancers, says a noted surgeon.

Dr. Israel Penn of the University of Colorado Medical Center, Denver, says that physicians must be aggressive in their evaluation and follow-up of suspected gastric ulcer.

Using the flexible fiberoptic gastroscope, physicians can examine ulcers in practically any area of the stomach, he points out.

In addition, the doctor can take biopsy material (tissue for microscopic examination) to see if an area is benign or malignant. Also, cell studies of gastric secretions can be conducted in the evaluation process.

Duodenal ulcers, those of the first portion of the small intestine, don't hold the same threat. This type of peptic ulcer rarely turns into cancer, the report says.

Details are in Family Practice News, a newspaper for physicians.

JOAN AND TED KENNEDY

Q. If Ted Kennedy runs for the Presidency, isn't he sure to drive his wife Joan back into the sanitarium? —E.L., Boston, Mass.

A. Joan Kennedy, married to Ted Kennedy since 1958, is basically an insecure young woman surrounded by Kennedys who are not. She is also a woman of beauty and character. Whether she has the strength to become and endure as a President's wife, no one knows. Being the wife of an American politician is frequently an unbearable strain calling for psychiatric help. Vice President Gerald Ford's wife has had such help. Joan Kennedy has gone to psychiatrists. So, too, have the wives of other politicians who feel that they are always on exhibition, always used, always living in fear that they will say or do something which will adversely affect their husbands' careers. Note, if you will, how few substantive topics Mrs. Nixon discusses. Over the years she has learned that silence is the best armor for a politician's wife. But the price of silence is frequently frustration, and the price of frustration is frequently neurosis.

Q. Many Israelis believe that the Arabs plan to attack them again and destroy their country. What U.S. guarantees or concessions have Kissinger and Nixon made to the Israelis that this won't happen?—Hy Cohen, Miami Beach, Fla.

A. Undoubtedly Kissinger and Nixon assured the Israelis that the U.S. would supply them with long-term economic, arms, and nuclear assistance to prevent the annihilation of their country. As to the details of their commitments, we will have to wait until they are submitted to the Congress either for approval or funding.

Q. I note that Paramount Pictures plans to do a motion picture on the life of the late Louis Armstrong. Who will play Armstrong?—Benjamin Davis, Mobile, Ala.

A. A Paramount project Satchmo is in the discussion stage. Possibilities for the leading role are Sammy Davis Jr., Sidney Poitier, James Earl Jones.

Q. Isn't it a fact that Aristotle Onassis is secretly under the care of the great heart surgeon Dr. Michael De Bakey, and that Onassis quietly sneaks into Houston for treatment from time to time?—Cynthia Curtis, Ft. Worth, Tex.

A. Onassis is not under Dr. De Bakey's care at this time. Neither does he sneak into Houston. Onassis has sought Dr. De Bakey's medical advice in the past, and the physician has given it. But Onassis at this writing is not suffering from coronary heart disease as rumored.

Q. Is singer Tom Jones really leaving his wife for Marji Wallace, Peter Revson's old girlfriend who was fired as Miss World?—Jane Cameron, North Las Vegas, Nev.

A. Jones is one of Miss Wallace's closest friends, but he is not leaving his wife for her at this time.

CLOSE FRIENDS TOM JONES AND MARJI WALLACE

Q. Was Leonard Firestone appointed U.S. Ambassador to Belgium because he took care of President Nixon's kid brother Ed through the Nixon Foundation, which he heads? How much did Firestone contribute to the Nixon campaign?—J.H., Los Angeles, Calif.

A. Leonard Firestone contributed $110,000 to the 1972 Nixon campaign, also saw to it that Nixon's younger brother was employed for a while by the Nixon Foundation as a site scout. At Firestone's confirmation hearing, Sen. John Sparkman (D., Ala.) asked: "Certainly no contribution you made had any connection whatsoever with your appointment?" Replied Firestone: "No." Between 1970 and 1974 Firestone, his wife, children, and brothers contributed approximately $240,000 to various Republican political campaigns.

Q. The late Tyrone Power, surely one of the handsomest actors in Hollywood history, had two daughters by Linda Christian. What's happened to them? —Claire Eubanks, Evansville, Ind.

A. Romina, 22, is married to Italian pop singer Al Bano, has two daughters. Her sister, Taryn Power, 20, is steady-dating Kocis Bano, Al's brother. Both girls live in Rome as does their mother who wanted her daughters to become film stars.

Q. When Martha Mitchell traveled with her husband, John, is it true that she used the name Doris Kalmbach?—Louise Henry, Costa Mesa, Calif.

A. No, Martha Mitchell used her own name. The only time she used the Kalmbach name was when Herbert Kalmbach, President Nixon's personal lawyer, registered her under a false name at a hospital in Newport Beach, Calif. That was on June 21, 1972. As Martha recalls the incident, she was being held captive by her bodyguard, Steve King, in the Newport Inn. It was four days after the Watergate break-in had occurred in Washington, D.C. Her husband had flown back to take charge of the mess. Martha says she was plied with liquor, sedated, then engaged in a fight with her bodyguard. In the melee which followed she jerked her hand through a glass window. Someone, she doesn't know who, then called Herb Kalmbach. He took her to a local hospital, had her registered under the Kalmbach name. The physician who treated her, however, recognized her. "For God's sake, Martha!" he exclaimed. "What are you doing here?" Martha Mitchell held up her bleeding hand.

William Colby and his wife Barbara are the only children in their respective families. As a result of childhood loneliness, they opted for a large family. They had five children, four of whom are still living: Jonathan, 27; Carl, 23; Paul, 18, and Christine, 14.

William Colby, New Director of the CIA: He's Changing the Agency's Image

by Lloyd Shearer

WASHINGTON, D.C.

The Central Intelligence Agency is suffering from a badly tarnished image, and its new director, William Egan Colby, 54, is charged with burnishing it.

This is no easy job, since over the years the CIA has generated on the domestic front a closed, mysterious, excessively secretive and sinister image. It has also violated the legislation of its origin.

Created in 1947 specifically to gather "Foreign Intelligence," it has intervened in American student organizations. It has trained about 50 police officers from a dozen American cities in intelligence theory and technique.

And worse yet, from a public relations viewpoint, it has stupidly involved itself in the domestic scandals of the Nixon Administration by furnishing equipment to E. Howard Hunt Jr. to help break into and burglarize the Beverly Hills office of Dr. Lewis Fielding, psychiatrist of Daniel Ellsberg of Pentagon Papers notoriety.

The CIA also provided Hunt with false identity equipment so that he could fly to Denver and try to talk Dita Beard into denying that she ever wrote the infamous ITT memo, coupling a favorable anti-trust Justice Department ruling with the promise of a $400,000 contribution to the Republican campaign fund of 1972. Moreover, it allowed its personnel to prepare a psychological profile on Ellsberg for the White House.

Leading participants

And two of its former employees, E. Howard Hunt and James McCord, were leading characters in the Watergate fiasco, to say nothing of the four Cuban-Americans who were hired to do the actual dirty work.

Overseas, of course, where most of its clandestine as well as overt activities take place, the CIA has hired mercenaries in Southeast Asia, overflown the Soviet Union, dropped agents into Red China, structured its own airline out of Taiwan, conspired to overthrow various regimes in various parts of the world from Iran to Cambodia to Cuba, and in general, has consistently intervened in the domestic affairs of foreign nations.

With that agency background of controversial hits and misses, Director Colby has his image-changing work cut out for him. He is approaching it with care and vigor. He is inviting newsmen to lunch with him, to ask questions, to visit CIA headquarters in Langley, Va., where the access road now bears a sign, plainly lettered CIA. It used to say Bureau of Public Roads. He even allowed PARADE to interview his wife, the former Barbara Heinzen, a delightful woman with printer's ink in her blood who helped put him through Columbia University Law School by working as a department store copywriter and editor of a New York State labor publication. Soft-speaking and low-key, Colby, a 24-year unpretentious veteran of the spy business, believes in opening up the CIA without disclosing its secrets.

He is allowing the TV networks to take a guided tour of the agency. He is permitting his men to identify themselves over the telephone instead of switching the caller to an extension number. He is preparing succinct intelligence summaries instead of ponderous, bulky reports and forwarding them to interested parties with a phone number to call in case they need more detailed information.

Conscious of public opinion

He is aware of the mounting public criticism which holds that his 16,000-man agency is spending approximately $750 million of the taxpayers' money each year without enough public accountability through the various Congressional subcommittees charged with tracking the CIA. And he is mindful of inadequacies in the agency's recruiting program, especially of minorities.

"What we're looking for," he explains, "are young men and women who are interested in intellectual and technical pursuits. Intelligence is technical these days. We're in the market for something like 130 specialist disciplines, running all the way from nuclear physicists to financial economists. We need every kind of specialty to help in our total intelligence process.

"We especially need women and blacks. We don't have enough of them as professional intelligence officers. A few months ago I gathered together all the middle managers in the agency and I gave them a very direct talk. I told them I wanted to see the number of blacks and the number of women in responsible jobs rise sharply.

Opportunity and challenge

"We also need," Colby concedes, "some fellows who will run some clandestine operations for us. They have to be fellows with a little bit of adventure in their spirit and frequently quite a lot of courage. But I'm not going around saying, 'Join the CIA instead of the Fish and Wildlife Service.' And I'm not going around saying, 'Join the CIA and save the world.' People who want an interesting, fascinating challenging career can find it in the CIA, and that includes those who are more student than activist, those who are more activist than student, those who are more the engineer than liberal art buff. We're wide open for the person who believes we have an essential function to perform."

According to Colby, the primary function of the CIA is apple-pie simple: "We gather information from all over the world in order to learn as much as we can about foreign problems so that we can decide what to do about them.

"We have various ways of gathering information—reading newspapers, taking photographs, listening to electronic noises in the atmosphere, and employing clandestine activity where it's essential. We gather the information, analyze it, think about it, come to some judgment or estimate the situation and relay it to the national leadership, executive, legislative, and indirectly, even to the public so that the U.S. can make informed judgments and decisions."

Colby, who will finish his first year as director of the CIA on Sept. 4 this year, believes the agency is indispensable, "because I do not think the U.S. today can afford the luxury of being blind in the world or of hoping to learn enough of what's going on through the public press and other media."

He knows, he says, that the U.S. has no intention of invading the Soviet Union and is sure the Soviet Union has no intention of invading us. "But I think the Soviet Union has a philosophy which holds that America is run by an imperialist conspiracy, a class society and that there must be, according to their doctrine, a revolution, a change in our society.

"It's a religious belief, and from time to time the Soviets have engaged in the process of trying to encourage it along.

"America has gotten into several wars in this century, started by people who thought we either would not or could not stand up to them. Kaiser Wilhelm thought we would not join World War I. Adolf Hitler was quite certain that we would stay out of World War II. Josef Stalin thought we would not fight in Korea and Ho Chi Minh certainly felt we could not stop his effort to take over South Vietnam. Where people realized we not only could but would fight—for example, in the Berlin Crisis, the Cuban Missile Crisis—we have had no war. Having a CIA is like having insurance. You pay for it, but hopefully it's worth it."

Head of 'black operations'

Bill Colby, 5 feet 11, thin, trim, with pale blue myopic eyes helped by glasses, is a lawyer by training. He looks like a lawyer, also like a teacher, a minister, a banker, a doctor, anything except what he is—the nation's chief spooksman who for years was deputy director of the CIA's clandestine or "black operations" directorate.

He was born in St. Paul, Minn., in 1920, the only child of Elbridge Colby, an Army officer. He was reared at various Army posts, spent three years of his youth (1929-32) in Tientsin, China, entered Princeton in 1936 and was graduated four years later. He entered Columbia University Law School but left after his first year to join the parachute corps.

"He had to memorize the eye chart in order to get in," his wife reveals. "But he memorized one line backwards. When he took the eye test, he cited the letters incorrectly. He wanted so badly to get in, however, that they looked the other way and the examining officer said, 'So long as you can see the ground we'll take you.'"

Colby served as a staff lieutenant in the 462nd Parachute Artillery Battalion (he had attended the ROTC at Princeton) and was fired when a new commander joined the 462nd and replaced the old staff with a new one. Lieutenant Colby found himself in a replacement pool, which he didn't like. When an officer came through, looking for volunteers for an overseas operation, code-named JEDBURGH, he quickly volunteered, thus becoming a member of Gen. William Donovan's intelligence service, the Office of Strategic Services. As a member of the JED's, Colby parachuted in uniform to help resistance groups in France during the weeks following the Allied landing.

continued

Colby was sworn in as director of the CIA on Sept. 4, 1973. He is the second career intelligence officer to achieve that rank. The first was Richard Helms who is now our ambassador to Iran. Looking on at the White House ceremony are President Richard Nixon, former Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Adm. Thomas Moorer, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Secretary of Defense James Schlesinger, and Colby's wife.

CIA CONTINUED

He was so cool and outstanding in action that he was chosen despite his young age, 24, to command a group of Norwegian-American paratroopers charged with sabotaging German railway operations in Norway. According to Harris Smith, an historian of the OSS: "The drop was finally made from American aircraft staffed by inexperienced crews in late March, 1945. Two of the planes crashed and ten OSS men were killed. Colby and those OSS men who did reach their destination were forced to operate with a minimum of supplies; the American planes had dropped their equipment a bit off target—in Sweden."

Discharged from the Army as a major, young Colby married Barbara Heinzen whom he'd dated in 1941 when she was a junior at Barnard College and he a first-year law student at Columbia.

Colby served two tours of duty in Vietnam. There, his involvement in the pacification program turned out to be the most controversial segment of his intelligence career.

Embarks on a career

They were married in St. Patrick's Cathedral on Fifth Avenue, and then Colby reentered Columbia Law. Before he was graduated he went to work for Maj. Gen. Bill Donovan's prestigious New York law firm, Donovan, Leisure, Newton, Lombard and Irvine, many of whose members had served with him in the OSS.

In 1949 after a two-year stint with the Donovan firm, Colby joined the National Labor Relations Board in Washington. He wasn't particularly happy or fulfilled as a lawyer, and one evening he remarked to his wife, "I don't know. I just don't want to go through life saving $100,000 a year for American Can —or some other corporation."

Call of the CIA

When the Korean War broke out, Bill Colby, an adventurer by heart, joined the Central Intelligence Agency. Under one guise or another he has been with the agency ever since, generally fighting communism.

In Stockholm from 1951 to 1953 he was listed as a foreign service attaché. In Rome from 1953 to 1958, where he was unofficially known as "one of Clare Boothe Luce's boys," he was officially carried as "first secretary and special assistant to the ambassador." In Rome where his wife recalls, "we lived five of our loveliest years," Colby worked underground to prevent the Italian Communist Party from winning a majority in Parliament.

Came next his first three-year stint in Vietnam, ostensibly as first secretary of the American Embassy in Saigon, his first assignment in Asia. Colby was, of course, much more than that. He was probably the shining light of the intelligence community, performing so well in his situational assignments and various cloak-and-dagger assignments that he was brought back to CIA headquarters in Washington and appointed chief of its Far Eastern Division.

The most controversial segment of William Colby's intelligence career concerns his involvement in the Vietnamese pacification program known as "CORDS," an acronym for "Civil Operations and Revolutionary Development Support." One part of this program was the operation code-named Phoenix.

Just as he was about to become chief of the CIA's Soviet operations in 1968, Colby was sent back to Vietnam on the request of Robert Komer, a former CIA man, and given ambassadorial rank. He was placed in charge of South Vietnam's overall pacification program, supposedly designed "to win the hearts and minds of the people."

The Phoenix portion of the program, which aimed to neutralize the Vietcong infrastructure, involved the capture, imprisonment, defection, and murder of the Vietcong. There were abuses in its execution, and as Colby conceded in February, 1970, to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, ". . . I would not want to testify that nobody was killed wrongly or executed in this kind of a program. I think it has probably happened, unfortunately." But there are excesses in all wars, and it seems manifestly unfair to brand Colby a "mass murderer and war criminal" which was done by those in the intelligence community who last year opposed his appointment as CIA director. No one ever called him such names in World War II when he was killing Germans. And few people realize how chaotic "Phoenix" was until he took it over.

Colby does not look or act like an exquisitely sensitive man, but during the period of his Senatorial confirmation, when posters bearing his photo with the legend, "mass murderer and war criminal," were tacked to posts and walls in Washington, D.C., he was deeply hurt. One night he drove home to the unpretentious house he owns in Springfield, Va., a capital suburb, plaintively asked his wife, "How does it feel being married to a war criminal?"

A wife's feelings

"My heart went out to him," Barbara Colby recalls, "because if ever there was a good, decent man who has served his country and his family—Bill has served every President from Franklin D. Roosevelt to Nixon—well, it's Bill."

Although Colby is a Nixon appointee, he, unlike so many others, is not about to follow orders blindly or to traffic with White House types like Ehrlichman and Dean who sought to compromise the CIA in the Watergate coverup.

"I will do the proper and legitimate things under the statute that CIA has been charged to do," he says. "And if I'm asked to do something beyond that legal authority, then I won't do it. I'll resign."

In line with that, Colby recently supported an amendment to the National Security Act of 1947 which originally authorized the founding of the CIA. The amendment was introduced by Sen. William Proxmire (D., Wis.) to protect the CIA from abuses emanating from the political system. It limits the CIA to its basic mission of collecting foreign intelligence and closes a loophole in the 1947 act which permitted the agency to get itself so disastrously involved in domestic intelligence.

Under Colby's regime the CIA is not only projecting a more open and candid image, it is undergoing a structural transformation. Colby has abolished the 10-man Board of National Estimates founded in 1950 and replaced it with a group of national intelligence officers, each charged with preparing a series of short-term intelligence assessments of their special areas. He has reduced the number of covert, so-called "black operations" largely because satellite equipment is so sophisticated today that it can photograph and relay far more reliable information than that provided by an agent dropped by plane or landed by submarine on foreign land.

A practicing Roman Catholic, a pillar in community affairs, a hard-working (Saturdays until 3 p.m.) civil servant who earns $42,000 a year, a good and understanding father to his four surviving children—a fifth died early this year of epilepsy—a loving and dutiful husband, William Colby has been a professional intelligence officer for half his adult years.

No flag lapel pin

The United States is indeed fortunate in having him. As a lawyer he could be earning three times in civilian life what he earns in government service. "But it wouldn't give me the satisfaction," he says, "that I find in this job." Colby wears no flag pins in his lapel to demonstrate his patriotism. It goes much deeper than that.

Keeping Up... With Youth

by Pamela Swift

SUZI QUATRO

Return of the Native

In 1971 Suzi Quatro, a Detroit-born rock 'n' roller, left Detroit where she failed to achieve any marked success and headed for England. Suzi, then 19 and 5 feet tall, was determined to hit it big in London with her brash rough-and-tumble sound.

Once there, she became, with the help of producer Mickie Most of Herman's Hermits, Donovan, Lulu and The Animals fame, an instant smash—one more in the long line of young American expatriates to receive overseas acclaim before being recognized at home. (That list includes Jimi Hendrix, Otis Redding, Gene Vincent, Eddie Cochran, many others in the rock field.)

In England Suzi became the first female since Bobbie Gentry to hit the No. 1 spot in the British hit parade. English teeny-boppers buy her records by the millions. When Suzi performs she crashes onto the stage a la Elvis, wears a black leather jump suit and chains of necklaces. She gyrates, whirls, turns, kicks, bumps, grinds, explodes with songs like Elvis "All Shook Up" or her own hits, "Can the Can," "48 Crash" and "Daytona Demon."

When Suzi hit Australia recently she arrived with a star tatooed on her wrist, was escorted to her hotel by a group of bikers who caused a two-car pileup along a local freeway.

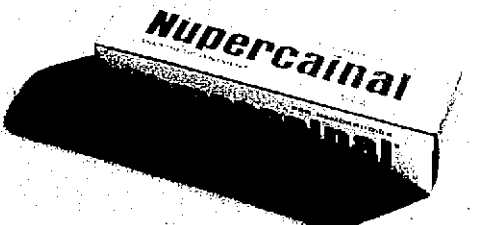

Suzi first appeared on stage at the age of 8 playing bongo drums in her father's jazz trio, is expected to become the next princess of American rock before the year is out, largely because a Quatro cult which digs her recordings is rapidly emerging in this country, and Suzi has been booked for a cross-country tour.

PETER PECKARSKY: HE ASKED AN UNEXPECTED QUESTION.

The Young Reporter Who Riled Kissinger

Last month in Salzburg, Austria, Henry Kissinger, once the "Mr. Clean" of the Nixon Administration, blew his cool. He threatened to resign unless cleared, which Washington wags immediately interpreted to mean, "I will resign unless cheered."

Kissinger, of course, was justifiably angry. After a month of back-breaking, mind-boggling efforts, he had finally succeeded in wrangling a disengagement between Israeli and Syrian armed forces on the Golan Heights, only to return to Washington, D.C., where at a tense press conference, a sharp, perceptive, young reporter asked him a lengthy question which ended with: "[have you] consulted or retained counsel in preparation for a defense against a possible perjury indictment?"

The press questions directed at Kissinger sought to delineate his role in the FBI wiretaps from 1969 to 1971 on four reporters and 13 government officials. In addition, reporters wanted to know about his role in the creation and workings of "The Plumbers," the special White House espionage unit to which David Young, one of Kissinger's aides, had been assigned.

Kissinger had appeared to be less than candid and complete in his recall, and the reporter who pressured him on the possibility of perjury was one he had never before met, charmed, informed, manipulated, helped or overwhelmed.

He was Peter Peckarsky, 27, from Milwaukee, Wis., a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Class of '69, a major in political science, a minor in electrical engineering.

Young Peckarsky is the one-man Washington bureau of Tech, the student newspaper at MIT.

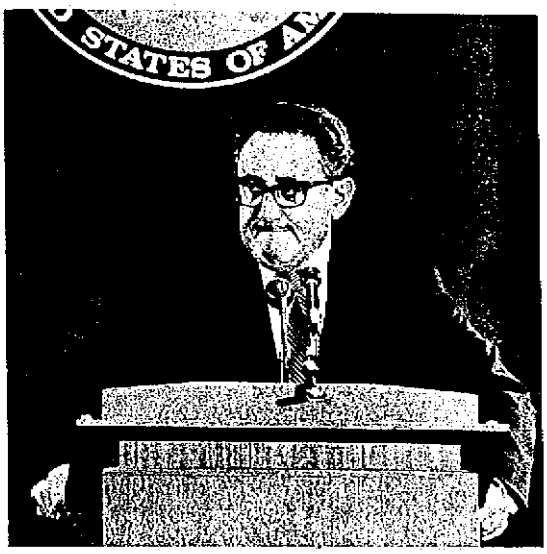

A HAPPY MOMENT LIKE THIS DESERVES GOOD PROCESSING.

Good picture-taking doesn't end with taking the picture. It's just as important to choose a quality processing service– someone you know and trust– who can make the picture worth the taking. So, when you leave your Kodak color film for developing, ask your dealer for quality service by Kodak or one of the many other quality photofinishers.

A message from Eastman Kodak Company on behalf of photo dealers and finishers.

HENRY KISSINGER AT THE JUNE 6 PRESS CONFERENCE

Peckarsky has press credentials from the State Department and the Pentagon. He has applied for Congressional privileges which have not yet come through. Peter is also permitted to attend White House press conferences as space permits but does not have White House press credentials. He works out of his apartment.

When asked why he pressed the Secretary of State about David Young and hypothesized a possible perjury indictment for Kissinger, Peckarsky explained: "I just felt that there were a few anomalies in his testimony that needed to be cleared up. I had read his testimony at his confirmation hearings on Sept. 7th, 1973, in front of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and I had compared it with his testimony of Feb. 6, 1974, before the Senate Armed Services Committee, and it appeared to me that there were some contradictions."

Peckarsky therefore pinpointed the "anomalies," then said to Kissinger: "I wonder if you could (A) reconcile these two statements, (B) tell us whether or not the Special Prosecutor or any other prosecutor or agency of the U.S. government has contacted you with reference to a perjury investigation of the statement, and (C) tell us whether or not you have consulted or retained counsel in preparation for a defense against a possible perjury indictment?"

After Peckarsky asked that question, which obviously riled and discombobulated Kissinger, a reporter sitting next to Peter muttered, "Good question, kid."

Other reporters and observers were not so generous. Marquis Childs wrote in his column that he had "doubts about whether the diplomatic beat should be covered like a police beat." Richard Wilson described Peter's question as "academically irresponsible." Senate Minority Leader Hugh Scott denounced him in The Congressional Record.

Peter does not regard himself as any Clark Mollenhoff, the fearless battering ram of the Capital press corps. "I have no hostility for Mr. Kissinger," he says. "All I'm trying is to do the best job I can."

Of one thing Peter can be assured: Henry Kissinger will remember him as the trigger of his delayed outrage.

A HEARTY GARDEN SALAD

by BETH MERRIMAN
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

CALABASAS, CALIF.

Actor Dennis Weaver has always wanted to perform to the best of his abilities—whether as the University of Oklahoma's champion runner, or as a TV star as Chester in "Gunsmoke," and as Sam McCloud in "McCloud." Married 28 years, he and his wife, Geraldine, have strong ideas about what foods keep them in top shape.

"We're vegetarians," says Weaver, "and we have to use protein sources other than meat—so we eat lots of eggs, nuts, and dairy products." The Weavers have found plenty of variety for meals within these limits—especially when they include homegrown, freshly picked vegetables.

One of the Weaver's favorite quick-and-easy dishes is a hearty salad made from healthful, protein-rich ingredients: sliced hard-cooked eggs, crunchy nuts and seeds, and creamy cottage cheese. Tomatoes, carrots, lettuce and other garden products add color and crispness—and your favorite herbs lend a subtle flavor.

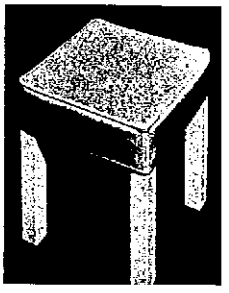

PROTEIN SALAD

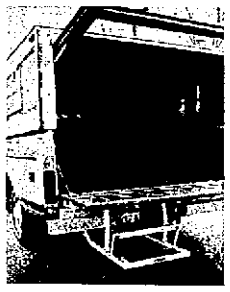

Few red lettuce leaves (or Boston lettuce, spinach or any dark-leaved salad green)
1 pkg. alfalfa sprouts (about 1 quart)
1 cup cottage cheese
1 tomato, cut in eighths
½ cucumber sliced, or 3 or 4 Jerusalem artichokes, diced
Sunflower and pumpkin seeds, mixed (about ½ cup)
Your favorite herbs or seasoning to taste
Chopped nuts, like cashews or almonds, to taste
2 small carrots, grated
½ beet, grated
Cheddar cheese, diced (to taste)
2 or 3 hard-cooked eggs sliced

Lightly tossed with cottage cheese, this salad needs very little dressing. After mixing well all other ingredients, add diced cheddar cheese to taste and garnish with sliced eggs. Makes three or four servings. TESTED IN PARADE'S KITCHEN

Now You Can Visit A Psychiatrist Via Television

by Theodore Irwin

BOSTON, MASS.

Is the traditional psychiatrist's couch being replaced by the television screen?

It seems to be happening here in a highly unlikely setting—a medical outpost at bustling Logan International Airport linked by a two-way television setup to Massachusetts General Hospital in downtown Boston.

The experiment, called telepsychiatry, has dramatic potential to expand diagnosis and treatment of mental problems. The novel concept evolved as part of an experimental medical diagnosis-by-television program launched six years ago and financed by the U.S. Public Health Service.

550 cases

So far 109 psychiatrists have handled more than 550 cases through the airport television system, called Interactive Television (IATV).

"There's an acute shortage of psychiatrists, particularly in outlying towns," explains Dr. Thomas F. Dwyer, the program's affable, gray-haired director. "Many disturbed people have to go through a complicated, discouraging web to find psychiatric help and never get it or put it off until they have a crashing emergency. By then they're often tough to treat. With IATV, people in the airport area can step in to the medical station and come into instant contact with a psychiatrist."

Here's how telepsychiatry works. The other day a depressed middle-aged engineer named Stephen arrived at the medical station for his appointment with a psychiatrist. His problem was habitual sleepwalking.

The octagonal, fully-draped IATV room to which Stephen was taken contains one camera remotely controlled from the hospital and another which the airport nurse focuses. Stephen faced a 17-inch monitor. He spoke into a microphone on a desk before him; another mike, hung overhead, would be used if he moved around the room.

Creating intimacy

On the screen (monitor) Dr. Dwyer appeared from the hospital across Boston Harbor. There, a small emergency-ward room has been converted into a TV station with camera and monitor similar to those in the airport tower. The psychiatrist uses pushbutton controls to move the camera at his end—and the airport camera—to get the best views of his patient. As they talked, Dr. Dwyer zoomed in and out on Stephen—and on himself—creating the effect of increased closeness whenever the psychiatrist thought it necessary.

Thus the psychiatrist and Stephen were able to talk to and look at each other as if they were in the same room. During this session, and in a subsequent visit, he gradually opened up about his sleepwalking. It was driving his wife to distraction. What else, Dr. Dwyer asked, was troubling him these days? "My daughter is getting married," And? "My son, Frankie, enlisted in the Navy." And his wife had an operation which prevented her from having sexual relations.

Psychiatrists can now examine patients over long distances thanks to two-way TV. Here, Dr. Thomas Dwyer appears in front of a patient. Nurse Marie Kerrigan focuses camera before leaving psychiatrist and patient to their session.

After Stephen consciously confronted his problems he began to feel easier about them and stopped sleepwalking. In his case, at least, a few sessions did the trick.

Under the program, patients are seen by appointment, except in emergencies. A psychiatrist is selected by Dr. Dwyer from a list of 35 available, including psychiatric residents at the hospital. The fee for a session may be $30, or lower, depending on the patient's income. At Logan a nurse sets up the hand-operated camera, introduces the patient to the on-duty psychiatrist on the IATV screen, and leaves the room.

"With these interviews," says Dr. Dwyer, "I can work with a patient as I would in my office. There is the same give-and-take and, most unexpected, the same sense of intimacy. I continue to be pleasantly amazed at how well the system functions. Even when a prescription is needed for perhaps a tranquilizer, I just write it out for the nurse, and it appears instantly at the airport's medical station."

The case that triggered the entire telepsychiatry idea involved a burly, 43-year-old truck driver. It started apparently as just a physical injury situation. Making a delivery near the airport, Carl, the trucker, accidentally gashed his hand and was brought to the airport's medical station. As a nurse treated his wound the trucker suddenly started ranting: "Remember that sniper who shot up all those people? I'm going to the roof and do the same here."

While an emergency message was flashed to the hospital, another specially trained nurse tried to calm the trucker. She gently took him by the elbow and maneuvered him to the TV room. At the hospital, Dr. Dwyer had been summoned, and his reassuring face appeared on the screen for the first time.

Call a doctor

At the psychiatrist's prompting, Carl began to unburden himself. About his wife, from whom he was separated. About their two children he hadn't seen for months. His feeling of being "hemmed in."

There was no shooting, and Carl agreed to go to a hospital for the out-patient treatment he desperately needed.

Obviously, long-distance trouble-shooting has its shortcomings, but patients generally have reacted favorably. Many seem to feel safer at a distance, preferring the protective barrier of the TV screen. Others feel a stigma is attached to a face-to-face visit to a psychiatrist.

Dr. Dwyer and his colleagues note that these people open up more fully and earlier on subjects that they would find hard to talk about on a psychiatrist's couch.

Reactions to the IATV concept, from other psychiatrists in the Boston area, at first were skeptical. Their disbelief stemmed primarily from a fear that their techniques might be blunted or lost on TV. For instance, a psychodrama specialist complained that she missed the friendly touch with a patient, as in shaking hands. Now the program seems generally accepted, and Dr. Dwyer reports that none of the psychiatrists on his roster considers the medium inadequate.

Other uses

The method is being extended in several directions. Under Massachusetts law a drug-dependent charged with a crime may ask for a psychiatric examination before sentencing, and so defendants have been brought to Logan for televised interviews.

Schools, too, are involved. From Marblehead, children with learning disabilities come for diagnostic and remedial work. Emotionally disturbed children in Nahant get appointments with IATV psychiatrists. "Normal" junior high students in Nahant take group counseling led on the screen by a psychiatrist or psychiatric nurse. With parental permission 120 of the 160 students have gone to Logan in groups of five or less to air developing problems.

Boston's approach to mental healing has thus far attracted visiting professionals from 25 countries, the largest number from Japan.

An IATV network at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha connects its Psychiatric Institute to Veterans' Administration hospitals in Omaha, Lincoln (55 miles away) and Grand Island (155 miles).

Spectacular opportunity

A spectacular, versatile $111-million satellite launched from Cape Canaveral last May, could bring doctors and patients face-to-face via two-way TV across hundreds of miles.

Foreseeing a gradual expansion of telepsychiatry in this country, Dr. Dwyer notes the concentration of psychiatrists in affluent suburbs, and big cities, while rural sectors and ghettos cry out for them.

"One day," he predicts, confidently, "redistribution through telepsychiatry will help spread both quality and quantity of psychiatric care throughout the land."

INTELLIGENCE REPORT

THE PRESIDENT'S TWO RIGHT-HAND MEN

This has been a hellish year for Richard Nixon. Under siege for the responsibility or irresponsibility of his administration, watching on all sides the human wreckage caused by the Watergate fallout, recreant in protecting so many young, impressionable men from Bob Haldeman's disease, "DED" (dissent equals disloyalty), named by the grand jury as an unindicted co-conspirator in the Watergate coverup, the President has tried to stonewall, delay, deny, impede, and prolong the legal process involving impeachment.

History will record two of his most loyal aides in the time of his most desperate need as Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., his White House chief of staff, and Joseph Fred Buzhardt Jr., his White House counsel.

Last month Buzhardt, after working 18 hours a day in the President's defense, was stricken with a heart attack while Nixon and Haig were abroad in Cairo. Buzhardt, 50, who knows more about the President's tapes than almost anyone else except Bob Haldeman, will be out of the President's defensive lineup for at least another month while, hopefully, rest repairs his damaged heart.

"Iron man" Haig, however, considered by many an alternate U.S. President, remains in the brunt-bearing front lines, bruised and weary, but still staunch and steadfast in his determination to save Nixon.

Not too many people know it, but Haig and Buzhardt were at West Point together. Buzhardt, from McCormick, S.C., was graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1946, rated academically 510 in a class of 875. Haig, who will be 50 in December this year, was graduated from the Point in 1947, ranked 214 in a class of 310.

Buzhardt resigned his commission to become a lawyer, then Strom Thurmond's administrative aide, and subsequently a Pentagon and White House counsel. Haig stayed in the service to retire as a general and become Nixon's No. 1 ace of all trades, tasks, missions, maneuvers.

Basically conservative, Buzhardt and Haig have not changed in nature, personality, and attitude since their days as West Point cadets. Haig, for example, was a versatile, extroversive athlete who played football, basketball, handball, boxed, and was an outstanding member of the debating society, and sang in the Catholic choir for three years.

Buzhardt was introversive, polite, shy, and taught Sunday school for three years.

Howitzer, the West Point yearbook, says of Joseph Fred Buzhardt Jr., "Buzz was famous from beast-barrack days for the spot of white hair on the back of his head. With two college years and ROTC behind him, Buzz came up from his Southern home to USMA College (an acronym for United States Military Academy) to try his luck. Easy to make friends with, Buzz had little trouble passing his years at the Point except with the Map Department and the T.D. (Tactics Department). Not a real goat (goat is the West Point equivalent of last in the class), he was still one of the boys who had his academic troubles. We are sure the service will profit by his membership."

Of Haig, Howitzer says: "From the liberal atmosphere of the Notre Dame campus to the dominated life of a West Point plebe proved to be a step tinged with reluctance to Alex. As ever, unchanged, he has glided through the years with a gay sincerity that won him an abundance of loyal friends. His pleasures lean toward the athletic and social. Consequently, he has developed a skill in both. Strong convictions and even stronger ambitions mingled with a deep understanding of his fellow-soldier should form a 'warrior's chariot' to carry Alex to the top."

If Richard Nixon survives his administration, his debt of gratitude to West Pointers Haig and Buzhardt should be endless and incalculable.

HOW TO SAVE GRAIN

Seventy percent of the growth in U.S. cattle is derived from hay and grass, replenishable items not found in the human diet. Grain is used in the finishing period where the final 30 percent of the weight of the animal is added.

Current U.S. Department of Agriculture beef-grading standards enacted in 1965, claim many cattlemen, do not reflect the current consumer demand for leaner beef nor do they recognize the younger animals coming to slaughter today. These 1965 standards were devised at a time when America had a burdensome grain surplus, and the feeding of large amounts of grain to livestock was encouraged.

Today, cattle-feeders and meat-packers believe that these outdated standards are hurting both the cattle industry and the consumer, because they require an excessive amount of high-priced corn (grain) to be fed to beef cattle in order that their carcasses be stamped with the USDA grade "choice." The last 200 pounds of weight-gain at the feedlot is mostly fat, and is added slowly to the cattle at great expense to the cattle feeder.

If the USDA would realize this fact and understand that younger cattle are naturally more tender, juicy, and lean, great savings in the amount of grain needed in the finishing process could be achieved. A more responsive grading standard would benefit everyone. It would reduce the feeder's cost. It would produce a less fatty meat product and still preserve the high protein quality in the American diet. It would preserve the American cattle business and keep cattle working to harvest the vast amounts of forage which otherwise do not produce human food.

The above is a suggestion many cattlemen would like Agriculture Secretary Earl Butz to act upon immediately, because they are hurting.

To the buying public which knows little about the differences between various grades of beef, they are these: prime and choice beef contain more marbled fat than the other grades. The fat adds flavor to the meat but it isn't too good for consumers with high cholesterol counts. Physicians usually recommend lean meat.

Next in the USDA grading system come good, standard, commercial, utility, canners and packers meat.

So-called "Good Meat" is good only if you prefer less marbled meat and can buy it at a reasonable price.

Standard and commercial meat should be cooked longer, should be tenderized with an additive, generally makes stew and hamburgers.

Utility type meat must be ground into meat balls and hamburgers to be eatable, while canner and packer graded meat, which comes from wild cows, is generally good only for sausages.

The cheaper meats provide more protein and less fat than U.S. choice and prime, but they must be tenderized, cooked longer, softened up, and seasoned.

GUINNESS INTO TV

The motion picture business is so bad in England these days--"thin" they call it--that Britain's leading actors are one by one succumbing to television. First it was Sir Laurence Olivier, 67, who recently finished Love Among the Ruins with Katharine Hepburn, 64.

Now it is Sir Alec Guinness who has just finished Gift of Friendship, written by John Osborne. In this teleplay, Sir Alec plays an aging writer. No doubt it will be picked up by American television which generally buys the best the British TV can produce.

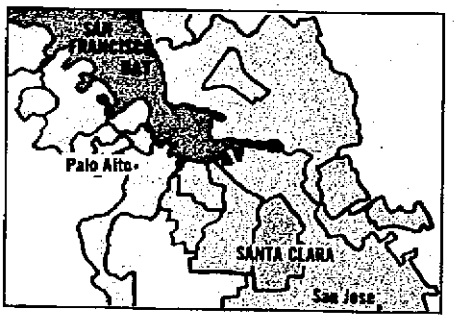

FIRST AID NEEDS

Despite the fact that 2.2 million disabling injuries occur each year in U.S. industry, a survey indicates that nearly half of the nation's businesses do not have first-aid kits or dispensaries to provide emergency medical treatment.

The survey was initiated by Johnson & Johnson, a leader in the first-aid field. It was based on interviews with 1500 companies representing a cross-section of American business and industry. Results of the survey show that about 1.8 million businesses lack even rudimentary first-aid supplies required to treat the minor mishaps that occur everyday in industry.

THE TERMANS: FATHER AND SON

SANTA CLARA—HOME OF INNOVATIVE INDUSTRY

According to Fortune magazine, Santa Clara County in California, has "the densest concentration of innovative industry that exists anywhere in the world."

The concentration of 800 technology companies along the southwestern shore of San Francisco Bay "has created an innovative ferment on a scale without precedent in industrial history." The author of the Fortune article, Gene Bylinsky, writes: "No other center of advanced technology in the U.S. can match Santa Clara County's performance.

"The famous Boston-Cambridge complex has gone into a decline, partly because of its excessive dependence on federal contracts, which stopped coming, and partly because most of the technologies the Boston companies bet on failed to catch on.

"There's still lots of growth left in centers such as Los Angeles, Phoenix, Ft. Lauderdale-Melbourne, Boulder and Ann Arbor, but none approaches the Santa Clara complex in importance or size."

Incredibly enough, Bylinsky explains, the buildup of creative technology in Santa Clara County "was almost wholly the handiwork of Frederick Terman, an enthusiastic and inspiring teacher at Stanford."

Frederick Terman is the son of the world-famous Lewis M. Terman, who devised the Stanford-Binet IQ test, a landmark in educational testing. Frederick Terman, 74, served as chairman of the electrical engineering department and dean of the School of Engineering at Stanford during the post-World War II period.

"While training a whole generation of scientist-entrepreneurs," Bylinsky says of Terman, "he had built up the prestige and quality of Stanford's engineering school to a level that attracted outstanding graduate students from all over the country.

"For more than a decade, Stanford has awarded more Ph.D.'s in electrical engineering than any other school, including MIT. After graduation, many of them go to work for local firms or found their own companies."

Denver's volunteer Partners program helps youngsters involved with juvenile courts learn to go straight and eventually land a job. Here, Don Neubel and Aaron Lee, age 12, find a friend. They have been together for one year.

When a Tough Guy Needs a Friend

by Murray Teigh Bloom

DENVER, COLO.

On a cool night here, 150 adults gather in an old junior high school auditorium to see if they want to get involved with a juvenile delinquent. Within a month many of these men and women are going to try to become friends with some of Denver's toughest teen-agers by means of Partners program.

Sitting on the edge of the stage is Joey, a short, thin 14-year-old Chicano. Joey's specialty: Breaking and entering supermarkets. He's now serving a three-year probationary term.

For the past eight months Joey has been the concern of a "senior partner," John, a serious 28-year-old college graduate who is now trying to build up a trucking business. Under John's guidance Joey has not only managed to stay out of trouble for a year, but he's even done fairly well in school.

One of the would-be volunteers asks Joey: "What do you think about after Juvenile Court Judge Orrelle R. Weeks and Bob Moffitt, guiding light of Partners, talk over some recent successes among the more than 2000 cases in the program.

you've had your weekly meeting with your senior partner?" Joey grins: "Now I have six days to get in trouble. Then the week goes, and I'm bowling with John—he bought me a bowling ball so I pay him off by washing his truck for $2—the week is over, and I'm still outta trouble."

Bowling is only one of the many free activities that help partners get to know each other better. They're also able to swim together, river raft, ski, fly in private planes, hike, attend football games, ride mini-bikes or fish.

Joey and John are one of the more than 2000 social relationships created by a determined ex-Baptist-seminary student named Bob Moffitt. The senior partners—college and graduate students, businessmen, housewives, bank employees and at least two ex-convicts—are almost all middle class. The junior partners are all between 10 and 18 and mostly Chicano and black. They are on probation from the juvenile court, referred from the Police Department, or in some way connected to the juvenile justice system.

A last chance

Most of them have been involved in serious crimes: breaking and entering, auto theft, stickups, drugs, prostitution. For many the Partners program is likely to be their last chance to end a delinquency pattern that will probably lead them to Canon City (the state penitentiary), violent death or a drug overdose.

Being partners with these youngsters isn't going to be an easy relationship, Bob Moffitt, the 35-year-old founder and head of Partners warns his audience. "You can pour your guts into a relationship and wonder if it will ever be worth it. Your partner might stand you up a few times for your weekly get-togethers. And you might get ripped off, stolen from, by your junior partner. It's happened."

Juvenile Probation Officer Tim Turley, an enthusiastic backer of the Partners program, spells out its importance to the city. "People like you, stable adults, can provide a model for youngsters who have no models—or only very bad ones. Here in Denver we have 50 probation officers. Some of them have case loads of 60 to 100 kids. Which means at best a P.O. can give the average youngster 15 minutes a month. On a one-to-one relationship you're bound to do better."

200,000 volunteers

The volunteer probationer has become an accepted figure in most of the nation's juvenile courts. According to the National Information Center on Volunteerism in Boulder, Colo., there are now more than 3000 such programs and at least 200,000 volunteers, with some 70 percent of all juvenile courts running such programs.

Bob Moffitt introduced me to Kenny and Joe, who've been partners seven months. Kenny, 13, is an undersized Chicano with long black hair parted in the center. He was arrested for burglary, his first offense, and under a new Denver ruling was eligible for the Partners program without the filing of formal charges. Three weeks later Kenny was matched with Joe, an athletic 57-year-old retired Navy captain.

As Joe recalls: "I'm divorced, and I have a son who's 21. Life was a little lonely when I came across a Partners brochure. The training I got along with a batch of other volunteers impressed me. Then they matched me with Kenny, and we signed a partnership agreement."

Spending time

Joe took Kenny swimming at the Denver Athletic Club. He taught him to play squash and took him mountain climbing. "Usually we spend all of Saturday together. I pick him up at his house and spend a little time talking to his parents. I might take Ken to a football game.

"Obviously I'm sold on the program. I can see the change taking place in Ken, see his eyes opening to the opportunities in a world he never knew, so I've gotten a lot of personal satisfaction from the relationship."

I asked Ken what he felt he had gotten out of the partnership. "I learned squash and climbing mountains, and my swimming is better. And I got to trust Joe who's the first Anglo man I ever had as a friend."

Partners Inc. now has 10 senior partners who started as junior partners. This means they're long off probation, have found steady jobs and in most cases are building families of their own. One of them, Mike Chavez, 20, explained how he made the switch.

Meeting a 'Partner'

"I got in real trouble when I was 16. Burglary, inciting to riot, assaults. You name it. They told me about this Partner racket, and I figured what could I lose. Then they introduced me to my senior partner, Jim Anderson, and when I saw he was an Anglo, a white, I was ready to call the whole thing off: I couldn't stand whites. Then I figured—wait a minute. This character wants to do good. Okay, let him do me some good. It was about time an Anglo did me good. So we went bowling together; then river rafting and motorcycling, and I found I could trust him. Then he helped get me into a plumber apprentice program, and now I'm suddenly a solid citizen making $4.10 an hour."

Carson Reed, a lithe, soft-spoken 30-year-old black, had an even more difficult switch to make. He spends all his time being the senior partner to 15 of the riskiest cases Partners has on its list.

Probation Officer Tim Turley, shown here in his office with a young offender, says the Partners program is valuable because it gives a youngster a stable adult to use as a model for his personal development.

They consist of five black, five Chicano and five white youngsters. Carson has a lot of credibility with them, because they know he served eight years in the Canon City penitentiary for armed robbery. While inside he took courses to get a high school diploma and two years of college work.

Availability counts

"My junior partners are tough cases, real tough"—he said, "and I have to be available to them any time. They've got lots of problems—family, court, jobs, school. Without the Partners setup most of them would probably be inside, which means they'd be set in a life of crime. Mostly what I try to do with all of them is to get them to like themselves. Most of these kids don't."

Most of the Partners money support is local. The bulk of it pays the really minimal salaries of the 20 full-time staff members.

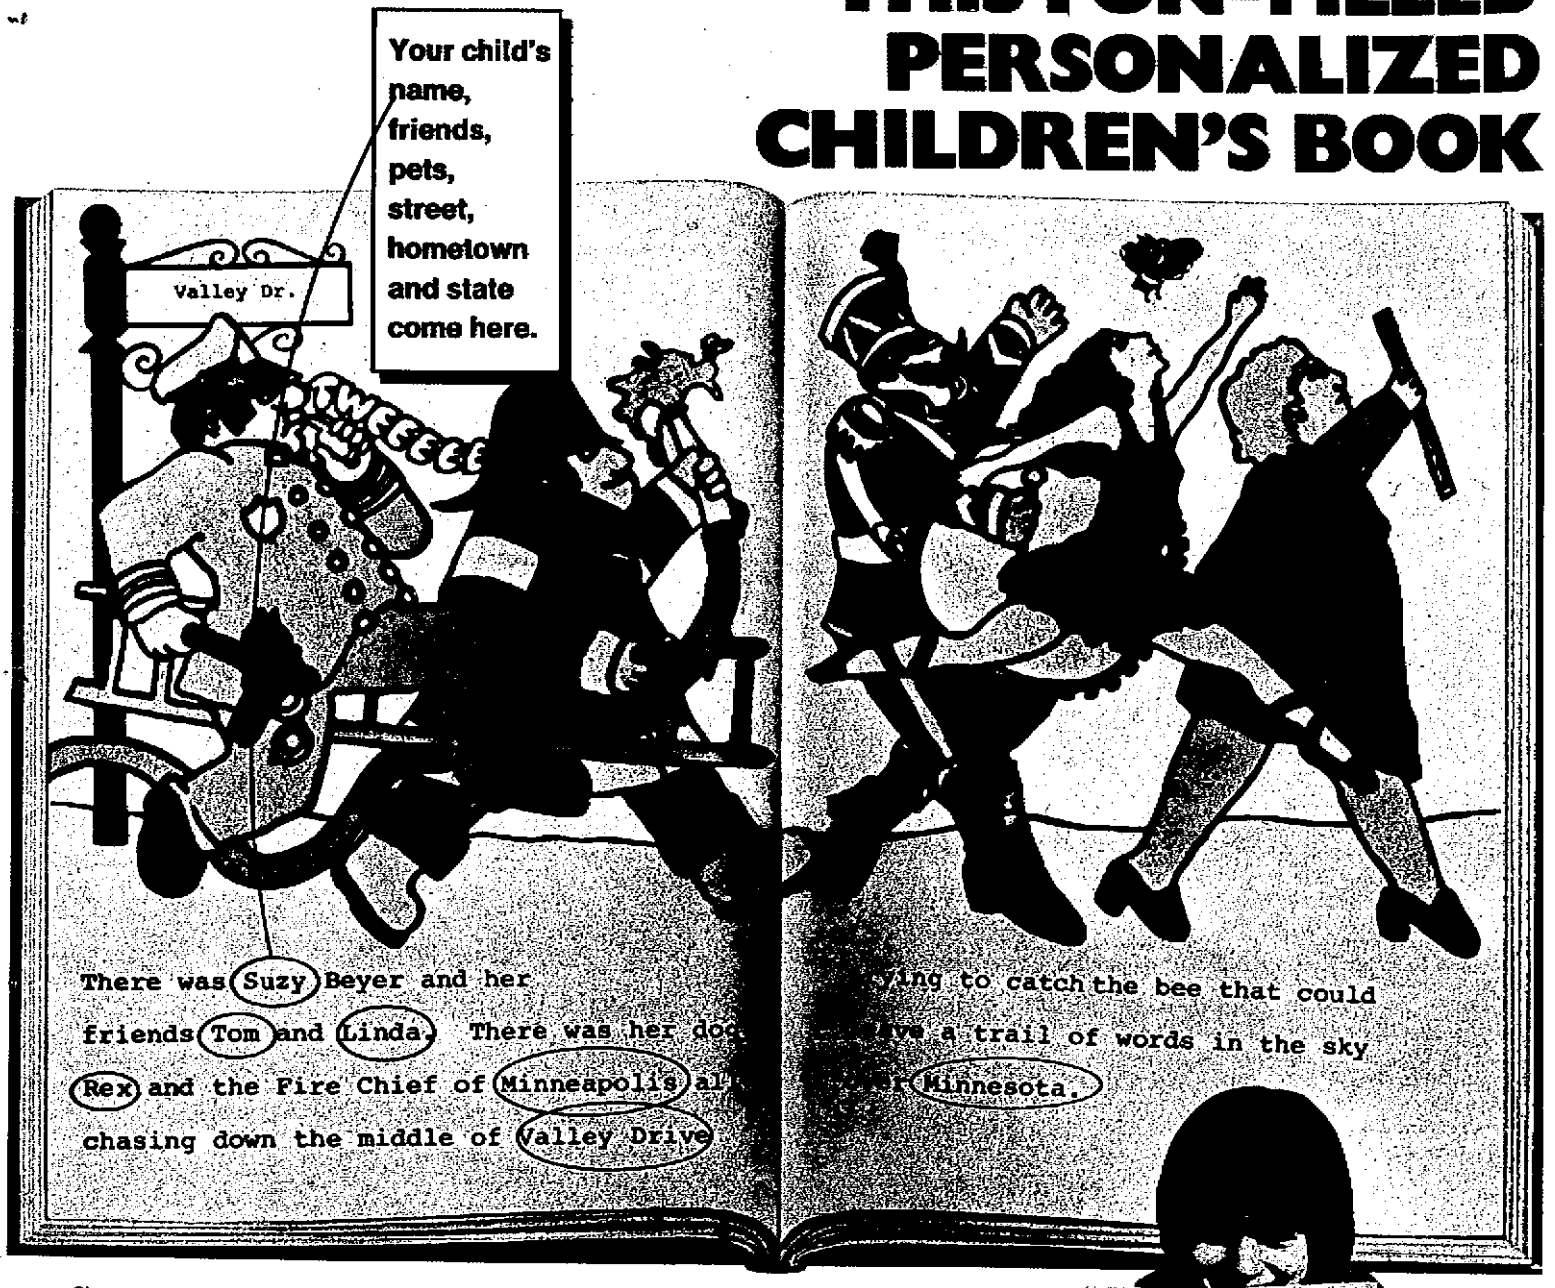

Much support comes from a few local businesses that each contribute $10,000 a year. One of the most enthusiastic supporters has been the United Bank of Denver. More than 20 of its employees have become senior partners. The local Celebrity Sports Center contributes $87,000 annually in free memberships.

One of the program's strongest supporters has been Philip Gillian, a recently retired juvenile court judge and former president of the National Council of Juvenile Court Judges. In his 35 years as a juvenile court judge he estimates he's heard more than 40,000 delinquency cases.

"Today it's much tougher being a juvenile court judge than it used to be," he said. "There used to be a number of religiously-oriented child care institutions we could send delinquents to but they're disappearing. So now we're left with the choice of sending youngsters to the state training schools or probation or nothing.

"The training school is often just that: a place where the youngster is trained to hot-wire a car or become a skillful thief. I figure at least 30 percent of the kids in the Partners program would ordinarily have to be sent to institutions. This way a lot of them have been saved."

my favorite jokes

by rodney dangerfield

EDITOR'S NOTE: At Rodney's club, Dangerfield's, there are no set dress rules. The reason given for this is today's styles. Truth is, how can they have dress rules when Rodney keeps going to the bar in his bathrobe between shows. This is, by the way, the kind of joke Rodney tells on himself—pure Dangerfield—a way of looking at the world from the eyes of the character who "Don't get no respect." Even when he was a young man this character had his place in Rodney's comic perspective. "When I was 17 and first breaking into show business, an agent sent me to a club to emcee a show for $5. When I got to the club the owner told me that one of the waiters was emceeing the show, so I asked him if he needed another waiter—and I ended up waiting on four tables."

Rodney's got a very special place in New York comedy, he writes all his own material and performs at his club nightly. Nationally, he's appeared on all the top TV talk shows; he starred in the movie The Projectionist and has made the comedy albums, I Don't Get No Respect (Bell) and Rodney Dangerfield —'The Loser' (Decca).

Here are some of his recent jokes and pungent observations:

I live in a tough neighborhood. I have one neighbor, he's such an animal, I found out in his family, his father was the first one to stand up straight.

I was approached by a salesman with a such a soft sell I couldn't hear what he was selling.

You can't forget old friends. You try, but they don't let you.

If the answer is really blowing in the wind, I'm moving to Chicago.

I don't get no respect at all. The time I tried to learn to parachute jump, the instructor told me to count to 50.

Things are never easy for me. Some people go to India to learn the meaning of life. I'm still trying to figure out how to start my car.

I don't do any political jokes for one reason. I don't know anything. Come to think of it, neither do they.

•

I live in a dirty neighborhood. The other day I sat in the sun for two hours. I got a nice stain.

People are surprised to learn I listen to classical music. I like the three B's—Bach, Beethoven and booze.

A drunk walked into my club the other night and told me his wife locked him out. I asked him what do you want me to do about it. He told me he wanted me to keep him drunk.

I have a really dumb dog. I went out last week and bought one of those special dog whistles . . . he won't use it.

I have a strange doctor. Last year I had walking pneumonia. He charged me by the mile.

I walked into a fancy restaurant without a tie the other day and they gave me one to put on. I don't understand. They want to keep out people without ties, but if people show up without ties, they don't keep 'em out; they give 'em one.

My wife isn't impressed with the fact that I'm in show business. Why, I once told her I was leaving to do the Tonight show and she says, "You're going out again tonight?"

Lots of guys use dogs to get girls. My dog is too smart. My dog uses me to get other dogs.

I never got no respect. In my high school yearbook, I was voted the one most likely to go broke.

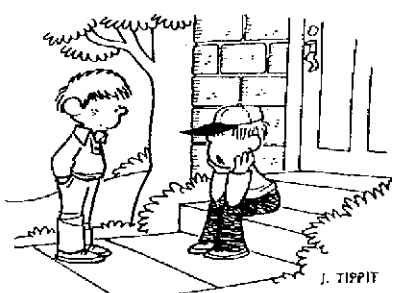

•

I remember my high school days. Why the other day I was reminiscing with Ed McMahon. I asked if he remembered his old high school cheer—"2-4-6 pack . . ."

My old man was a gambler. With him everything was the horses. In my family album every picture is a photo finish.

it's to laugh

"My parents and I have finally reached an agreement . . . They tell me what to do, and I do it."

"I've decided to give you your freedom; I'm getting a divorce."

"Oh no, these aren't my symptoms, doctor. They are my sister's—she couldn't come today."

PARADE'S SHORT COURSE ON HOME SEWING

New exclusive fall fashions by three outstanding international designers . . . for you to sew at home.

Tips on coping with the newest fabrics & styles

by DALE CAVANAGH

Illustrator and former editor for Vogue and Simplicity Patterns in charge of their dress charts departments. Syndicate writer to over 150 newspapers on sewing tips. Author of "A Collection of Sewing Tips by World Famous Designers."

INTRODUCTION

Nowadays, the most refreshing aspect of sewing is that styles are no longer dictated by a few "in" designers, perhaps because of the advent of the "liberated" woman. A woman needn't discard her wardrobe because the lengths are "wrong," or the colors "out of date," or the necklines and sleeves "old fashioned." Instead, if she likes what she has, and feels good wearing it, then that style is right for her. This holds true for her sewing. She is free to pick and choose from a great number of styles when deciding what to sew. Is it any wonder women have been demanding better styling in their pattern requirements? If they are spending so much time sewing and considerable cash in fabrics, then they want patterns that will not have the "home-made look": thus the great increase in couture patterns. Most pattern companies have recognized this development and have acquired designer patterns, but the first to introduce American, British, Irish and Italian designers to the American market was Spadea.

EXCLUSIVE! Internationally known designer patterns, as shown on front cover, made available to Parade readers at tremendous savings. These patterns will not be found in stores. Please refer to coupon at conclusion of this article for simple ordering instructions.

SELECTING A PATTERN

Consider the various factors involved in selecting a pattern. Is the style being sewn for a special occasion? Is it making use of a particularly lovely piece of fabric? Or is sewing it fulfilling a need for something to do as well as providing a new dress when the need arises? No matter what may be the reason, picking the right pattern is important. The first step is to know what size to purchase. If you are a "perfect size," then you can be freer with your selection. If you have a figure problem either in the bust, waist or hips, then remember that you will probably have to make alterations and choose patterns that make these alterations as easy as possible. If, however, your figure problem calls for more complicated adjustments, try to eliminate any gigantic alterations in these areas. You must have your exact measurements on hand when you go pattern-hunting. The important measurements to have are for your bust, hips, waist, back-length from nape of neck to waist area, height and weight. If you can't manage to do the measuring yourself, then get someone to help. Use the following guide for making measurements: BUST—Hold the 1-inch end of your tape measure at the center front of your bra, pass the other end under your arm across your back and under the other arm, and around to the center front again. Overlap the long end over the beginning of the 1-inch mark, making sure that the tape is held over the fullest part of your bust. WAIST—Hold the 1-inch end of the tape at your center front, and wrap the tape around the smallest part of your waist. Overlap the tape at the front, breathe naturally and take a reading. HIPS—This measurement should be taken around the fullest part of your body, NOT over the hip bones. If you are under 5'4", measure 7" down from the waist; if you are over 5'4", measure about 9" down from the waist. BACK NECK TO WAIST—Place the 1" end of the tape at the bone at the base of the neck and then run the measure down the spine to the waist and take a reading. This reading must be taken exactly to the waist, as ¼" under or over could make a big difference. Now you are ready to shop for a pattern—the right way.

NORMAN HARTNELL

SELECTING FABRICS

Whether you select the fabric to suit the pattern or purchase the pattern to complement the fabric, knowing what you are working with is all important. If you already have the fabric on hand, you should know what the fiber makeup is—is it cotton, silk, wool, acetate, a blend of two or more, or is it all-synthetic? This will affect how you want to use your fabric in fashion. Once you have established what type of fabric you are going to use, use the same fabric fiber content for your whole garment.

Somewhere on the cover of the pattern, the company has listed fabric suggestions (as you will see from the patterns you can select which appear on the front cover of this issue). This is done with regard to the design, its basic uses, and what is most readily available on the market. There are cottons that have the feel of silk, there are sheer wools that drape and handle beautifully, and there are wools for suits and coats that can not be imitated in the synthetic market. Luckily, with the travel-minded society in which we live, the advent of synthetic fibers has made vacations easier. These fabrics are a joy to pack, and take a minimum of time to keep clean—because of their wash-and-wear qualities. Knits come in various types. The single knits, light in weight, have a definite right and wrong side, do not hold their shape well. They are best suited for the skinny look, for gathering, because they drape well, and for casual styles such as tops and skirts. Double knits are firm, hold their shape well, are made with a minimum of seam and are best suited for dresses, suits, pants, lightweight coats and mens wear. Sweater knits look and act like hand knits. They stretch freely and come in various textures such as ribbing and textured surfaces. The other man-made fiber fabrics include Acetate, Acrylic, Polyester, Rayon and Spandex. These are hand or machine-washable and often less expensive to purchase.

Cut and construct the sleeve according to the pattern directions. Run ease control threads across the cap, draw up the threads and baste the sleeve into the armhole and press. If there is too much ease for your fabric (Fig. 1), release the sleeve cap between the notches (Fig. 2) and pin it deeper into the armhole, working the ease gradually out across the top by fitting (Fig. 3). When you do this you are actually making the sleeve cap shallower and ending with a better fit. Test the stitch of your machine on a piece of extra fabric to get the feel of stitching the seams. The supple quality that makes knits such a comfort to wear demands a gentle touch. While a certain amount of stretch is necessary in the seams, when finishing the facings and hems, no stretching should be done—rather, sew loosely so that the hems will not pucker. When pressing seams and hems, always press on the wrong side, gently, and with steam iron, and allow to dry thoroughly before going on with the construction.

ALTERATIONS

Let's consider some of the basic and most common alterations which are best done on the pattern tissue, prior to cutting out the pattern on the fashion fabric.

Don't forget: the size charts are based on body measurements. Patterns always include extra inches for body ease. Up to 4" is allowed at the bust, 1½" at the waist and 3" at the hips. The amount of ease allowed varies with each manufacturer, and, of course, with each style.

Starting at the top, there are some excellent remedies for altering the pat-

Famous Scandinavian Design Scissors

The Scissors that are molded to your hand

- Cushion plastic handles with contour finger grip gives you more comfort and cutting freedom than you've ever experienced before.
- Stainless steel blades
- Cut paper . . . patterns . . . fabrics with incredible ease

Some time ago those inventive Scandinavians introduced an entirely new concept in scissors. It was a scissors with a special cushioned handle anatomically designed to fit your hand. The comfort was incredible. You could cut through the most intricate curve, cut all kinds of materials, cut free hand into all kinds of designs or slip the scissors along the table for an even straight line cut. People who were used to the old fashioned kind of scissors couldn't imagine a pair of scissors working so efficiently and so effortlessly as this new design. Seamstresses and anyone who needed them knew they had discovered a secret. But originally these scissors cost much, much more. In fact, even today you can find this design selling for $8.00 or more in fine stores. But now we've created this same design at a fantastically low price. "Shear Joy"! It's got the familiar orange, cushion soft, plastic handle, the stainless steel blades, weighs only 3 ounces, and they're 8¼" long. If you thought there was nothing glamorous about a pair of scissors then wait until you've tried these. At this new low price you can't afford to be without them. Order now. If they are not shear joy, simply return for full money back.

tern's bustline. When the darts are too high or too low, there is a very easy and quick way to make these changes to fit the individual figure. Take a tape measure and, wearing a bra, measure yourself vertically from the neck-shoulder point to the fullest point of your bust (Fig. 1). Next, measure your bustline around the fullest point of your body. Also measure across from your center front to the fullest point of your bust (Fig. 1). Next, using the measurements taken above, measure the pattern from the neck-shoulder point—where the seamlines converge—down, and from the center front across, and mark an x on the pattern at that point (Fig. 2).

If the bust dart on the pattern is level with and points to the x, you won't have to make any changes. But, if the x is below the dart (Fig. 2) you will have to lower the bustline and therefore the dart.

To lower the dart, draw a line across the pattern above the dart so it (the lines) is perpendicular to the center front line (Fig. 3). Cut along this line. Spread pieces apart evenly until the length of the neck-shoulder point to x line is the same as your measurement. Then tape spread pattern pieces to a papery underlay strip (Fig. 4). You have lowered the bust dart but you have also lengthened the pattern. So, in order to restore the pattern to its original length, lay a fold across the pattern below the dart, equal in depth to the spread-apart above the dart (Fig. 5).

Now that you have selected a pattern and made the necessary corrections, have purchased your fabric and notions and have a machine in good working order, one with which you are familiar, you are ready to embark on a project which can be "just something to wear," or a special dress, suit or coat. The end result will show the amount of care and effort you put into it. A good idea to follow if you are not sure of the pattern construction or of its fit is to make up a quick sample from scrap material, cheap muslin or some worn sheets that you have on hand. This way, you can try on the sample and make any other necessary adjustments. It may take a little time, but it certainly is worth the effort if you would otherwise ruin a good piece of fabric. Always pre-shrink your fabric, at home if it is washable, or at your local dry cleaner's if it is not. Then, the basic rules that exist are to follow the instructions to the letter—they are written by experts in the field—and take the time to baste, try on, stitch and PRESS. The latter is very important, as this is the only way to obtain that professional look.

There are many procedures, usually done by hand, which will give you a finished look found only in courturier sewing. These run the gamut from undersewing facings and finishings seams, to top-stitching, applying the zipper by hand and covering snaps. All can be done during an evening at home, or whenever you have free time. Once you start to do this handwork, and see how beautifully it finishes your dress, you will want to dispense with short cuts. Undersewing facings, using tiny running stitches through the facing and seam allowances—don't let them show through to the outside—close to the seam line prevents the facings from rolling outward, thus giving a firm edge on the outside.

SELECTING A SEWING MACHINE

Do you know your sewing machine? Are you in the market for a new one? If your present machine is the one you will be using for a long time, then get to know it well—what it will and will not do for you—by reading the manual thoroughly and testing the machine on scrap fabric. It's not a little toy to play around with—it's an integral part of your sewing world and can make a great deal of difference in your finished garment. Most of us know how to straight-stitch a seam, but do we know how to adjust the tension, to lengthen and shorten stitches for special areas and to keep the machine clean and properly oiled? Once good care habits are established and you know how to operate your machine properly, then you won't have to fear having something catastrophic happen right in the middle of making that super dress. You won't have to worry about being delayed in finishing your dress or losing interest in it because of the wait to have your machine repaired.

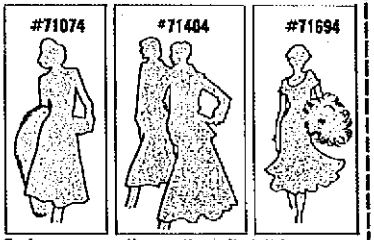

If your machine has only a straight stitch, you will still be able to sew up a satisfactory wardrobe. If you have the added "zigzag" stitch, then you will be able to sew knits well, knowing that your machine will give you a superior stitch for working with these fabrics. If you are considering a new machine, take how you sew into consideration and make your purchase accordingly. If you plan to just make a few simple dresses to add to your daily wardrobe, then you will be happy with a machine that has only the basic stitches. If, however, you plan to try everything that is new—and even try your hand at monogramming, special stitch trimming, etc. —then by all means, look for a more sophisticated machine. Perhaps yours will be the completely automatic machine—one that changes stitches, threads the bobbin and practically thinks for you. There are portable and console styles of all machines. Whichever your choice, most sewing machine centers will let you try out a machine for a few days at home or certainly in the shop itself.

One final note There are many wonderful brochures and catalogs published by leading manufacturers, which offer professional suggestions on varied fashion and home sewing topics, available to you—many for free. Be sure and check the INFORMATION CENTER section of this booklet. ■

New! Doctor's Discovery Solves Painful "NARROW HEEL" Problem

- Foot Specialist creates Heel Form "cradle" to end slipping heels . . . enable most women with narrow heels to wear average-size, inexpensive shoes
- Ends the problem of fitting narrow feet into wider shoes
- Ends problem of shoes which become loose and slip after a few wearings

Find column containing your shoe size and order size at top of column.

SMALL	MEDIUM	LARGE

6½-8AAA	8½-11AAA	11½-13AAA

5-6½B	7-8½B	9-10½B
4½-6C	6½-8C	8½-10C

A foot specialist has found blessed relief for thousands of women who have been plagued by trying to find the proper shoe to fit their feet. Up till now many women had to "fit their feet" to manufacturer's specifications. Because of mass production, today's shoe manufacturers insist upon making "average size shoes," and women with narrow heels are losers. Although their feet can fit the wide front portion of the shoe, their narrow heels keep slipping in and out of the back. Result: blisters, and rough dry heels caused by rubbing, shoes slip off your feet . . . endless types of foot agony simply because you are improperly fitted. All that is ended now with amazingly simple yet effective "Heel Form."

HOW "HEEL FORM" WORKS

Heel Form is a plastic "cup" that is worn directly on your heel. You wear it under your stockings. You'll be amazed at the comfort you suddenly feel. Now your foot fills the shoe exactly as it was intended to do.

No longer do you have to settle for unstylish shoes just because they fit. Now you can wear any high fashion shoes with comfort and ease. Liberate yourself . . . order now. Heel Form, only $3.99, one pair fits all shoes. Consult chart for proper Heel Form size for your shoe size and width.
